RAIDED A COINER'S SHOP

A DRUG CLERK FLAYS SLEUTH AND DISCOVERS COUNTERFEITERS.

When a Woman Gave Him a Spurious Dollar He Followed Her Home and Then Told the Police—She and a Male Companion Arrested.

T. H. Murphy, a drug clerk, played "old Sleuth" last night and as a result of his acumen a woman and man were arrested for counterfeiting and their molds and some of the counterfeit money were confiscated for evidence.

Murphy was visiting a friend who works in a drug store at Fifth street and Broadway last night when a woman about 30 years old entered and asked for some candy. She offered him a dollar in payment. Murphy found the coin was counterfeit and refused to take it. The woman then left the store. Murphy followed her to 511 Locust street and then went to police headquarters and said he believed he had discovered a counterfeiting shop.

FOUND A COUNTERFEITING OUTFIT.

Sergeant Peter McCosgrove and Joseph Enright, a patrolman, went to the house and arrested the woman and a man. Tillie Bullene and George Bullene were the names they gave. They were held for investigation. In their rooms were found four plaster of Paris molds for making dollars, a complete silver plating outfit, two melting pots and several counterfeit dollars. The coins were fairly good imitations except that the milling is irregular. They have a good ring. A trunk in the room was filled with cheap trinkets which, the police say, were bought with counterfeit money.

"The coin probably is made of babbitt metal and silver," James Cummings, desk sergeant at police headquarters, who has had some experience with counetrfeiters, said. "The babbitt metal was put in to give more weight while the ringing sound is given by adding a little ground glass. The work is evidently that of experienced counterfeiters. With plaster of Paris molds it is very hard to make passable coins."

THE SPURIOUS MONEY A YEAR OLD.

Late last night the woman was questioned by Sergeant Ryan. When visitors tried to question her in her cell she cried hysterically but did not answer questions.

"She told me that the bogus money had been made for about a year," the sergeant said. "She said she was not married to the man, but that they had been in partnership in the money making business for about a year."

RIGHT IN A HOTEL LOBBY.

A Young Woman Attacked a Guest at the Baltimore.

Hairpins and other things flew fast for a few minutes in the lobby of the Hotel Baltimore about 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. And nobody knows what it was all about. The spectators all agree, however, that it was a dandy "scrap."

Of course there was a woman—which accounts for the hairpins. She was tall, about 30, and, according to the bellboys, "a peach." She was dressed in black and white and wore a big hat with a vast expanse of flimsy veil. The man was portly. He sat in the center of the lobby reading a newspaper. She came in at the front door, looked around just once, then walked straight to the man behind the paper.

"Aha!" she cried. "Here you are."

She seized the paper from the man's hand and looked down upon him, disdainfully.

"Give me money to pay my board bill. Do it now!" said the woman, raising her voice and showing anger.

"Pay your board bill? Well, I guess not," he said coldly.

"Not?" she screamed, "not!"

Whack! Her chatelaine bag came down on the man's brown derby—and the derby crunched down over the man's ears.

"You won't, won't you?" she screamed again. Biff! Biff! The chatelaine came down. Then she began to use her hands and nails. She clawed him like a cat and he was thrashing his arms and legs in a vain endeavor to escape. The "bellhops," the clerks, the telephone girls and the loungers in the lobby formed an interested circle.

Out of breath, she was forced to stop. The man took advantage of the respite and fled to the elevator.

Of course, not a person in the lobby or any of the hotel employees knew the man or the woman.

'TWAS ONLY A NEAR-BOMB.

A Mysterious Apparatus With a Fuse Turned Out to Be a Joke.

When James Peddeu, the owner of a commission house at 406 Walnut street, closed his shop about 8 o'clock last night he found something inside his doorway that appeared to be an "infernal machine." Peddeu leaned over and looked at it carefully before he dared to pick it up. Yes, there was the fuse, a long one, extending from one end of the cylinder. With great care the commission merchant lifted the strange contrivance. It was heavy. More ground for suspicion. Perhaps it had a time fuse and it was almost ready to explode. Peddeu lifted the cylinder to his ear and listened. He didn't hear a clock ticking. That was some relief. Then Peddeu placed the instrument by the side of the door and went to tell the police.

Along came E. G. Peterson, a cook from El Paso, Tex. He saw the "bomb," became interested and carried it away. He regarded it as a dry battery cell such as are used in motorcycles, but he was not certain. Peterson took the apparatus to a motorcycle shop on Grand avenue and to a motor car repair shop on Fifteenth street. He was informed that it was a dry battery cell, all right, but that it had been tampered with. The fuse had been inserted and other alterations had been made.

So Peterson carried the "bomb" to police headquarters.

"That's no bomb," said M. E. Ryan, police sergeant. "It's a battery and some one is bringing one of those things in here every day or two wanting a reward for finding a bomb."

Then the cylinder was cut open and found to contain no explosive. The fuse was real and was sealed into the end with paraffin.

"I guess that's a bum bomb," remarked Sergeant Ryan and all decided that the whole thing was joke.

STILL NO BUILDING INSPECTOR.

Both of the Mayor's Nominations Rejected Last Night.

Two nominations for superintendent of buildings were rejected by the upper house of the council last night. The first name the mayor sent in was George W. Goodlander, a contractor. The vote was 11 to 2 against him on secret ballot. The mayor then sent in the name of John T. Neil, another contractor, who was rejected 8 to 5. This is the second time Neil has been rejected.

While waiting between communications from the mayor the aldermen became restless.

"Is a motion to adjourn in order?" Alderman John P. Tillhoff asked.

"No, sir," President Gregory replied.

Once the president left the chair to do some quiet caucusing. He called Alderman Baylis Steele to relieve him.

"Move we adjourn Mr. President," Tillhof said.

"Second," Alderman George H. Edwards put in.

Gregory was near the gate leading to the lobby.

"I guess I'll come back," he said and made a run for the chair.

Then word came that the mayor had nothing further for the house.

Friends of George W. Nelson, a contractor, said the house would confirm him if his name were sent in, and that was the reason all other names have been rejected.

Nelson said he was not encouraged over the prospect of the mayor sending his name to the council. There were signs of a deadlock on this office last night.

GOLFERS BUILD A RAILWAY.

A Line Forty Miles Long to Carry Rich Men to the Links.

CHICAGO, May 2.—Millionaire Chicago golfers who belong to the Glenview Country club are building a private railroad forty miles long to enable them to go to the links speedily and comfortably. It will be completed before summer play starts in earnest. The road was chartered under the laws of the state and will extend from Evanston to Elgin.

Already nearly four miles of the line have been completed. One of the features of the part of the line already completed is a viaduct 1,200 feet long over the Chicago & Milwaukee tracks. A girder bridge spans the tracks. To reach the club grounds another viaduct 700 feet long is traversed. The Glenview Golf club is made up of some of the wealtiest business and professional men of Chicago.

BOARDERS WENT HUNGRY

"DRIVEN FROM HOME," A TRAGEDY IN REAL LIFE.

Two Constables Took Possession of the House and Furniture of Mrs. Ella B. Tullar and Told the "Regulars" to Move.

The boarders at Mrs. Ella B. Tullar's fashionable boarding house at 1726 Independence boulevard—the old Marsh homestead—went home for dinner as usual last night. But the menu was unusual. It consisted, chiefly, of court papers, served, without sauce, by Roy Casey, constable of Justice Remley's court. An hour or so later there was an exodus of men and women carrying hat boxes, umbrellas, packages and suitcases. Express wagons drove up to the curbing in front of the house, loaded trunks and valises, received instructions as to delivery and went away.

It was all because the boarding house was in the hands of the law. Two judgments had been rendered. One was issued by Justice Shepard in favor of Mrs. Josephine Adsit for $175, the amount due for furniture sold to the proprietor last November. The other judgment was rendered by Justice Remley in favor of the heirs of the Marsh estate for $150 for rent for the months of March and April. The Remley judgment also called for the possession of the house. Casey went to the house about 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

THE FURNITURE ATTACHED, TOO.

"I've come to take possession of this place," he said as he read the legal document.

"I guess when you read that you'll go on about your business," Mrs. Tullar replied as she pointed to a notice that had been tacked on the wall by William Caulfield, the constable from Justice Shepard's court. The notice was to the effect that all the furniture in the house was in the possession of Caulfield.

"That doesn't interfere with me in the least," Casey said. "I have an order to take possession of the premises. But I'm glad I won't have to move your furniture out." Turning to the two negroes that he had brought with him Casey continued: "I won't need you now."

Two young women boarders who had been to a matinee returned.

"You'll have to move," the cruel Casey said.

A protest at first, but Casey was firm. The negro men soon landed jobs carrying trunks and suitcases.

SO THE BOARDERS LEFT.

Mrs. Tullar called each boarder to the end of the hall and explained the situation. There was nothing to do then except leave. Many of the boarders had friends to whose homes they could go to spend the night. These were called by telephone and notified to prepare the spare bedrooms. Others were less fortunate. They asked and obtained permission to leave their belongings in the house until to-morrow.

After the boarders had all departed and only the attorneys and constables remained, Mrs. Tullar went to the front door.

"This doesn't end it," she said.

Then the door was slammed and Mrs. Tullar disappeared in the darkness. The parlors of the old Marsh homestead were unlighted. There was no music or singing or laughter. A lonely deputy constable guarded the house and a "For Rent" sign hung in the window.

HEARST IS AGAINST FUSION.

Delegates-at-Large Selected by the New York Independents.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Delegates to the number of 450 to the New York state convention of the Independence party met to-night at Carnegie hall and selected four delegates-at-large and their alternates to the national convention of the Independence party to be held in Chicago some time in July. There were no contests and the proceedings of the convention which was not called to order until 9 o'clock to-night, were conducted harmoniously and with much enthusiasm. William Hearst, who was elected permanent chairman of the convention, in a speech declared against any further fusions with either the Democratic or Republican parties. Mr. Hearst was accorded a great ovation by the delegates and hundreds of spectators who filled the boxes and galleries to overflowing.

A meeting of the state committee of the Independence party was held this afternoon, and Henry A. Powell of Kings county was selected temporary chairman of the convention. The convention hall was crowded when Chairman Powell called the delegates to order and delivered a short speech, after which committees on permanent organization and resolutions, and a committee to nominate four delegates-at-large and their alternates were appointed.

AN OMAHA MAN ARRESTED.

The Wife of John C. Read Charged That He Threatened Her.

John C. Read, who says he is the Omaha manager for the Herendeen Manufacturing company, was arrested last night in the Hotel Baltimore and held at police headquarters for investigation. The arrest was made on the complaint of M. R. Huntington, his father-in-law, also of Omaha, who said that Read had made threats against his daughter with a revolver. Read had a revolver.

According to Read's story, he and his wife, Hester, separated in Omaha more than a year ago. Then his wife came here to live. He said that he had made repeated visits here to try to effect a reconciliation, but failed. She has been living at 3118 Washington street and has been employed in the Long building. Last night Mr. Huntington, on the advice of the police, asked Read to meet him at the hotel. When he arrived there a policeman arrested him.

"I didn't intend to harm my wife," he said. "All I desired was a reconciliation. I might have killed myself, but I never thought of harming her."

MAY CLOSE 3,000 SALOONS.

Indiana Brewers Trying to Ward Off the Appointment of Receivers.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 2.—In anticipation of probable suits to be filed in state courts asking the appointment of receivers for five brewery companies on the ground that they have violated their corporate powers, a petition was filed this afternoon in the federal court by the Indianapolis Brewing company, the Terre Haute Brewing company, the Capital City Brewing company, the Home Brewing company and the American Brewing company to enjoin Attorney General Bingham from so doing.

A week ago Thursday the attorney general issued a statement to the effect that he believed every brewery company in the state was violating the law in leasing barrooms, fixtures and other things to saloon keepers, in furnishing money for licenses and in going the saloon keepers' surety through brewery agents. At the time he announced his intention of filing suits against the corporations in the state courts asking that receivers be appointed to take charge of them.

If the petition is refused and if the attorney general is successful in his suits against the individual breweries, more than 3,000 brewery saloons will be put out of business.

AN ARTIST UNDER ARREST.

Albert Herter Denies the Charges Made Against Him.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Albert Herter, the artist and illustrator, was locked up at police headquarters to-night on two charges, one of which was disorderly conduct. W. Welles Bosworth, an architect, gave bail for him.

Herter was arrested in the subway station at Thirty-third street by Detective Cane. The artist appeared to be indignant over his arrest and declared that the detective had no ground for the charges against him.

Mr. Herter has had unusual success with his paintings of ideal heads of women, and they have attracted much attention at exhibitions here and elsewhere. He has been doing much magazine illustrating recently. He studied at the Art Students' league here under Carroll Beckwith and with J. P. Laurens and Cormon in Paris. He was awarded honorable mention at the Paris salon in 1890, when he was 19 years old. He got the Lippincott prize at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in 1897, and the Evans prize from the American Water Color society in 1899. He got a bronze medal at the Paris exposition in 1900. He is a member of the Society or American Artists, the American Water Color society, New York Water Color club and the Salagundi club.

FIRE IN A GIRLS' SCHOOL.

St. Agnes Academy Pupils Fled in Their Night Clothing.

About forty girls, boarders at the St. Agnes academy, Scarritt and Hardesty avenues, were hurried out of the building in their night clothing shortly after midnight this morning when a fire was discovered in the rear of the academy building. The fire started in a wooden veranda and the sisters in charge believe it was of incendiary origin. It was seen first by one of the sisters who gave the alarm. The girls were aroused and marched out of the building in perfect order. When the fire department arrived and it was seen there was no danger the girls returned to the building.

The fire was put out before much damage was done and the loss is small.

FIGHT AN EXPRESS RATE CUT.

A Suit in Injunction Against the Railroad Board of Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 2.—Six express companies doing business in indiana, four of them through their presidents, brought suit in the United States district court this afternoon against the members of the railroad commission of Indiana, to enjoin them from taking steps to reduce express rates in the state 10 to 12 per cent.

Six suits were filed. The plaintiffs were Thomas C. Platt, president of the United States Express company; Johnston Livingston, president of the National Express company; Levi C. Weir, president of Adams Express company, the Wells-Fargo Express company, the Pacific Express company and James C. Fargo, president of the American Express company.

March 30, the railroad commission issued an order to reduce, on an average of from 10 to 12 per cent, the express rates in the state. The new schedule was to have been adopted yesterday.

AN ENGINEER FOUND DRUGGED.

The Police Believe Matthew Gaffney Was Robbed by Women.

A man believed to be Matthew Gaffney of 739 Parallel avenue, Kansas City, Kas., an engineer for the Missouri Pacific railroad, was taken to the emergency hospital last night by a hackman who said he had been placed in a vehicle by women at 507 Bluff street. He was unconscious and in a dangerous condition from a large dose of some drug.

The hackman said he had been called to the house and given $4 and told to take the man to 739 Parallel avenue. The driver could not find the number and took the man to police headquarters here. Papers in his pockets indicated that the man's name is Gaffney and that he is an engineer. His watch was in his pocket, but no money was found. The police believe he was drugged and robbed and officers were sent to arrest the women at 507 Bluff street.

USED HIS REVOLVER ON A BOY.

Alderman Pendergast Saw a Park Policeman's Action and Will Take It Up.

Alderman James Pendergast was a witness and he will take up the matter with the park board.

PROVED A CRITIC CAN SING

A WASHINGTON AUDIENCE HEARD AN UNUSUAL CONTEST.

On a Wager Mrs. Thompson, a Critic, Took Part of Michaela in "Carmen" and Carried It Through One Act.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Mrs. Bernice Thompson, a local musical critic, began but did not finish her undertaking on a friendly wager to sing Michaela in "Carmen" at the National theater here tonight. Miss Sabery d'Orsell, who has sung the part throughout the week, took Mrs. Thompson's place after the first act.

The theater was crowded with Washington music enthusiasts, and interest in the controversy between Manager Milton Aborn of the company and Mrs. Thompson was most keen. The manager had found fault with the criticisms which had been made and asserted that no musical critic could sing any character in any opera he might select. Mrs. Thompson took up the $100 wager he offered.

HER VOICE TOO WEAK.

Mrs. Thompson's execution and her interpretation of the role were good, considering the difficulties which confronted her, but her voice proved to be of not sufficient power to carry the part.

At Mrs. Thompson's entrance, very near the beginning of the first act, her numerous friends in the audience failed to descry any signs of stage fright. The singer displayed a voice clear and sweet, but slender, and at first she was handicapped by the seating of the spectators, fully half of whom entered after she had begun to sing.

Mrs. Thompson wore the traditional costume of Michaela, though the skirt was a trifle longer than that usually used for the role.

Realizing that the singer was facing a trying ordeal, the management had directed that when the chorus was off the stage the girls should refrain from standing in the wings and looking at Mrs. Thompson, who would thus be under criticism from both the front and the back of the house. Mr. Russo, who sang with her, also lent all his efforts to making her task as easy as possible.

HER RIVAL APPLAUDED HER.

Miss d'Orsell, whose part Mrs. Thompson was taking, sat in the left hand stage box and applauded the singer heartily.

Although she relinquished her task after the one act, Mrs. Thompson justified her contention that as a critic she could go on the stage and interpret a role. The part of Michaela is difficult, even for a professional, and it is considered that Mrs. Thompson was bold to undertake it and fortunate to have acquitted herself as well as she did.

KANSAN AT HARVARD A GIRL.

Not in Reality, However, but in a Comic Opera Coming On.

BOSTON, May 2.—George Ralph Bunter of Sabetha, Kas., a sophomore at Harvard, has donned skirts. Every day he is busy practicing stage "stunts" and learning to get inside and carry the lingerie in true feminine fashion. For young Mr. Bunter has taken to himself the arduous role in a comic opera. He shoulders the expressive name of "Kicka," and the burden of an active and showy part with his fellow students in the architecture department. They will present the "Mummy and the Lulu Bird." This is the first stage venture of the architects, which fact emphasizes the agony of the "girls" in adjusting corsets. The rehearsals are going on each day without let-up, as the first and only appearance of the play is scheduled for May 12 at Brattle hall.

"The Lulu Birds," as the amateurs have been dubbed, say they have the best productions of the year. The shows of the old "Hasty Pudding club" and the famed "Pieta" are to be outrivaled, they say. The new piece is a 2-act musical comedy with a prologue. The music is catchy and brand new. The costumes are original and their cut is held secret. Some star dances are featured with plenty of jokes and ludicrous situations.

BACK TO HIS LONELY POST.

Florida Would Have None of Colonel William F. Stewart.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Colonel William F. Stewart of the Coast artillery, who bears the distinction of being the one officer of the army assigned to command an abandoned post until the date of his retirement arrives, has again received new orders direct from the President. As a result of the latest decree Colonel Stewart will continue indefinitely his command of Fort Grant, Ariz., where he was sent last September in lieu of his refusal to retire.

Earnest effort on the part of the friends of Colonel Stewart resulted in a reversal of this order a week or so ago, when it was officially announced that the colonel would be permitted to spend the three or four years of his active official career in an abandoned barracks at St. Augustine, Fla. This order was countermanded today by direction of the President and Colonel Stewart will remain at the Arizona post. The reversal of the order was the result of a vigorous protest on the part of the people of Florida, made known through the senators from that state. No other explanation of the latest command is made.

BULLETS FOR A MOTHER-IN-LAW.

A Missouri Woman Objected to Criticisms of Her Conduct.

MACON, Mo., May 2.—Because her mother-in-law ventured some suggestions anent her conduct, Julia Guy loaded up a double-barrelled shotgun with slugs, went down to the residence of her husband's parents in the south part of town this morning and blazed away through the window into the room where Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Guy were sitting. The slugs knocked things around like a broadside from a battery, but Mr. and Mrs. Guy escaped injury. The woman sharpshooter was arrested and locked up.

GRAY SAYS HE WON'T RUN.

"I'm Out of Politics to Stay," Asserts the Delaware Man.

PITTSBURG, PA., May 2.—Judge Gray of Delaware and Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university, arrived here to-day as guests of the Princeton Club of Western Pennsylvania, whose thirty-fourth annual dinner was held at the Hotel Schenley to-night. When asked if his decision not to be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination was irrevocable, Judge Gray said:

"Emphatically it is. I am out of politics, and I am going to stay out."

TUCKER WEPT ON THE STAND.

Whenever the Standard Was Mentioned Tears Came to the Accused Man.

TOPEKA, May 2.—H. H. Tucker, jr., testified in his own behalf this afternoon in his trial before Judge Amidon, for using the mails to defraud. Mr. Tucker appeared to be an extremely earnest witness, for he wept several times while testifying. The tears came when Tucker told of the failure of his company and when he referred to the Sandard Oil company. Tucker's testimony was frequently interrupted by sobs, and at frequent intervals, he paused to wipe the tears from his eyes.

When he told of his incarceration in jail at Leavenworth for contempt of court he almost broke down completely. Every time the alleged attempt to put the Uncle Sam company out of business was mentioned by either the defendant or his lawyer it was a sign for renewed sobbing from the witness stand.

At the night session Tucker again testified. He said that the first intimation that there would be an attempt to obtain a postoffice fraud order against the Uncle Sam Oil company was through an item in the Oil City Derrick, the Standard's trade paper. This he said was two weeks before the notice of a fraud order was given. Tucker was a talkative witness. After being asked a question he was prone to discuss various topics in addition to the information asked for. The government's attorneys made scarcely an objection, apparently preferring that Tucker should tell the entire story of his operations, thereby giving a wider field for cross-examination.

P. W. Goebel, trustee of the Uncle Sam Oil company, said that he had visited all the properties of the oil company immediately after his appointment.

"According to the inventory," said Mr. Goebel, "the plant showed a profit of about $10,000 from November until March 31. With the pipe lines completed the company should be able to pay a reasonable dividend on the investment."

WIDOW SUES FOR 8 MILLIONS.

A Civil War Veteran's Scrip a Title to Rich Mine.

DULUTH, MINN., May 2.—Suit was filed in the district court to-day by Mary A. Skinner, administratrix of the estate of John R. Skinner, against Wellington R. Burt and the Lake Superior Consolidated Iron Mines company, which involves the title to the Burt mines, estimated to be worh 8 million dollars. The plaintiff asserts that John R. Skinner served in the Union army during the Civil war and, under the soldier's additional land grant, filed on the land where the mine is dug.

The company says that Skinner sold the soldier's scrip given him on account of his honorable discharge and in July, 1875, signed a blank power of attorney to go with the scrip, on account of a ruling of the land department requiring that land be entered on under the soldier's name.

The scrip, the company alleges, passed into the hands of James P. Baker of Faribault, Minn., after several transfers, and Mr. Baker entered on the land in question. Baker was compelled to use Skinner's name in entering on the land, and had the power of attorney filled out.

The plaintiff alleges that the power of attorney was forged, if one existed, and denies that Skinner knew anything of Baker taking possession of the land. The company cites the statute of limitations to show that Burt has had possession of the property undisturbed for fifteen years and that the action would be barred in consequence. The Burt mine is at Hibbing, and is leased by Burt to the Consolidated company.

NO CAR STRIKE IN CLEVELAND.

Mayor Johnson and the Employees Near an Agreement.

CLEVELAND, May 2.—After voting 1,452 to 128 in favor of a strike, the motormen and conductors of the Municipal Traction company, through the international vice president, Mr. Behner, and other representatives, to-night practically reached an agreement with the mayor and traction officials that will eliminate the prospect of a cessation of work.

Two sessions were held to-day between the union's executive committee and the mayor, and a third will shortly be held at which the smoothing out of many disputed points is expected finally to result.

Concessions on the part of both sides to the controversy marked the day's discussion. The men failed to secure outright the increase in pay demanded, but are given an assurance that they may anticipate an advance after the Municipal Traction company shows a sufficient surplus.

These portraits are often completed in a few minutes and are pronounced by art critics the highest style of art. The pictures are guaranteed to be perfect likenesses of the chosen subject.

REPUBLICANS MAKE A SLATE

LEADERS HOLD A CONFERENCE IN ATTORNEY GENERAL HADLEY'S OFFICE

It Is Asserted That the Second Place on the Ticket Is to Go to J. H. Bothwell—No Petitions After June 4.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 2.—The Republican conference here this afternoon was held in the private office of Herbert S. Hadley, attorney general. Those present were Walter S. Dickey, state chairman; Rush Lake, state secretary; J. H. Bothwell of Sedalia, Ralph O. Stauber of St. Joseph, George D. Ragsdale of Springfield, Dr. J. C. Parrish of Vandalia, J. D. Howe, T. J. Aikins, J. L. Babbler and Joe McCoy of St. Louis and Mr. Hadley, John B. Swanger and W. C. Irwin.

At the conclusion of the conference Mr. Dickey, speaking of the conference, said:

"A few of us dropped in here to-day to talk with Mr. Hadley and congratulate him on his recent announcement regarding the gubernatorial race and also to confer with him and other state officers."

Mr. Dickey also said that the desirability of getting out a full ticket in each of the counties of the state was discussed, as was the advisability of holding an early meeting of the state committee. He declined to say what was done regarding a state ticket except that the new primary law and its effects were discussed.

From an outside source comes the statement that the state ticket was selected and that petitions would be sent out all over the state immediately for signatures to secure the placing of the names of the candidates who have not already a sufficient number of petitions on the primary ballot.

These petitions must be on file with the secretary of state on or before June 4.

This is the ticket, it is said, that was agreed upon:

For governor, Herbert S. Hadley.
Lieutenant governor, J. H. Bothwell of Sedalia.
Secretary of state, John E. Swanger.
State auditor, W. W. Wilder.
Treasurer, W. F. Maring.
Attorney general, John Kennish.
For judge of the supreme court, Judge Higbee.
For railroad and warehouse commissioner, A. A. Speer.

Hadley, Swanger, Wilder and Maring already have a sufficient number of petitions on file to place their names upon the ballot.

A SLAYER ONLY 6 YEARS OLD.

Because They Quarreled an Oklahoma Boy Killed a Little Girl of 4.

TULSA, OK., May 2.—As the result of a childish quarrel, "Jimmie" Jones, aged 6, shot and almost instantly killed Mary Gerboth, aged 4 years. The tragedy occurred at Jenks, south of this city. The two were children of tank builders and lived in tents side by side. The quarrel between them took place some time before the shooting. At the time, it is said, the little boy vowed vengeance on the girl. When he appeared at the entrance of the Gerboth tent, shotgun in hand, and exclaimed, "I'm going to shoot Mary," no heed was paid to him. True to his threat, he aimed the gun at the little girl asleep on a bed and fired, death being nearly instantaneous. The Jones boy once shot his sister with a six shooter.

BAILEY WON AGAIN IN TEXAS.

Incomplete Returns Give the Victory to the Senator.

DALLAS, TEX., May 2.—Returns up to midnight make Dallas county in favor of Bailey. The state has gone for Bailey by a large majority.

Bailey carried Galveston, Harris, Bexar, Dewitt, Tarrant, Hill, Ellis and Rockwell counties, all of which anti-Baileyites claimed before election.

Dallas, Grayson and McLennan counties are claimed by both sides. Bailey's managers are still claiming 100,000 majority. Returns from 468 precincts give Bailey 79,860, Johnson 68,866.

Senator Bailey has been fighting to lead his state's delegation to the Democratic national convention. He has been opposed by Cone Johnson, who heads the other delegation. The fight meant vindication or condemnation to Bailey, and for the last two weeks he has been traveling over Texas almost without rest, addressing meetings and campaigning.

For the last two years Bailey has been charged by his opponents with conduct unbecoming his office, and they have sought to break his hold on the people of Texas. The fight was started by State Senator Senter, who sought to defeat Bailey for re-election to the Senate but failed. He then organized anti-Bailey Democratic clubs throughout the state, and it is these organizations that sought to prevent Bailey from heading the Texas delegates at the national convention.

MR. CLEVELAND IS SITTING UP.

The Associated Press Assured That the Patient Is Convalescent.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., May 2.—That ex-President Grover Cleveland is not so dangerously ill as published reports in the last week have declared him to be was the assurance given to a representative of the Associated Press to-night.

The informants, who are in a position to speak authoritatively, said that if the contrary were true at least two persons who are now attending as usual to their business duties elsewhere would be with Mr. Cleveland. The closest friends of the ex-President, it was said, have not been with him at any time during his stay here. It was added that Mr. Cleveland rose from his bed last Thursday and has since sat up during each day.

For the present Mr. Cleveland will remain in seclusion and deny himself to all callers. This intention, it was explained, is in furtherance of a prearranged plan to give the distinguished guest a restful vacation in lieu of his usual Southern trip. A sudden attack of acute indigestion was experienced this week, but Mrs. Cleveland, who gave out a formal statement to-day, insists that her husband is rapidly convalescing and that his condition is no more dangerous now than it was when his illness originated last September.

TAFT, WITH VOTES TO SPARE

ONLY THE BITTEREST OPPONENTS NOW DENY THE INEVITABLE.

Of the 142 Delegates Elected Last Week Only Twelve Were Instructed for Any Except the Ohio Man—Secretary Now Has 369.

Instructed for Taft and not contested	309
Preference expressed for Taft	16
Instructed for Hughes	52
Instructed for Knox	68
Instructed for Cannon	44
Instructed for Fairbanks	32
Instructed for LaFollette	26
Uninstructed	129
Contested	68
Total elected	734
Total in convention	980
Necessary to choice	491

WASHINGTON, May 2.—With only two weeks remaining in which to elect 254 additional delegates to the Republican national convention, Secretary Taft has 100 more instructed votes than the combined opposition. Even the most optimistic among the supporters of the "allies" have become despondent. Save for a few contests in the Southern states the "allies" have made no progress since the favorite son states elected their delegates.

Every indication points to the nomination of Taft on the first ballot with fifty or more votes to spare. It is not unlikely that he will have 450 delegates instructed for him who are not contested. This will lack only forty-one of a majority. Of the 129 uninstructed delegates who are not contested more than twenty are known to favor the Secretary of War. The "allies" have seized upon the flimsiest sort of pretexts to institute contests.

HALF THE CONTESTED DELEGATES TO TAFT.

It is altogether probable that Taft will secure more than half the delegates in the contested column. But even without these contesting delegates he can be nominated.

Two months ago President Roosevelt authorized the prediction that by May 1 the nomination of Taft practically would be conceded, and so it is by the Democrats and all Republicans here who are not bitterly hostile to his candidacy. The "allies" are pouting and angry. They may keep up the fight for some weeks longer in the hope that the unexpected may happen. But in no former Republican campaign where there has been so much as a pretext for a contest has the nomination of the candidate been so clearly foreshadowed at a corresponding date before the national convention.

Among the "allies" there are those who would prefer Roosevelt to Taft. Others would rush to the support of Taft rather than see Roosevelt nominated. The "allies" do not even present a united front. Knox, Cannon and Fairbanks are disgusted with the fiasco Hughes has made of his campaign.

HOW THEY LAID THEIR PLANS.

LaFollette had intended throwing his strength to Hughes if he could have accomplished anything by it. Fairbanks has been willing to go to Cannon and Cannon to Fairbanks. Knox has played a lone hand, making no effort outside Pennsylvania and hoping somebody else would cut the throat of Taft in the belief that he would fall heir to the Taft strength. But it is now apparent that even if the "allies" could throw all their votes to one candidate they could not accomplish his election. The only hope of defeating Taft is to steal Taft's votes, and the contest, if continued, can only contemplate larceny.

Of the 142 delegates elected this week only twelve were instructed for candidates other than the Ohio man. The Pennsylvania state convention instructed for Senator Knox, bringing his strength up to 68, all in Pennsylvania. Governor Hughes carried three more New York districts, making his total strength, all in his own state, fifty-two. Mr. Fairbanks for the first time since Indiana's thirty delegates declared for him, added anything to his list, being the two delegates from the Second Kentucky district.

In other respects the results of the primaries in Kentucky were overwhelmingly for the Secretary of War, indicating that next week every other Kentucky district and the four delegates-at-large will be instructed for him. The state committee this week decided the contest in the First Kentucky district against the contention of the Fairbanks delegates and in favor of the Taft delegation.

STATES THAT TAFT CARRIED.

Among the states that pledged their delegates-at-large to Secretary Taft this week are West Virginia, Colorado, Arkansas, Maryland, North Carolina, Maine and Mississippi, the latter being contested. In Oregon, the home of Senator Bourne, champion of "second elective term," the Republican state committee significantly indorsed the candidacy of Secretary Taft and the state convention will instruct for him. Other accessions to the list of Taft delegates came from the Second Third, Fifth and Seventh Arkansas districts; the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh North Carolina; the Second South Carolina, the Fifth West Virginia, the Second Colorado, the Fifth Alabama, the Second and Fifth Maryland, the Ninth Tennessee, the Eight Mississippi districts, the First Michigan, the First Maine, the Seventh and Eighth New Jersey and the Thirteenth Ohio.

ASKS HUGHES TO WITHDRAW.

Taft Is the Republican Choice, Says the New York Tribune.

NEW YORK, May 2.—The New York Tribune, (Republican), will say to-morrow:

> Since the election of district delegates and district delegates at large to the Republican national convention began the Tribune has kept an accurate account and published once a week an exact tabulation of the men chosen.
>
> It is our conviction, based on the facts which we have published and on probabilities so strong as to be scarcely distinguishable from facts, that the choice of the Republican convention for President of the United States has now been determined and that the nomination of Mr. Taft has been foreordained. If nothing more than what seems to be already in sight should occur between this date and June 16 our belief is that Mr. Taft would enter the convention with a secure majority of the delegates behind him and be nominated on the first ballot—probably by not fewer than 520 votes out of 980.
>
> But the tide is setting so strongly in his favor that the natural process of accretion is likely to increase his majority beyond the dimensions now clearly discernible. And we may add, for the benefit of those who are conjecturing the result of expected contests that control of the committee on credentials by the Taft forces is already absolutely assured.
>
> On the morning after the New York Republican state convention we said in referring to its action that Governor Hughes, as the official candidate of this great state, must be regarded at that stage in the preliminary canvass as an invaluable reserve force on which the national convention could draw under conditions which might be found to exist at Chicago. That stage has passed, and with it, in our opinion, the chance of any nomination except that of Mr. Taft.
>
> The people of New York might generally regret the impossibility of avoiding this conclusion if it necessarily meant even a temporary retirement of Mr. Hughes from public life at the expiration of his term as governor. But that is not its necessary meaning. On the contrary, unless the public misconceives the spirit in which he construes his duty, he will not resist an overwhelming public demand that he continue the work he is now doing until it has been more nearly done.
>
> It is a consideration not directly related to the fulfillment of that duty, but honorably to be taken into account in the sphere of practical politics, that Governor Hughes, as a candidate for re-election, would arouse an enthusiastic interest in the whole Republican campaign in this state which could not fail to be of great advantage to the national ticket. Doubtless the same element of strength would be measurably added if Mr. Hughes at the demand of the national convention should accept the nomination for Vice President, but it is our conviction that he could not be persuaded to regard that as a claim which he was bound to acknowledge at the sacrifice of what he considers to be higher obligations.

TWO THAT DIDN'T INSTRUCT.

No Choice for President in Georgia and Alabama Conventions.

JACKSON, GA., May 2.—The Sixth district Republican convention met here today and elected Alexander Akerman and W. O. Emory, both of Macon, delegates to the national convention at Chicago. The delegates were uninstructed.

Aldrich, of Aldrich, John C. Hollinsworth of Lincoln; alternates, C. W. Smith of Selma, Wallace C. Edler of Clinton. The delegates were uninstructed.

NORTH CAROLINA GIVES TWO MORE.

"THAT'S BAD BUSINESS"—EATON.

The Alderman Opposed the Plan to Abolish the City Electrician's Office.

"That's bad business," Alderman John F. Eaton said in the upper house of the council last night, when an ordinance was read to abolish the office of city electrician.

This was Alderman Eaton's first appearance in the council for five months. He has been in Texas for his health. He is one of the Democratic members holding over from the Beardsley administration. The purpose of the ordinance was frankly stated a few days ago by Alderman W. C. Culbertson, who introduced it. He said the Democrats had the votes to pass it and that the city could get along without an electrician for a few days, leaving the inference that the office would be restored after the present Republican incumbent, who holds over for one year under the ordinance, is removed.

The ordinance was sent to the judiciary committee.

DIAMONDS IN A SCRAP HEAP

HOW A MAN RECOVERED JEWELS FROM AN ABANDONED FRAME.

A Flood Damaged Mirror Had Been the Hiding Place for Twenty-Three Years—Findlay's Art Store the Scene of a Frantic Search.

This is a story of $1,000 worth of diamonds, which after lying hidden for twenty-three years in a mirror frame were lost and found again.

Just about a month ago a young woman from Armourdale went to W. C. Findlay's art store in Walnut streeet.

"I have a very old mirror at home and I want it reframed," she said. "The glass is good but since the flood in 1903, when the mirror was washed away, the frame has been discolered and caked with mud. It has remained in a dark corner and we have not used it since then."

Mr. Findlay sent a man to the little home on South Mill street and the old mirror was brought from the attic. The frame of gilt and stucco was torn off and thrown on a pile of rubbish, doomed to the furnace in the basement of the art shop. Then the mirror was inclosed in a new frame and last Saturday was sent back to the Armourdale home.

HE DEMANDED THE FRAME.

Monday afternoon Mr. Findlay was sitting in the front of the store when a man came in. His hair was gray and ragged and his shoulders stooped. His face was emaciated and white and he wore a threadbare suit of once-black clothes.

"The frame, I want that mirror frame!" the man exclaimed, stopping at Mr. Findlay's desk and fingering nervously at some papers on the desk.

Questioning drew from the man that it was his daughter who had sent the old flood-damaged mirror to be reframed.

"Why that frame was thrown on the rubbish heap long ago," Mr. Findlay said. But the man was insistent.

"It must be found," he said.

Mr. Findlay, to satisfy him, descended to the basement and a search for the old frame began.

"I found the old relic after a long search," Mr. Findlay said yesterday. "The old man stood over me rubbing his hands while I worked. When I caught sight of the frame I left a porter to dig it out and went back to my office.

"It must have been an hour after that I started to close the store. I had forgotten about the old man. Just before leaving the store I went down to the basement to see if the back door was closed. Back in the corner of the cellar I found the old man crouched down near a narrow window. He had the old frame all apart and was looking at something in the palm of his hand—and holding it near the light.

HE'D FOUND THE DIAMONDS.

"'I've got 'em,' he said as I came around a pillar and confronted him suddenly. As he said it he put his hand in his pocket nervously, then began to gather up the pieces of the frame.

"'Got what?'

"'The diamonds.'

"Then he told be that twenty-three years ago he had hidden two diamonds in a crevice in the corner of the old mirror.

"'I thought they might come handy some day,' the old man said, 'and I used to look at intervals to see if they were all right. I thought the mirror safe in the attic until to-day when I learned that my daughter had had a new frame put on. I never had such a fright.'

"The old man wouldn't show me the diamonds but when we got up stairs W. F. Gurney, a former jeweler, now a member of my company, persuaded him to show them.

"They were finely cut diamonds and each one was worth easily about $500. The old man wouldn't let me examine them closely and went away with them clutched in his hand."

JEWELRY IN AN OLD TIN CAN.

The Find of a Boy, 10 Years Old, While Digging for Fish Worms.

A small boy went to the Walnut street police station last night. In his right hand he carried an old rusty tomato can. Lieutenant Joseph Heydon was busy and did not notice the boy, whose head scarcely reached the top of the desk.

"Say Mister," he said. "I guess I got something I think you want."

Heydon looked at the boy and the can and smiled. He likes children.

"I guess if you don't want it I don't either," he replied. "But let's see it."

The boy walked around behind the desk. Heydon took the can and turned it bottom upwards. Four gold watches, a locket, a cross, a necklace and one silver cuff link rolled out on the desk.

"Son, I beg your pardon. I do not want this," the lieutenant said.

"Where did you get it?"

"Was digging for fishing worms down at Nineteenth and McGee streets," the boy replied. "Had a dandy place picked out to dig. Right 'long side of some old ties near the northwest corner of Nineteenth and McGee streets. Just got started to dig when I struck the old can. I looked into it and found that stuff. It was about half past 7 when I found it. I took it home and waited till my stepfather came home. He told me to bring it up here."

The boy said his name was John E. Limings and that he was 10 years old. He lives with his stepfather, Charles Bassett, at 317 East Nineteenth street.

TO TRY AN OLATHE MURDER CASE

A Charge Against H. E. Demming That He Killed a Rival Saloon Keeper.

H. E. Demming, a saloon keeper of this city, will be tried in Olathe, Kas., this week on the charge of killing Henry Chesser, a rival saloon keeper, in Merriam, Kas., last Christmas day. The men quarreled on an interurban car running between this city and Merriam. A fight followed when the men left the car at Merriam and Chesser was shot. He died the following day. The May term of the district court of Johnson county will open to-morrow. The trial is first on the docket.

BIG CROWDS GREET FOLK.

The Governor Spoke in Several Towns Yesterday.

NEVADA, MO., May 2.—Governor Folk arrived here this afternoon on a freight train from Lamar. He spoke to a crowded house to-night. His train stopped for a few minutes at Irving where the governor shook hands with a crowd at the depot. At Sheldon there were a thousand or more persons gathered at the station. The train was stopped, a speaker's stand hastily improvised and Governor Folk talked for a half hour. He was frequently applauded and was so surrounded by those who wished to shake hands that it was with difficulty that he reached his train.

Another stop was made at Milo and a number of the citizens were there to shake hands. At Nevada the governor was met at the train by Mayor Ingram, Chairman Nunn of the Vernon county committee and many other Democrats.

The auditorium of the new courthouse was packed with people early in the evening and the public square was thronged with others who could not find standing room.

Governor Folk said this evening:

"The cordial receptions accorded me everywhere have been most gratifying. The great outpouring of the people at each meeting demonstrates that the sentiment of four years ago has not subsided but on the contrary has grown twice as strong."

The governor leaves to-night for Jefferson City.

FOR BRYAN IN BUTLER COUNTY.

BUTLER, MO., May 2.—The Bates county Democratic convention met at the courthouse here to-day and was largely attended. Chairman P. M. The delegates were instructed to vote for John W. Jamison of Rich Hill as a member of the state central committee.

PHELPS COUNTY IS FOR STONE.

Delegations to Convention Were Elected at Yesterday's Primaries.

ROLLA, MO., May 2.—Mass conventions were held in Phelps county to-day to elect delegates to the county Democratic convention, which meets in Rolla next Saturday to elect delegates to the state convention in Jefferson City. Rolla township elected by acclamation to-day the following delegates: B. H. Rucker, E. W. Walker, C. J. Kniston, W. A. Hawkins, W. E. Weber, W. R. Ellis, J. J. Crites, J. B. Sally, D. Donahoe, J. A. Watson, I. L. Burkett, W. L. Love and Charles L. Woods.

This is regarded as a pronounced Stone delegation. Reports from other townships indicate that the county has gone overwhelmingly for Stone delegations.

NO INDORSEMENT IN MONTGOMERY.

Neither Stone Nor Folk Mentioned in the Resolutions.

MONTGOMERY, MO., May 2.—To prevent discord the Democratic convention at the courthouse here this afternoon adjourned suddenly without passing resolutions mentioning either Stone or Folk. Clyde Ball, brother of the candidate for governor, was elected chairman of the nineteen delegates who ware elected to the county convention to be held here Monday. It is understood that all of the nineteen delegates are for Ball for governor, this being the home of his brother and also his mother.

The convention would not listen to any resolution indorsing either Stone, Folk of any other candidate for state office.

No Resolutions in Mexico.

MEXICO, MO., May 2—At a mass meeting of the Democrats of this township (Salt River) held here this afternoon Colonel Green Clay, Thomas Crum and John Wakefield were chosen as delegates to the state convention in Jefferson City. No resolutions were adopted.

ATHLETICS IN THE ARMORY.

The First of the Third Regiment's Series of Monthly Carnivals.

The Third regiment held an athletic carnival last night at the armory, Fourteenth street and Michigan avenue. It was the first of what is expected to become a series of monthly events. The programme, arranged by Lieutenant D. D. Dutton, included boxing and wrestling bouts in which members of the regiment and of the Kansas City Athletic club took part, a talk on athletics by Martin Delaney and musical numbers by the Central High school Glee club.

A wrestling bout between Fred Gump and Joseph Haydon of the Kansas City Athletic club brought the crowd to its feet more than once, but the limit was fifteen minutes and there was no fall. Other events were a 3-round boxing bout between Charles Hayward of Company C and Dave Lower of Company G, a similar contest between two "unknowns," a recitation by James Flynn, and a "War of the Roses" between Companies M and E.

Sanatile the Modern Wall Tile

A beautiful white tile wall in the kitchen and bathroom is a dream of every housewife, heretofore it remained a dream, for tile is too expensive for the average building. SANATILE fills the long felt want, as it is inexpensive and everlasting. SANATILE is patterned after regular tile, it is waterproof, dirt and grease proof. When soiled it can be washed with soap and water as easy as a china dish. The first expense is the last with a SANATILE covered wall or wainscot. It does not show cracks in new walls when the building settles. It does not crack, peel or craze like the regular clay tile.

We guarantee every foot of SANATILE put up by us for five years. It will last as long as the building.

Why experiment with cements and enamel wainscots, which are expensive and do not last, when you can have a SANATILE wainscot put up at the same price? Cements crack and peel, enamels turn yellow and become soiled, making it necessary to recover them.

Call at our show rooms at 400 East Ninth street, and let us show you SANATILE on the walls, or call up Home phone 3688 and our Salesman will call on you with a complete line of samples.

THE Test of Good Dentistry

Is not what the dentist tells you—or what your eyes see—or even the price of it—but it's the fit, the quality and the durability of the work. These are the true tests. Many a set of teeth, gold crown or piece of bridge work looks perfect to the eye, but the wearing of it brings out the imperfections. Put any kind of a test you like to Dr. Barnett's Dentistry. It will stand it.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S DREAM WAS FOR A WATER HIGHWAY FROM THE GREAT LAKES TO THE SEA.

THE FATHER OF THIS COUNTRY WAS THE FIRST PROMOTER OF A GIGANTIC INLAND NAVIGATION PROJECT

THE Lakes-to-Gulf project and the public interest in new and new-old plans for the improvement of inland navigation may recall to the memory of men who know their America that the United States in its youth was profoundly stirred by a vast waterway scheme. This was before the age of steam, when commerce was slowly water-borne or laboriously carried in wagons or in packs.

The early-day project contemplated a union of the Atlantic and the Great Lakes by means of the Potomac river, a short portage over the Allegheny mountains, one of the streams flowing into the Ohio river from the western slope of the mountains, a stream flowing southward into the Ohio, and a canal thence to connect one of the rivers flowing northward into Lake Erie.

A RUINED LOCK.

The pioneer advocate of this idea probably was, and the first promoter of the plan certainly was, George Washington. It engaged his attention before the Revolution, claimed a large share of his time between the surrender of his military commission at Annapolis and his induction as President at New York, and remained with him a hobby until his death.

Washington's purposes in the furtherance of this project were manifold. In a personal sense he wished confirmed his conviction concerning the practicability of the plan. He was anxious that his name should be associated with such a stupendous work of national improvement. He was the owner of large tracts of land in the Ohio, Shenandoah and Potomac valleys, which would be made more valuable. He believed that there was money to be made out of the scheme, but he wanted none of the cash dividends. In a larger than personal sense he wanted the United States to control the trade of the continent east of the Mississippi river, rather than that England and Spain should have it. He wanted the people of the East to establish and maintain intercourse with the settlers in the Western territory, out of which the powerful states of the Middle West have grown. Again, he wanted that Virginia should have this trade rather than that New York or Pennsylvania should have it. He desired that the trade of the Ohio country and the Lake region should pass to the sea through the Potomac valley rather than through the St. Lawrence, the Mississippi, the Hudson or the Susquehanna valley. The big project was as much, if not more, political than commercial.

THE SCHEME PARTLY REALIZED.

Part of this far-reaching enterprise was realized. The Potomac river was opened to navigation from tidewater to Cumberland. This link in the Lake-to-Sea system was an immense work for that period, and relics of it are familiar to travelers along the upper Potomac river. Among these relics are two short canals with ruinous locks at Little Falls and at Great Falls, the last named place being fifteen miles west of Washington city, and near that point on the river whence Washington draws its water supply.

In resurrecting data from the correspondence of Washington, Hening's Virginia Statutes, the Acts of the Maryland Assembly and from Maryland and Virginia Gazettes, it is impossible not to get a clear light on the humanity and naturalness of Washington. The letters of Washington tell more about himself than is to be learned from some well written biographies.

One of these is to Thomas Jefferson. This letter, independent of its illumination of the canal plan, lights up some of the very human angles of the character of George Washington. He admits that he is not so disinterested as Jefferson and that his lands in the Ohio country would be enhanced in value by a realization of the project.

WHEN THE GREAT MAN DISSEMBLED.

One of the few very long letters of Washington's was written on this canal plan to Governor Benjamin Harrison of Virginia. This letter furnished Washington Irving with nearly all of his material for his chapter on Washington's interest in internal improvements. It is not written in the same spirit of candor and frankness as that to Jefferson. Washington probably divined that Harrison would, or intended that he should, make some public use of it. It contains a little flattery for the governor, reveals Washington's study of the geographic works of the period, refers to the enterprise of the people of New York and Pennsylvania and complains of the small jealousies in his own state and of Virginians' lack of enterprise.

Replying to this letter on November 13, 1784, Governor Harrison said: "The letter is so much more explicit than I could be, that I took the liberty of laying it before the Assembly, who appear so impressed with the utility of the measure, that I dare say they will order the survey you propose immediately, and will at their next sitting proceed to carry the plan into execution." Harrison was a good prophet, for in 1784 the assemblies of Virginia and Maryland passed acts authorizing the organization of the Potomac River Improvement company. The acts were very long for that period, the legislators requiring 6,000 words to define the powers and purposes of the company. The Maryland act authorized the company to open subscription books at Annapolis, at Georgetown and at Frederick. The Virginia act authorized the reception of subscriptions at Richmond, Alexandria and at Winchester. All through the Maryland act the river Potomac is spelled "Patowmack," and throughout the Virginia act the spelling is "Potowmack." The capital of the company was fixed at ¼ million dollars, divided into 500 shares. The charter was to be forfeited if work did not begin within one year from the date of organization, or if the work were not completed between Cumberland and Great Falls in three years and between Cumberland and tidewater in ten years.

At the time of the passage of this act, the Virginia assembly also passed an act incorporating the James River Improvement company. The Virginia assembly directed the state treasurer to subscribe to 100 shares of the stock of the James River company and to fifty shares of that of the Potomac company and to enter these shares in the name of George Washington. The offer and the qualified reception of this gift constitute one of the important incidents in Washington's career. Writing to Governor Harrison, January 22, 1785, Washington said:

> I wish that every individual may hear that it was a favorite plan of mine, and may know also that I had no other motive for promoting it than the advantage of which I conceived it would be productive to the Union, and to this state in particular.
>
> How would this matter be viewed then, by the eye of the world, and what would be the opinion of it, when it comes to be related that George Washington received $20,000 of the public money as an interest therein? Would not this in the estimation of it deprive me of the principal thing which is laudable in my conduct? Would it not in some respects be considered in the same light as a pension?

Washington, in a letter to Jefferson dated Mount Vernon, September 26, 1785, said:

> I am very happy to find that your sentiments respecting the interests the assembly was pleased to give me in the navigation of the Potomac and James rivers coincide with my own. I never for a moment entertained an idea of accepting it. The difficulty with which my mind labored was how to refuse it without giving offense. Ultimately I have in contemplation the application of the profits arising from the tolls to some public use. In this, if I knew how, I would meet the wishes of the assembly; but if I am not able to come at these, my own inclination leads me to apply them to the establishment of two charity schools, one on each river, for the education and support of poor children, especially descendants of those who have fallen in defense of their country.

A PORTION OF THE ABANDONED CANAL NEAR THE RIVER.

ACCEPTED THE GIFT OF STOCK.

On October 29, 1785, Washington informed the assembly that he would accept the stock provided he should be permitted "to turn the destination of the fund vested in me, from my private emolument, to objects of a public nature."

The faith of Washington in the Lake-to-Sea plan abided with him till his death. In December, 1796, he wrote to Sir John Sinclair that he "did not hesitate to pronounce that the lands on the waters of the Potomac will in a few years be in greater demand and in higher estimation than in any other part of the United States." In his will he recited that:

> I give and bequeath, in perpetuity, the fifty shares which I hold in the Potomac company, towards the endowment of a university to be established within the limits of the District of Columbia, under the auspices of the general government, in that government should incline to extend a fostering hand towards it; and, until such seminary is established and the funds arising on those shares should be required for its support, my further will and desire is that the profit accruing therefrom shall, whenever the dividends are made, be laid out in purchasing stock in the Bank of Columbia, or some other bank at the discretion of my executors, or by the Treasurer of the United States for the time being, under direction of Congress, provided that honorable body should patronize the measure; and the dividends proceeding from the purchase of such stock is to be vested in more stock, and so on, until a sum adequate to the accomplishment of the objects aimed at shall have been accumulated; of which I have not the smallest doubt before many years pass away, even if no aid or encouragement is given by legislative authority, or from any other source.

The stock of the Potomac company declined in value till it came to be worth nothing. The reason for the ultimate failure of the venture was that during the summer there were periods of low water that barred the passage even of light-draught boats, and there were periods of high water when navigation of the rocky courses of the river was too hazardous. In winter the river and the canals built around the impassable obstructions were closed by ice. The Potomac company, however, continued to do business till 1823. The idea of an all-canal route from the Allegheny mountains to tidewater had for several years been exploited and in 1823 the charter of the Potomac company was surrendered to Chesapeake & Ohio Canal company, which remains one of the important canals of the country.

The accompanying views were recently taken at and near the Great Falls of the Potomac and show the character of the river at that point and the remains of the canal and locks constructed there by the Potomac company to enable boats to get around the falls.

At Great Falls the Potomac company built approximately one mile of canal, walled with rock, twenty-five feet wide at the top and twenty at the bottom. There were five sets of locks, each 100 feet long and from ten to fourteen feet wide. The lift of these locks varied from ten to eighteen feet and overcame the difference in level above the falls and below the rapids of seventy-five feet.

Banana Pudding With Sauce.

From the Boston Transcript.

Soak one cup stale cake crumbs in two cups hot milk one-half hour, and rub through a sieve; then add one-half cup banana pulp, one-fourth cup sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one tablespoon brandy, one teaspoon vanilla and the yolks of three eggs slightly beaten. Turn into buttered molds, set molds in pan of hot water and bake until firm. Remove from oven, let stand five minutes, turn out and serve with this sauce.

Bring to the boiling point one-half cup each of milk and cream. Pour slowly onto the beaten yolks of two eggs and two tablespoons sugar. Cook over hot water five minutes, add one-half teaspoon vanilla, two tablespoons sherry, and pour over the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs.

Uniformly Successful Results Of Our New System Is the Talk of Kansas City

Now that we are giving so low rates for our services no person requiring medical aid has any excuse for suffering another day.

Surgery and Suffering are not found necessary very often in our practice, the largest in Kansas City.

Thousands suffer untold misery and pain day after day, continuing their daily duties, enduring their suffering in silence, because they do not know there is any help for them and believe their daily misery is their portion, and there is nothing left for them but to suffer.

Or, if you have received any knowledge in the matter from experience from others they are frightened nearly to death at the thought of a surgical operation which only produces symptoms worse than the misery and pain.

There is no question about it. The surgeon's knife is being used altogether too much, and physicians and surgeons are too hasty in advising and insisting upon operations in nearly every case as the only means of relief. The truth of the matter is to-day that the mutilation method of the surgeon's knife has been proven so decidedly wrong and the results so sorrowfully bad that it cannot be done without receiving criticism from the best men in the medical profession, except in cases that have been neglected or allowed to remain too long without proper treatment.

The Friends It Has Made

The people who have enjoyed the immense benefits of the parks and boulevards of Kansas City are the friends of The Star. The people who have always successfully looked to it to aid with all its energies every movement for the betterment of Kansas City constitute that immense and loyal constituency of which The Star may so pardonably boast.

To have served in such a capacity, to have the gratitude and confidence of people whose daily comforts, conveniences and enjoyments it has fostered; to be made prosperous in the labor of making Kansas City a good place for its readers to live in; to know from the unbounded support that has been given to it that it has never faltered from its own ideal of incessant efforts on behalf of Kansas City and its people—this is the finest asset that The Star's long activity in Kansas City has gained for it.

And the grateful recognition of this boon, which it shares with its multitude of friends in Kansas City, is never so happily impressed upon it as when it finds that it is the chief and most hated enemy of the greedy traducers whose frauds and tyrannies it has blocked.

YUKON GOLD

We would like to have you read this, regarding

A MEXICAN SILVER MINE

The United States & Mexican Trust Co.

Of Kansas City, Missouri, and Mexico City, Mexico,

Realized two years ago that the new territory now being opened in Mexico, by the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway, bids fair to rival the great Transvaal of South Africa as a mineral territory with wonderful deposits of gold, silver and copper.

The old mining district of Urique (seven miles from the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway) has produced $300,000,000 of silver: the Batopilas district (35 miles from the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway) has produced $350,000,000 of silver; the Palmarejo district (30 miles from the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway) has produced $300,000,000 of silver, and the Santa Eulalia district (18 miles from the Kansas City Mexico & Orient Railway) has produced $900,000,000 of silver, which demonstrates what this great territory is capable of producing.

The Shower of Gold Mine, with its present output of $250,000 per month; the Rio Plata Mine, a property recently developed and which last month shipped one car of concentrates worth $50,000 over the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway, shows what this territory is now doing. These facts together with other recent discoveries, caused the United States & Mexican Trust Company to open a Mining Department to explore and develop good mining ventures in the territory served by this great new transcontinental railway. This department is under the direction of one of the most able and conservative mining men in the United States, Mr. James W. Malcolmson.

The first mine which is being offered to the public by the Mining Department of the Trust Company is the REPUBLICA.

The history and development of this mine reads like a romance. No mine known in the United States or Mexico has had such a wonderful history, or has shown such great values for the small amount of work done. The property was found by a poor Mexican only three years ago, and was sold by him for $30,000 silver to some merchants living in Chihuahua; they in turn sold it to a syndicate for $275,000 U. S. currency, and this syndicate sold it to the Republica Mining Company.

The development of this property in the hands of the present owners has been remarkable. From the grass roots down, the mine has been in rich ore – the greater the depth the richer the ore.

At grass roots the ore ran	85 ounces silver per ton
At 91 feet the ore ran	99 ounces silver per ton
At 165 feet the ore ran	115 ounces silver per ton
At 300 feet the ore ran	175 ounces silver per ton

The vein at the 300 foot level, the present bottom of the mine, is richer than in any of the upper workings. It is 11 feet wide and has been developed to a length of 107 feet, the ore assaying on an average 175 ounces silver per ton. It is expected that the 400-foot level, which will be reached in a few days, will show richer ore than anywhere above.

THE MILL—The management, wishing to make no mistake, built to start with a ten-stamp mill, one part of which has been finished for 120 days, and the output of concentrates has been twice the estimated value. The output of concentrates per month is as follows:

First month	26 tons	Third month	41 tons
Second month	39 tons	Fourth month	44 tons

The balance of the mill is expected to be in operation April 1st, when the net profits, with the small mill, will be about $1,000 U. S. currency per day. Steps are being taken to double the capacity of the mill at once, when the net profit should be $2,000 per day, or 3 per cent per month on the capital stock. As fast as the extensions of the mill are finished and working, further additions will be made, until the mill has 40 to 50 stamps. The output from the small mill in four months has been worth over $100,000 U. S. currency.

The capital of the Republica Mining Company is Authorized	$2,500,000

Issued	$2,000,000

The shares are of the value of $5.00 each. The stock is in a five-year voting trust. The following are the Voting Trustees:

A. E. STILWELL, President United States and Mexican Trust Co., Kansas City, Mo.
E. DICKINSON, First Vice President Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Ry., Kansas City, Mo.
J. J. MUNDY, President of La Republica Mining Co., El Paso, Texas.
M. B. PARKER, General Manager La Republica Mining Co., El Paso, Texas.
W. E. PORTER, El Paso, Texas.
JAMES W. MALCOLMSON, Consulting Engineer, Kansas City, Mo.

This assures the same progressive management for five years.

The outstanding stock, with the exception of 28,000 shares, has been sold during this year by private sale. The Trust company has the above number of shares unsold ($5.00 par value), which it offers for sale until April 5th at $4.00 per share. This is the only time this advertisement will appear. The great showing made by this mine makes advertising unnecessary, but if in this section of the United States there are any people who wish to invest in a good property with a great future, we would rather have them as stockholders than anyone else.

This is not a speculation; the value of the ore already blocked out more than equals the capital stock. The mine is on a dividend paying basis. The first, paid last month, was at the rate of 6 per cent per annum on par—$5.00. There is no reason why the mine cannot pay from one-half of one per cent per month to two per cent per month and at the same time have sufficient surplus to enlarge the mill and provide a good reserve fund.

This is a plain true statement. The conditions of the property have not been over-stated, but under-stated.

RULES FOR PRIMARY VOTING

PARTY LINES MUST BE ADHERED TO IN KANSAS.

A Democrat Who Is Dissatisfied Cannot Vote for a Candidate on Another Ticket—How an Independent May Be Nominated.

TOPEKA, May 2.—Fred S. Jackson, attorney general, in an opinion issued to-day tells how independent candidates may be nominated under the primary law. There are many persons who are not clearly decided just how this could be accomplished. There are really two ways, one by the use of the blank ballot, and the other by circulating petitions as heretofore under the Australian ballot law.

The advantage of the blank ticket plan is that an aggregation of independent voters may go to the polls on the primary election day and put out an entire independent ticket by using the blank tickets. The persons receiving the highest number of votes on such blank ticket will become independent candidates for the offices for which they are nominated, and their names will be printed in the independent column of the Australian ballot at the general election.

The primary law especially saves the right of citizens to secure places on the general election ballot at the November election by circulating petitions for independent nominations as heretofore under the general statutes. Such persons may entirely ignore the primary election.

The primary law provides for the organization of other political parties, either state or local, and when such parties are organized in compliance with the law, their rights will be the same as those of the Republican, Democratic, Socialist and Prohibitionist, which comprise the great political parties of the state.

Some interested person has presented the following question to Mr. Jackson:

Could a Democrat who was dissatisfied with the candidates for the nomination for a certain office in his own party, vote for a person who is running for the nomination for the same office on the Republican party?

To this the attorney general replied:

He cannot. It is no business of the Democrats who is nominated by the Republicans, and it is no business of the Republicans who is nominated by the Democrats, and so the primary law provides that where a person writes the name on his ticket of a person whose name is printed as a candidate on another party ticket, such person thereby destroys his ballot and it shall not be counted.

It is true that it may happen that a person might be nominated on two tickets by having his name written in as a candidate on two different party tickets. In such case, it would be his duty to choose upon which ticket he would run, and if he did not, the state canvassing board, or the county clerk, would have to make a choice for him.

TO JOIN FEDERAL BUREAUS.

One Board May Be Given Charge of Government Statistical Work.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—President Roosevelt and Secretary Straus of the Department of Commerce and Labor have approved the report of the committee appointed by Secretary Straus to inquire into the statistical work of the Department of Commerce and Labor. It is purposed that each of the executive departments of the government and the interstate commerce commission appoint a statistical expert, the several appointees to constitute an interdepartmental statistical committee. This committee will have general charge of all the statistical work of the government.

The approval of the committee's report carries with it an arrangement for the consolidation of the bureau of manufacturers, of the census office and the bureau of statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor into one bureau, which shall be called the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

Within this bureau a separate division of tariffs is to be formed. It will be necessary, in order to carry out fully the recommendations made by the committee, that Congress shall take action, but it is expected that, as the recommendation is in the line of economical administration and co-ordination of effort in the department, there will be no difficulty in securing the necessary legislation.

TO MAKE THE DESERT BLOOM.

The Dream of Capitalists for Electrifying the Arkansas Valley.

The Arkansas valley from Canyon City, Col., to Dodge City, Kas., is to be electrified. At least that is the project some enterprising capitalists have undertaken. Primarily an electric road is to be built between the Colorado town and Dodge City, a distance of 350 miles. Electric power is to be generated in the coal fields of Colorado and used for a thousand purposes before it reaches the end of its journey in Dodge City. It will be available for everything for which steam is now used; to run mills and shops of all kinds; to light cities and towns and do all the other things for which electricity is now available. Listen to the prospectus:

"One of the most beneficent uses for which this power will be harnessed will be to pump water from the Arkansas river for irrigation of the semi-arid land, of which it is computed that 300,000 acres can be brought under tillage, which will have a primary value of 7½ million dollars for agricultural purposes."

Mrs. McCarthy was only 23 years old and belonged to a widely known family in Cincinnati. She had been a sufferer from insomnia for several years.

ABOUT HALF A CROP OF FRUIT.

A Missouri Fruit Authority Has Made a Close Examination.

SEDALIA, MO., May 2.—T. L. Absher, one of Central Missouri's extensive fruit growers, made a thorough examination of his orchards to-day and reported the crop condition to be as follows: Strawberries are not injured; cherries and plums are nearly all killed; late cherries will yield one-half of a crop; peaches will amount to from one-third to one-half of a crop. There will be a large apple crop.

Mr. Absher is an authority on fruit.

WAS A SCHOOLHOUSE ROMANCE

Young People Who Met in an Idaho Forest Marry in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, May 2.—The marriage at the Hotel Jefferson this evening of Miss Francis E. Marshall of Grant City, Mo., and Ford Marshall Jack of Mount Carroll, Ill., ended a romance which began in a 1-room log schoolhouse in the mountains of Idaho two years ago.

Mr. Jack is the grandson of Duncan MacKay, once a millionaire banker and landowner of Carroll, who aided in founding the Park Presbyterian college of Kansas City, from which institution Mrs. Jack was graduated shortly before she engaged in teaching at Teton Basin, Ido., in the same schoolhouse in which Mr. Jack had taught.

Mr. Jack is a former student of the University of Chicago and golf writer on the Chicago Daily News. He went to Teton Basin, Ido., two years ago, where he taught school and afterward was appointed a forest ranger for the government in the forest preserves of Idaho.

His duties as forest ranger required that Mr. Jack spend most of his time on horseback, and, one day while in the vicinity of Teton Basin, he rode over to the old schoolhouse to visit his former students. He found Miss Marshall in charge and mutual friendship began, which made it convenient for Jack to ride past this schoolhouse quite often.

Miss Marshall was a good horsewoman, and, on more than one occasion, she accompanied the forest ranger on his trips of inspection through the lumber camps of that region. The romantic surroundings of the great Western mountains brought on an engagement and Jack left Idaho last spring for his home in Carroll, Ill. Miss Marshall returned to her home at Grant City a few months ago. Yesterday she came to St. Louis and the marriage followed.

When the two met at the Hotel Jefferson yesterday afternoon it was the first meeting since Mr. Jack had left Idaho, nearly a year ago.

The marriage was performed by the Rev. Samuel Huey of the Grand Avenue United Presbyterian church. The mother of the bride is Mrs. Margaret Marshall of Grant City, and Mr. Jack's father resides at Mount Carroll, Ill. The couple will visit Chicago before returning to Mount Carroll to live.

HIGH SCHOOL DAY AT COLUMBIA.

The University of Missouri Town Crowded by Prospective Students.

COLUMBIA, MO., May 2.—This is high school day at the University of Missouri. Three thousand students and teachers arrived on the trains last night, and to-day the capacity of the hotels were so much taxed that a number of the visitors were entertained at the fraternity and sorority houses of the town. In some cases a dozen were cared for in an ordinary boarding house.

The Missouri Society of Teachers of English and Modern Languages held its semi-annual meeting here to-day. Officers as follows were elected:

President, E. R. Barrett, Kirksville Normal; secretary, Dr. W. G. Beck, Missouri university. Members of executive council: Miss Eunice C. Cousley, Sedalia, vice president of Romance division; vice president German section, Prof. B. F. Hoffman, state university; secretary, J. W. Heyd, Kirksville Normal; English division vice president, E. C. Cousley, Sedalia.

Prof. B. H. Almstedt read a paper on pronounciation of German. Prof. Heyd read a paper on inflection in German. Prof. Vaeth told of the American student at Paris, while Dr. Dey of the state university told of a Spanish student in the United States.

The Society of Mathematics, of which E. R. Hedrick is president, also held a session, as did the teachers of history and government. Luncheon was served at noon in Academy hall to the visiting teachers. A dance was given at the same place to-night.

White Rats Fine Pets, He Says.

To The Star: I have read in The Star of the doings of many kinds of pets. I wish to tell the public that white rats are as smart as any of them. They beg for everything whether they are hungry or not. They store it away in a corner and let it go to waste. They act as if you are their greatest friend and then again they will nip your finger. They will act on small trapezes and will store away every piece of cloth and paper they find; so when you notice something missing you are sure of finding it some place all in a pile. If you have white rats they chase the common rats away and make very nice pets for children. I have thirty-five and love them all.

A LOVER OF PETS.

A Chautauqua at Montgomery, Mo.

MONTGOMERY, MO., May 2.—Residents of this city held a meeting at the courthouse to-day and decided to have a six-day Chautauqua here in August, which will likely take the place of the annual street fair. It will be Montgomery's first Chautauqua and a very elaborate programme is being arranged, which will include talks by ex-Governor "Bob" Taylor, Representative Hobson and other men, and concerts and musical organizations of wide reputation.

FOR MISSIONS, 6 MILLIONS

THE "NEW STANDARD" FOR PRESBYTERIAN FOREIGN WORK FOR 1908.

100 Million Persons in Non-Christian Lands to Be Reached if Possible by Missionaries Sent From America—General Assembly in This City.

The Presbyterian church in the United States of America which is to hold its 120th general assembly in Convention hall May 21, is the leading church in the foreign mission field. At the missionary convention at Omaha the mission workers of the church announced what they called "The New Standard." The new standard means to Presbyterians everywhere the great effort of the church to get 6 million dollars every year for foreign missions. In convention in Philadelphia the church again declared for the new standard and set 2 million dollars for the work of the church for the year then beginning. The estimate was that ten cents a week for this purpose from every member would raise the required amount to the 6 million dollars for annual use. The church has been expending about 1¼ million dollars every year.

MILLIONS OF SOULS TO SAVE.

Those in charge estimate that there are in non-Christian lands for which the Presbyterian church, United States of America, is directly responsible in the work of evangelization, 100 million persons distributed as follows: Mexico, 2½ millions; Central America, ½ million; South America, 10 millions; Japan, 4 millions; Korea, 6 millions; China, 40 millions; Siam, 5 millions; India, 18 millions; Persia, 5 millions; Turkey, 2 millions; Africa, 5 millions; Philippines, 2 millions. It is estimated that one foreign missionary and five trained native workers should be assigned to every 25,000 unevangelized people in non-Christian lands. This would mean 4,000 missionaries alloted to the Presbyterian church and upon this estimate is based the amount of money required, placed at 6 million dollars.

THE WORK LAST YEAR.

The board of foreign missions conducts the mission work outside of the United States and last year had in fifteen countries 889 missionaries, 3,129 native helpers, 441 fully organized churches, having 70,447 communicants, with 83,452 pupils in Sabbath schools. In addition there were 115 hospitals and dispensaries, 1,145 day schools, with 36,924 pupils, and printing presses in various missions, especially at Shanghai, China, and Beirut, Syria, which printed last year 136,051,647 pages of religious publications in twenty-seven languages. The contributions of the churches were $1,118,666.

The board of publication and Sabbath school work conducts Sabbath school missionary work in the United States. It had in commission last year 163 missionaries, who organized 722 schools. Its receipts from all sources were $165,477.

HELPING THE NEGROES, TOO.

The board of missions for freedmen works solely among the negro population of the South, educating and supporting teachers and preachers, building schoolhouses, seminaries, colleges and churches. It had last year 371 churches, with 22,804 communicants and 20,273 Sabbath school scholars and sustained 218 ministers and 334 teachers with 115 day schools, having 13,345 scholars. It also conducts Biddle university, Charlotte, N. C. The contributions of the churches were $148,173.

FOR THE FLEET AT MONTEREY.

The Entertainment Continues on the Same Lines as Elsewhere.

MONTEREY, CAL., May 2.—The Atlantic fleet was split in two to-day in order that the celebration of its stay in Monterey bay night be carried forward simultaneously in this city and in Santa Cruz, twenty miles away. The first squadron, including the Connecticut, Kansas, Vermont, Louisiana, Georgia, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Virginia, lifted anchor soon after dawn and sailed away to Santa Cruz. The eight vessels of the second squadron will remain here until Monday afternoon, when they also will go to Santa Cruz to stop twenty-four hours and make the fleet once more complete.

To-day has been rather a quiet but enjoyable one for the men and officers of the second squadron. For the former there were boxing bouts, baseball games and boat races. Large liberty parties came ashore and enjoyed roaming about the streets of the quaint old town.

A large party of officers were taken on the famous seventeen-mile drive as the guests of Mayor Jacks and later were entertained at a reception and tea at the mayor's home.

To-night a naval and military ball, given at the Delmonte by the management of the hotel, was attended by most of the naval officers here and by a large party of army officers from the Presidio of Monterey.

THE WEATHER A WEEK AHEAD.

Two Rainy Spells Are Scheduled to Sweep the Country.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The following weather forecast for the coming week was issued to-day:

The rains of the week beginning Sunday, May 3, will cover the principal agricultural districts from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

From May 3 to 5 an area of general rains will advance from the Pacific to the Atlantic coasts, reaching the Atlantic coast Monday night or Tuesday.

Another extensive rain area will cross the country in the closing days of the week.

The advance of the latter disturbance will be preceded by a period of warm weather over the Middle and Northern states from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic coast.

BRYAN LACKS TWO-THIRDS

A FIRST BALLOT CHOICE IN DENVER IS VERY IMPROBABLE.

Gray Will Have More Votes Than Johnson at the Start—The Nebraskan Has 217 Instructed Delegates Thus Far.

Instructed for Bryan	217
Instructed for Gray	6
Not bound by instructions	154
Total delegates elected	377
Total delegates in convention	1,006
Necessary to choice (two-thirds)	672

WASHINGTON, May 2.—In the two state conventions held this week New Jersey and Connecticut supporters of Bryan found themselves in a hopeless minority and both states will send uninstructed delegations to Denver. In both states a strong Gray sentiment was developed, and it is probable that on the first ballot the Delaware jurist will receive the solid vote of both states.

Of the Eastern states which have elected delegates, Bryan has captured Rhode Island and his friends assert that he won a sweeping victory in the Massachusetts primaries. The opposition to Bryan disputes the result in Massachusetts, but the state convention next week probably will solve the dispute.

There is a wide difference, too, as to the result in the Pennsylvania primaries. Bryan's managers have claimed them, but a call for a meeting of the Bryan delegates resulted in only eight delegates putting in an appearance. Gray's managers contend that all the delegates from the anthracite region are for Delaware's candidate, and in addition all those in Philadelphia.

THE MAJORITY CLAIMED FOR GRAY.

It is contended in behalf of Gray that he now has pledged to him a clear majority of the Pennsylvania delegation. Should the Pennsylvania state convention provide for the unit rule and the national convention recognize the unit rule as binding on delegates chosen in a primary, it would result in giving sixty-eight votes to Gray. It is known that Bryan's friends intended applying the unit rule in Pennsylvania when the announcement was made that Bryan had won in the primaries.

A more probable result than that either Bryan or Gray will have the solid Pennsylvania delegation is that the national convention will recognize the right of delegates chosen in a primary to vote according to the instructions of their districts.

From the delegations elected to date it is altogether probable that Mr. Bryan will not command a two-thirds majority on joint ballot. Judge Gray's vote in the states of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Delaware, Pennsylvania and New England states as estimated by his friends will be approximately 200.

GRAY WILL LEAD JOHNSON.

That the Gray vote on first ballot will largely exceed that of Governor Johnson appears certain. The Johnson managers are devoting their efforts to acquainting delegates with the running qualities of their candidate in the hope that he will be second choice should the balloting show that Bryan cannot be nominated.

A number of the Southern states, through their committees, have indicated they will not send instructed delegations to Denver. It is recognized that the delegations from Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia will go uninstructed, and instructions will be contested in Georgia, Tennessee and other Southern states. The attitude of the Southern states is different from that of the Eastern states. The Southern leaders are opposing instructions, not because of hostility to Bryan, but because they want to canvass the situation in Denver after the Chicago convention has nominated its candidate and adopted its platform.

Should Bryan at this time appear available they will give him the votes necessary to make the two-thirds. If his nomination does not appear wise they will endeavor to prevent it and force the nomination of another candidate.

CROP CONDITION IMPROVING.

Excepting Fruit, the Outlook Is Exceptionally Good in Missouri.

COLUMBIA, MO., May 2.—The drought affected the counties in the northwest part of the state, while in the southern counties rainfall has been too heavy in April for the crops, according to the monthly crop report issued by George B. Ellis, secretary of the state board of agriculture.

Only 15 per cent of the corn has been planted, while only 62 per cent of the plowing is done. The condition of corn in the state 85, being 95 in the northwest and only 79 in the southeast. The southern part of the state is much further behind than usual. Wheat has improved two points since April 1. It is now 92, which is 11 points above the condition last year. The condition is uniform throughout the state. The Hessian fly has destroyed some wheat in Jasper county. Plant lice are reported, but the damage is slight. Oats are 90. 6 per cent smaller acreage than last year, owing to high price and scarcity of seed. Meadows and pastures are in good condition. Clover is 90; timothy 90 and pastures 93.

Cotton planting has been retarded on account of rain. Only 30 per cent of a crop was planted May 1. Fruit is uncertain. Severe frosts since mailing of the report doubtlessly has injured fruit a great deal. At mailing time the entire peach crop was 66. The temperature April 30 was lowest in the northern portion of the state and many orchards have been practically ruined.

ALL READY AT FOREST PARK.

The Opening of the East Side Garden for the Season To-Day.

Forest park will open to-day. For six weeks artisans and decorators have been busily transforming the place into a new playground for park patrons. The old Hopkins theater has been replaced by a roller skating rink, to be called the St. Nicholas and presided over by Gabriel Kaufmann, said to be an artist when it comes to roller skating. Koffler's dancing pavilion is ready and Kennedy's "X. I. T." ranch and Indian village resemble a page from early American history.

Thelma, "the beautiful," Irmas Orbasany's trained cockatoos, the Casino Stock company, the famous Senegambians, Satana, who does the slide for life suspended by his teeth in midair; the big balloon fight, and many other new features have been prepared by the management for the opening day.

No admission is to be charged to the park.

HASKELL WRITES TO JOHNSON

Bryan Still the Only Leader, Says the Oklahoman.

GUTHRIE, OK., May 2.—An open letter from Governor Haskell of Oklahoma to Governor John Johnson of Minnesota was given out for publication here to-night. Part of the letter says:

My Dear Governor: On April 11 your campaign secretary addressed one of the open letters to me, announcing and advocating your candidacy for the Democratic nomination for President of the United States.

As one who has admired many things you have accomplished in the past, I read the letter with great care and have given it much consideration before writing this answer, and regret that now I am offered to dissent from both the spirit and the tenor of the letter, and see no reason to change my personal views as to the best policy of the national Democracy.

I am now where I have stood for years—for W. J. Bryan.

The suggestion "that Democracy is drifting towards an autocratic convention, where popular choice is to be subordinate to personal will" is clearly unwarranted. Mr. Bryan has appealed to the people of every state to let the masses of the party select the delegates to Denver and instruct them as the great masses, "the rank and file of Democracy," assembled in their own home communities, might deem wise.

Can any method be farther from autocratic convention than this?

Your letter says: "The Democracy of the nation has for twelve years been losing ground; that the old conditions mean certain defeat, etc."

I am forced to emphatically dissent from this statement. W. J. Bryan has failed to secure a sufficient number of votes to elect him to the Presidency, but Bryanism has never been defeated.

You have been a worthy captain under this great leader. You have accomplished much in your advocacy of Bryanism in your great state. We have aided as best we could in our state. The people of your state, of my state, yea, of all the states in the Union have commended every instance where Bryanism was put into actual operation.

Those who seek the support of the people are not to-day courageous enough to openly oppose Bryanism, I care not what political party they may represent. Shall we then commend the created principles and discard the creator of these principles?

In the days of our Savior, when Satan found that he could not defeat the spirit and the teachings of Christ, he sought to lead Him away from the path of righteousness. He led Him on to a high mountain where he could view all the wealth and glory of the earth, and said to him, "All these will give Thee to reign over, if You will but follow me."

Christianity with all its blessings to the human family were there at stake. The Savior stood for His principles and cast aside the offer which ambition for selfish greed and glory would have accepted.

So to-day, unable to stem the tide of Bryanism, growing stronger from year to year, the enemies of good government, "equality to all and partiality to none," find their last hope lies in dismembering the army and depleting the forces that have made Bryanism grow to the invincible power that it is to-day.

My dear Governor, I shall sincerely hope to meet you at the Denver convention, bearing the banner of the Minnesota Democracy where the Oklahoma Democracy can join with you in holding up the principles of free government for a free people and united with those of the other states of the Union, declare, not only for the principles that have received universal approval, but for W. J. Bryan, the champion of those principles, as the proper President to carry these principles into effect.

Sincerely, C. N. HASKELL.

EVELYN THAW AT THE RACES?

JAMAICA COURSE CROWDS EXCITED OVER THE RUMOR.

Spectators Craned and Jockeys Raced to Catch Sight of the Woman in the Box With E. R. Thomas—Was It She, After All?

NEW YORK, May 2.—The horses were not the real favorites at the Jamaica race track to-day, where 20,000 persons gathered. The prohibitive choice in the attraction stakes was one of the most prominent boxes in the grandstand. It jumped into favoritism as soon as its occupants were colored before the crowd.

First entry in the box was E. R. Thomas, the ex-horseman, now banker and millionaire.

Second entry in the box was "Boots" Durnell. Third entry was "Bud" Hauser. But Hauser and Durnell had made a mistake. They quickly withdrew to the adjoining box.

Then the real entry came. She was slight and pretty. Her dark hair was massed about a pale and petulant appearing face. She was dressed modestly and girlishly in a black frock, and an Eton collar circled her neck, set off by a black sailor bow.

AS QUICK AS A THOUGHT.

Quicker than the word can be flashed from the paddock to the betting ring that a favorite is lame, the wireless telegraph had spread the news from the training quarters to the field stand that Mrs. Florence Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was in a box in the grandstand—with E. R. Thomas.

Every glass among the 20,000 pairs was turned on the box. Men and women left the grandstand to parade the lawn in front and catch a glimpse of the noted figure of the Thaw trial. Bookmakers dropped their slates before the betting had closed and the fence separating the field and grandstand inclosure was lined with men and women with glasses. Some of them paid the extra $2 in order to enter the grandstand inclosure and get a better look.

Greater and greater grew the excitement. The judges turned their attention from the horses at the post for a fleeting glance into the grandstand, and even "Old Phil" Dwyer rubbed his double barreled glasses and tried to span the intervening distance with his gaze.

THE JOCKEYS RACED TO SEE HER.

When the barrier was sprung all the jockeys tried to get home first to satisfy their curiosity. Only one was successful, of course, but the rest hurried home as quickly as they could.

The excitement continued until after the last race of the day. It was positively averred by those who know Mrs. Thaw personally that she was not in the box and others who should know declared positively that it was Lillian Lorraine, who is known as "Mrs. Thaw's double."

Many hundreds left the race track still unconvinced, however, and others left with the firm belief that they had at last seen the most prominent figure of the great murder trial of Harry Kendall Thaw, who is now in the New York state hospital for the criminal insane in Matteawan, for the killing of Stanford White, the architect, in June, 1906.

STOLEN MONEY EARNED, HE SAID

A Penitentiary Prisoner Who Desired to Invest the Proceeds of His Crime.

"It's queer what notions some people get into their heads," Major R. W. McClaughry, warden of the United States penitentiary at Leavenworth, said yesterday afternoon in Kansas City, Kas. "Some folks simply can't distinguish between the right and the wrong."

Major McClaughry told a story of a man who was sent to a penitentiary for ten years for robbing a bank of $10,000. He had reached through the wicket at the teller's station, snatched a pile of bills, escaped from the bank and had hid the money before he was arrested.

"Well, sir, he was a model prisoner," Major McClaughry said. "He behaved so well that everbody about the penitentiary liked him, and by such conduct he succeeded in obtaining enough credit marks to reduce his time of imprisonment from ten years to six years and nine months. A day or two before his release he requested an interview with me.

" 'Warden,' he said, 'I want to ask your advice about a little matter. You know I'm to leave this place in a few hours. I am going into business of some kind and I shall want a partner. Now, in what business would you advise me to enter—for you know I want to make an honest living and be a good citizen.'

"I asked him what kind of a partner he desired and how much money he could put in as his share.

" 'Oh, anywhere from $1,000 to $10,000,' he answered.

" 'Where did you get that much money?' I asked, in greater surprise.

" 'Oh, the bank money—the $10,000 I stole,' he exclaimed.

" 'Why, man, that isn't your money,' I told him.

" 'Not my money!' he cried, 'haven't I earned it by hard work in this prison these many years?'

"And do you know," Major McClaughry said, "that it was one of the hardest things I ever undertook in all my life to make that man see that he was wrong—that the stolen money was still the property of the bank, not his, and that the time he served in prison was only punishment for violating the laws made for the protection of people's property. But he did see it in the right light at last. He turned every dollar of the money over to the bank, was generously rewarded by the man who had sent him to prison, and has since been a useful and honorable citizen."

A NEW HOUSE OF NUNS.

The Reparatrice Sisters Are a New Order in the United States.

NEW YORK, May 2.—A new order of nuns in the United States introduced into this country by Mrs. Leary, who was made a countess by Pope Leo XIII, was established to-day on the East side in this city. The new order is known as the Order of the Reparatrice (reparation).

Papal Countess Leary recently brought four nuns to New York from Italy, who are at present in charge of the convent, and six more nuns will come from Italy in the fall. The order is well known through Europe, but this is the first house established in this country.

PEARY TO TRY ONCE MORE

LACK OF FUNDS THE SOLE OBSTACLE TO DASH FOR [illegible]LE.

In an Interview the Explorer Outlines His Plans and Expresses His Faith in the Success of His Venture —A Start in July.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Robert E. Peary, who will soon start on another North Pole expedition, has prepared an outline of his programme for the new trip. In the main he will follow the same procedure as before as to time of start across the pack, sledging, etc., but will somewhat change his route. Peary says:

"I purpose in my next expedition to follow the same programme and route as in the last, with such modifications as have been suggested by the experience and discoveries of the last expedition.

THE SUMMIT OF CAPE COLGATE.

"I shall use the same ship, the Roosevelt; shall leave New York July 1; shall follow the same route north, via Sydney, C. B., straits of Belle Isle, Davis straits, Baffin bay, and Smith sound; shall use the same methods, equipments and supplies; shall have a minimum party of white men, supplemented with Eskimos; shall take on these Eskimos and dogs in the Whale sound region as before, and shall endeavor to force my ship to the same or similar winter quarters on the north side of Grant land as in the winter of 1905-06.

"Wintering here will be essentially the same as in 1905-06, though I expect next time to avoid the distribution of my dogs and a large portion of my party through the interior of Grant land during the winter, enforced in the last expedition by the poisoning of the whale meat which I had purchased for food for my dogs.

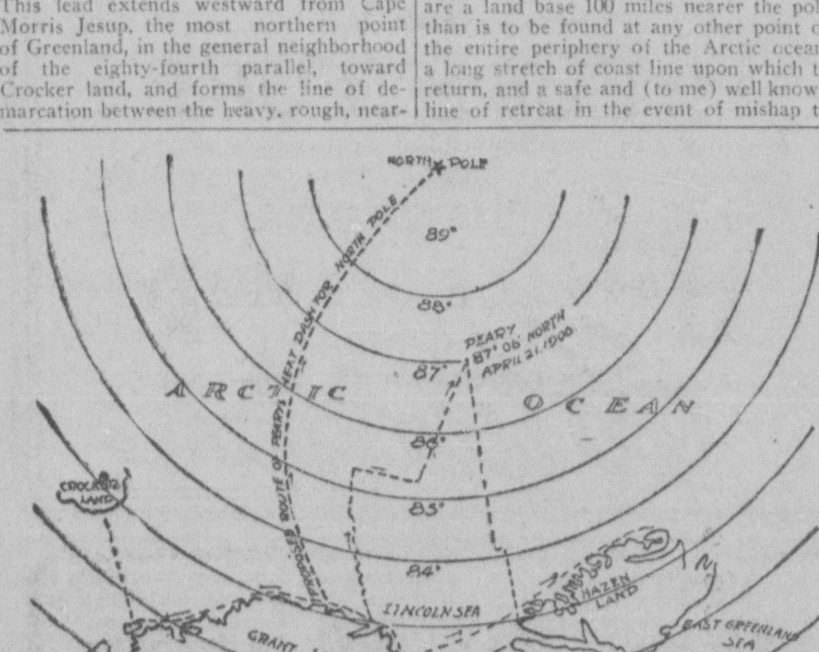
SOME CHANGES IN THE ROUTE.

"The sledge work will begin as before, in February, but my route will be modified as follows: First, I shall follow the north coast of Grant land as far west as Cape Columbia, and possibly beyond, instead of leaving the land at Point Moss, as I did before.

"Second, leaving the land, my course will be more west of north than before, in order to counteract or allow for the easterly set of the ice between the north coast of Grant land and the Pole, discovered during my last expedition.

"Another essential modification will be a more rigid massing of my sledge divisions en route, in order to prevent the possiblity of a portion of the party being separated from the rest by the movement of the ice, with insufficient supplies for a protracted advance, as happened on the last expedition.

"There is no doubt in my mind but what the 'big lead' encountered in both my upward and return marches in my last expedition, and which was also observed by me in 1902, although closed at that time, is an essentially permanent feature of this part of the Arctic ocean. This lead extends westward from Cape Morris Jesup, the most northern point of Greenland, in the general neighborhood of the eighty-fourth parallel, toward Crocker land, and forms the line of demarcation between the heavy, rough, nearly motionless ice embayed in the great bight between Cape Jesup and Crocker land and the less heavy, more mobile ice of the central polar sea, moving steadily from the ice encumbered areas, north of Bering Strait, across the Pole toward the North Atlantic in a broad stream between Cape Morris Jesup and the northern point of Franz Josef land.



PEARY'S NEW ROUTE, BY WHICH HE HOPES TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE FLOW OF THE ICE AND SHORTEN THE DISTANCE TO THE POLE.

THE ROUTE WILL BE SHORTER.

"I have little doubt of my ability to make this lead (that is, the eighty-fourth parallel) instead of the north coast of Grant land (83 degrees north latitude), my point of departure with fully loaded sledges. If this is done it will shorten the route by nearly 100 miles and distinctly simplify the proposition.

"On the return march in the next expedition, I probably shall do voluntarily what I did involuntarily last time, that is, retreat upon the north coast of Greenland (a course diagonally with the set of the ice) instead of attempting to come back to the north coast of Grant land (diagonally against the set of the ice).

"In adjunct of this programme will probably be the establishment of a depot well up the north coast of Greenland by the first supporting parties returning to the ship. This, however, would simply be a precautionary measure, as my personal acquaintance with the entire north coast of Greenland and the east coast as far south as Cape Parish would permit the subsistence of a small party upon the game of the region.

NEW SURVEYS ALONG NORTH GREENLAND.

"Such depot party (assuming the necessary caliber in the leader) might be able to extend my surveys of 1900, south from Cape Parish to Independence bay and possibly beyond, and would certainly be able to explore the interior ramifications of the great Greenland ice fjords debouching into the central polar sea between Cape Bryant and Cape Morris Jesup, presenting the most boreal manifestations of glacial conditions in the world, and bring back a synopsis of the fauna, flora and geological features of this coast.

"It may also be possible for the second detachment of returning parties to go west from Cape Columbia along the north coast of Grantland to Cape Colgate, and perhaps Cape Thomas Hubbard, and thence to Crockerland, for the exploration of this new section of the unknown Arctic. In regard to this region a well known Arctic and Antarctic writer recently said that the exploration of Crocker land might entirely change all preconceived notions in regard to the unknown polar area.

THE AREA OF EXPLORATIONS.

"The two auxiliary routes indicated above means the investigation of the most northern coast line in the world (situated only about 500 miles from the pole itself), through possibly 100 degrees of longitude. (This represents the difference in longitude approximately between the Yellowstone park and the Azores.)

"In view of the fact that in my last expedition I personally covered within the limits of a single sledging season one-half of the range, both latitudinally and longitudinally, contemplated in the above outline, it does not seem too imaginative to assume that the programme, as outlined, can be carried out by three simultaneous parties, utilizing my methods and guided by my personal acquaintance with the greater portion of the route traversed by each.

"I shall take with my advance parties on the next expedition light sounding apparatus, and make every effort to secure a line of soundings from the north coast of Grantland to the pole, that may determine the general features of sea depths in this region, and the position of the continental shelf north of Grantland and Greenland.

BY THE "AMERICAN" ROUTE.

"The main features of the above programme are, first, the utilization of the Smith sound or 'American' route. This must be accepted to-day as the best of all possible routes for a determined, aggressive attack upon the pole. Its advantages are a land base 100 miles nearer the pole than is to be found at any other point of the entire periphery of the Arctic ocean, a long stretch of coast line upon which to return, and a safe and (to me) well known line of retreat in the event of mishap to the ship independently of assistance.

"Second, the selection of a winter base which commands a wider range of the central polar sea and its surrounding coasts than any other possible base in the Arctic regions. Cape Sheridan is particularly equidistant from Crockerland, from the remaining unknown portion of the northeast coast of Greenland and from my 'Nearest the Pole' of 1906.

"Third, the use of sledges and Eskimo dogs. Man and the Eskimo dog are the only two machines capable of such adjustment as to meet the wide demands and contingencies of Arctic travel. Airships, motor cars, trained polar bears, etc., are all premature, except as a means of attracting public attention.

HIS AIDS, THE NORTHERN ABORIGINE.

"Fourth, the use of the hyperborean aborigine (the Whale sound Eskimo) for the rank and file of the sledge party. It seems unnecessary to enlarge upon the fact that the man whose heritage is life and work in that very region must present the best obtainable material for the personnel of a serious Arctic party.

"The above is my programme; the object of the work is the clearing up, or at least the fixing in their general proportions, of the remaining large problems in the American segment of the polar regions, and the securing for the United States of that great world trophy which has been the object of effort and emulation among practically all the civilized nations of the world for the last three centuries.

HOW THE EXPEDITION STANDS.

"The present status of the proposition is as follows:

"The Roosevelt has been thoroughly repaired from her last struggles with the ice, has been fitted with two new boilers, making her an even abler ship as regards power than she was three years ago, and is now waiting for the time to come to again point nose to the northward.

"I have fifteen tons of pemmican (a concentrated meat food for Arctic sledge work) and various other items of supplies and equipment purchased and stored. Special items of camp and sledge equipment which will add to the efficiency and rapidity of work in the field are being worked out under my personal supervision. My time and energies are being devoted to raising the additional funds which I need to enable me to get my expedition started the first of next July.

"The additional amount needed is $50,000 for the purchase of the balance of my equipment and supplies, pay of crew, expenses of collier to go part way north with me, etc.

BUT HE NEEDS MONEY.

"The recent death of Mr. Jesup, who was my personal friend, deeply interested in my Arctic work and president of the Peary Arctic club (which financed my last expedition), has given this financial part of my work a very serious aspect. But I cannot believe that the loss of any one man, however irreparable that loss may be, will be permitted to put a stop to a work having for its object the winning of what is recognized as the greatest of international trophies, a prize which will give every citizen of the United States, high or low, intelligent or illiterate, at home or abroad, a thrill of added pride and patriotism, and by just that increment of national esprit and morale to millions, more than justify all cost in time, money and sacrifice, independent of gains to geography and science, especially where so much in the way of preparation and equipment is already accomplished, and I believe that those to whose nature such a work appeals will come forward and aid in putting it upon a sure basis.

"To be effective such aid must be prompt and tangible."

WORKS HARD FOR HER HUSBAND

No Help With the Housework Expected and This Wife Is Very Happy.

To The Star: I have been married more than six years. My husband draws a moderate salary, but not enough to hire a servant. I do not ask him to help wash the dishes or help in any way do my work. That I am plenty able to do myself. I get up of mornings and build the fires, prepare breakfast and let him sleep. I order the coal, groceries, see that his clothes are kept in first class order, and do my washing and ironing. I never fail to have supper prepared when he comes home of evenings from work. I get his pipe and tobacco and evening paper and let him sit in any room in the house with his feet on any piece of furniture he pleases. While he reads his paper I put the kitchen in order for next morning and then we are ready to talk over the events of the day together. I think when a man works hard and makes a living for a woman she ought to take pleasure in doing all she can to help lighten his burden and make him happy. And I take as much pains in my dress and in arranging my hair as when we were courting. I would no more think of wearing a soiled gown or having my hair badly dressed when he comes from work than I would to go shopping in that condition. And in return I get more pleasure than help with the dishes. My husband never goes to a theater or any place of amusement unless I accompany him. I'll just repeat a sentence a neighbor said when I made the remark that this was my sixth anniversary: "Oh, Mrs. So-and-So, you don't mean to say you have been married six years. Why, I thought you were young married folks."

A HAPPY WIFE.

As to the Man Who Helped a Sick Wife.

To The Star: The married man who did his own housework while his wife was sick wasn't helping her, in my estimation, he was helping himself. He is like some men I know. They will do housework when forced to it, but as soon as their wives can stagger into the kitchen they walk out. What I call helping a wife is when a man wipes dishes, grinds coffee, peels potatoes, sets the table or sweeps the floor while his wife is doing other things.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

Found Forty-Three Four-Leaf Clovers.

To The Star: In reply to "Amateur Gardener's" request to communicate to your columns experiences in finding four-lear clovers, I would like to say that although I have not looked for any yet, a friend of mine found forty-three of them one afternoon in one of our parks. Isn't this rather unusual?

"CLOVER."

AN ENEMY OF BAD MEN DEAD

TURNER TURNBULL LIVED IN BLOOD AND DIED IN PEACE.

Before the White Man Took His Law to Oklahoma Turnbull Was a Law Unto Himself and the Slayer of Territorial Evildoers.

MUSKOGEE, OK., May 2.—Turner Turnbull is dead at his home east of Caddo, in the Choctaw nation, and the man who made his Winchester the law and scattered graves of horsethieves all along the valleys of the Blue and Boggy rivers in what he believed to be a righteous war of extermination, went to his final rest an honored man in his community.

For many years, dating back into the early '70s, the name of Turnbull was interwoven with the history of the Choctaw nation, a terror to outlaws and thieves who claimed the country as their own. There were three of the Turnbull brothers, Turner, Simon and Daniel, two of whom were killed by outaws. They had always lived near Caddo and the bones of many outlaws and cattle thieves are lying in shallow graves between the Blue and Boggy rivers, unmarked and unknown, sent to the grave by these brothers and their sworn confederates, who, in the days of the Indian courts, generally took the law into their own hands. They hated thieves above all criminals and made "short shrift" of them when they got a chance with their Winchesters.

THIS PASTOR ONCE A HORSETHIEF.

One time a bunch of horsethieves had been captured near where the postoffice of Blue is now located. Three of them, all Choctaw Indians, were killed on the spot. The other, a mere boy, was tied to a tree and whipped into insensibility. He wears the marks of this terrible whipping to this day. He became a minister and is now pastor of a church near Ardmore.

Frank Long was a member of the Turnbull rangers. His wife was a Choctaw and he frequently took her with him on long trips through the Choctaw nation, she acting as interpreter while he traded with the Indians. Two negroes robbed Long's house and one day they came back to Long's and there the Turnbulls found them. They took the two negroes out and hanged them. A few days later a party of negroes organized and went to Long's place. He saw them coming and slipped away, notified the Turnbulls and they returned surprising the negroes. A running fight ensued in which Sam Boyd was killed at Buffalo Hill and the rest chased to Double Springs and the entire bunch killed.

THIRTEEN YEARS AS A FUGITIVE.

For this they were indicted by Judge Parker's court at Fort Smith and for thirteen years Turner Turnbull was a fugitive. He was finally captured and acquitted of the charge. While he and Frank Long were under arrest, they escaped with the shackles on at Atoka. Frank Long was never recaptured, but later was killed by Tandy Folsom, a deputy marshal.

While Turnbull was in hiding a Choctaw Indian took a horse from Harris Cairns at Caddo. Turnbull and another man trailed this Indian into the mountains on the old Antlers road, before the town of Antlers was built, and overtook and killed him.

HAD SHOT A LOCHINVAR.

This was one of their serious mistakes, for it developed later that the Choctaw had not taken the horse as a theft, but was eloping with an Indian girl and only took the horse to get her away from her people and return it. The girl was with him on the horse when he was killed. She was sent back to her home.

In the early '80s the Turnbulls and three other men started after a gang of thieves that had stolen several horses in what was then Atoka county. A fight came on and two of the outlaws were killed, but in that fight Daniel Turnbull was shot through the lungs. As he lay on the ground he swore that no horsethief should have the honor of killing him, and, drawing his sixshooter, he put a bullet through his brain, killing himself instantly and before his brothers could prevent it. The man who shot him was hounded day and night by the Turnbull crowd and was finally riddled with bullets.

THIS GANG THEY EXTERMINATED.

The chase of this band was never given up until it was completely wiped out. The last member was caught and was shot at Wilburton by the executioner of the Choctaw Indian court.

The days when these wild scenes were enacted were before there was any law established by the white man in this country. The only authority was the federal court at Fort Smith and the Indian tribal courts. The former was 150 miles away and only occasionally a deputy marshal and his posse came through. The Indian courts exercised jurisdiction over the members of their own tribe only.

Where honest white men settled they had to protect their lives and their property with their Winchesters, and leaders always came to the front. The Turnbulls were such men. After the federal courts were established in Indian territory and the horsethief, the rustler and the murderer was wiped out, these pioneers settled down to a peaceful and prosperous life.

When Turner Turnbull died he was a man of wealth, whose word was as good as his money, a director in Bokchito National bank, a Mason and a respected citizen. If he ever regretted the bloody part he took in the outlaw warfare of the lawless days, he never made it known.

A JOBLESS MAN ASKS ADVICE.

With $250 and a Family He Can't Find Anything Worth While.

To The Star: The man who is fortunate enough to have a bank account running to four figures is receiving quite a lot of free advice, perhaps more than he can ever make use of. Now, will someone tell us what is the best mode of procedure for the fellow who has only $250, is without a job and has a family to support? This one in particular has been accustomed to holding reasonably high salaried office positions, but does not like to be "bossed." He finds a few positions that pay barely a scant living, but nothing that is really worth while. One banker to whom he applied was frank enough to say that the position he had to offer would not support a man with a family.

Among the thousands of "unemployed" throughout the country, there are a few who are really worthy of good places, have been accustomed to holding positions of responsibility at good salaries, but, from one cause or another, now find themselves without work, and in many cases entirely without funds. Perhaps these fellows need a little friendly advice more than the "Man with $1,000."

HERE'S THE PLAINT OF A WIDOW

Eight Years Ago Her Husband Died and She Desires to Meet Eligible Successor.

To The Star: Reading the letter in Monday's Star from "One of Many" has led me to think on my own experience in my eight years of widowhood. I was widowed at 30, while life was still young, and the future looked very long and dark. Advised to divert my mind by travel I did so and it has been my pleasure to feast my eyes on as many as I could afford of the beautiful things that God has spread out before us in this country from New York to San Francisco. I have my dear friends or relatives in every place I have been and they have been kindness itself. They have given teas and other small social affairs and dinners for my pleasure and entertainment at which I have met scores of women and some husbands, but absolutely no unmarried men of suitable age.

In these years, in all my wanderings, I have chanced to become acquainted with only one widower (he was two years my junior) and one bachelor. Neither of them, as it happened, were at all congenial.

Now, what is the matter? I am inclined to the belief that nearly all of the nice men are married and that accounts for the scarcity of single men of middle age. I have missed and mourned the good man I lost eight long years ago and given little thought to other men, but it comes to me with a pang sometimes that when my one child leaves me I shall be all alone in the world. By all means, dear married people, if you have unmarried friends of both sexes, who have somehow found themselves in middle life alone, give the little luncheon or dinner and bring them together.

CITY'S SAVINGS ON WATER

THE FACTS SHOW THAT MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP IS ECONOMICAL.

Twelve Years Ago the Plant Was Purchased for $3,100,060, but Is Now Valued at 9 Millions—Two Reductions Have Been Made in Rates.

EDWARDSVILLE, KAS.—To The Star: The writer had some recent discussion with Kansas City, Kas., business men about their city water works, when the horrible example of Kansas City, Mo., was brought in to show the bad economy of municipal ownership. They said that your city had increased its water works indebtedness from 3 millions (the purchase price) to 8 millions.

Has it?

Supposing the increase in the debt had merely kept pace with the increase in the population what figure should it now stand at?

Those men asserted that the private consumer in your town now pays more for water than he did under the old corporation management. Does he pay more?

They made no mention of hydrant rentals and other items of free water to the municipality. Will you please give for the benefit of your Wyandotte county readers a statement of the saving to the city from this source since the water works were taken over?

KANSAN.

The indebtedness of the water works plant of Kansas City, Mo., has been decreased. The city voted $3,100,000 in bonds to take over the plant twelve years ago. That was the value fixed by the courts. About six years ago the city issued an additional $1,100,000 for betterments and extensions. That makes $4,200,000 the city has incurred as a water works debt. Conservative estimates of the present value of the plant place it at 9 million dollars. That does not take into calculation its earning capacity. Increased value of the physical property has been given the plant by expenditures for betterments and extensions out of the earnings of the plant, amounting to ½ million dollars, in addition to the proceeds of the bond issue. The capacity of the plant has been doubled, anticipating the city's growth for several years to come. Duplicate machinery and pumps of the latest and most powerful type have been installed and the supply made secure against flood.

The cost of this to the consumer:

To help pay the interest and sinking fund on the bonds a levy of one mill is made against the real estate which is deemed to be benefited by fire protection and street and sewer flushing. The revenues have paid the remainder of the interest and sinking fund, the cost of maintenance, operation and betterments. The provision to meet the bonds now made amounts to a material reduction of the indebtedness. In the meantime two reductions have been made in the water rates since the city bought the plant—10 per cent each time. The last reduction was two years ago and another is promised in the next two years. Also the insurance rates have been reduced 25 per cent in the last four years, following an investigation of the water works improvements by a special commission for the underwriters. And in addition to all of these results the city gets free all the water it needs for fires, for the flushing tanks, for street cleaning, for sewer flushing, for the hospitals and municipal institutions and for the fountains and sprinkling in the parks. At the old rates paid by the city government this would cost $200,000 a year.

MUSKOGEE MAYOR WILL FIGHT.

The Official Will Hold on Till He Is Ousted.

MUSKOGEE, OK., May 2.—"I will stand pat as mayor of this town until some taxpayer brings a suit and ousts me," is the final decision of Mayor Leo E. Bennett, after listening to conflicting advice from lawyers, confusing decisions of the attorney general, and witnessing a general mix-up of the affairs of the city. Mayor Bennett has come to the conclusion that the present city administration was legally elected and qualified and intends to proceed on that line until it is shown in the courts by proper ouster suit, that they are not acting legally.

BANK ROBBERS IN TRYON, OK.

Citizens Held at Bay While the Safe Was Blown Up—$600 Stolen.

TRYON, OK., May 2.—Five bank robbers entered the Farmers Bank of Tryon early this morning and, after demolishing the big safe with seven charges of dynamite, secured $600 and escaped.

It is believed that they live in the vicinity of Tryon and the officers are searching Lincoln county for some trace of them. They forced an entrance from the rear and while three of the gang remained on guard outside the others entered and blew open the safe. The first explosion awakened a number of the citizens who turned out, but they were fired upon and kept at bay while six other charges were applied which finally wrecked the vault and enabled the robbers to get away with the plunder. A running fight followed in which a fusillade of shots was fired, but no trace was left behind. A general alarm has been sent out to adjoining towns and bloodhounds are being used in an effort to run down the robbers.

USED AX ON AN INTRUDER.

An Oklahoma Laborer May Die as Result of a Boy's Blow.

TAHLEQUAH, OK., May 2.—James McKenzie, a railroad laborer, is in the jail here with his skull fractured and probably will die. The wound was inflicted by William Gilmore, a lad 14 years old. McKenzie, while drunk, went to the Gilmore home and broke in last night. Mr. Gilmore was from home. McKenzie threatened to kill members of the family, when William Gilmore seized an ax, and, at the word of command from his mother, struck McKenzie on the head, the blade splitting the skull for two inches and laying bare the brain. The boy was released after an examination.

Taft and wife added $20,000 more, making a total of $52,000, which it is estimated will complete the hotel.

WANTED—A STEEPLE RAZER

A NEW PULLER APPEARS ON THE SCENE, BUT HE FAILS, TOO.

The Watchers at Eleventh and McGee Were on Duty All Day, but They Went Home at Dark Disappointed—To Try It Again.

Hope springs eternal. It was 4 o'clock in the afternoon, yet the crowd of spectators waiting for the steeple of the dismantled First Congregational church, Eleventh and McGee streets, to be pulled down had not received the faintest encouragement to keep watching. Not so much as a clothes line had pulled on the steeple all day, but they waited in grim determination. The short, chunky man with the wide brimmed derby hat and bow spectacles—the boss of the works—was downcast.

Then down the street hurried a short man in a rusty brown suit, with a gray slouch hat and a bristling reddish mustache.

RENEWED HOPE CAME WITH THE ARRIVAL OF THE DUTCH CONTRACTOR.

"You the boss?" he asked briskly.

The man with the spectacles nodded.

"I'm a Dutchman," the newcomer asserted. "My mother's name was Vanschoike."

"Good! My mother wore wooden shoes."

DOWN SAFE FOR $25.

"What I've got to say to you is, I'll take your steeple down for $15."

"So?"

"Yep. An' I'll take 'er down safe for $25."

"Gone at $25."

"If necessary I'll lift her right up in the air with a gin pole and set her down in the middle of the ruins."

"Ain't necessary. Go ahead at $25. Any old hold 'll do. Catch-as-catch-can or Graeco-Roman. Toe hold isn't barred."

The two shook hands, while the faces of the spectators lighted with new hope.

"Now, the next thing is, have you got a saw," the new contractor asked.

"A sort of a saw."

"Well, if that's all, I'll go home and get my tools. By 5:30 o'clock you'll see that steeple fallin'. I've done this trick many a time before."

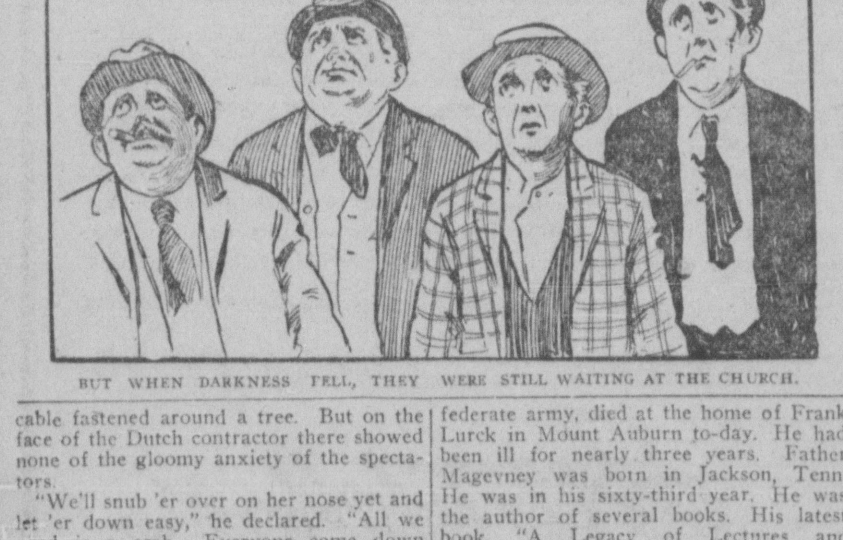
The president of the steeple razers' association walked away satisfied. The new contractor winked.

"Never pulled a steeple before in my life," he confided. "I'm a stone contractor. But I'll bring her down. I'll snip her off, or, if necessary, use a crab."

The crowd nodded in admiration and waited.

THREE PULLS AND THREE BREAKS.

When 5:30 o'clock came all that had been accomplished was to improve on the work of the Irish contractor of the day before by passing an iron cable around the steeple instead of a rope. It was dusk before all of the blocks and tackles attached to the cables were ready. It was dark when the first pull began. The result was a broken rope. Lights were glowing in the buildings and the streets around the church when the second pull (and the second broken rope) followed. It was so dark that a lantern had to be borrowed when the work was given up and the cable fastened around a tree. But on the face of the Dutch contractor there showed none of the gloomy anxiety of the spectators.



BUT WHEN DARKNESS FELL, THEY WERE STILL WAITING AT THE CHURCH.

"We'll snub 'er over on her nose yet and let 'er down easy," he declared. "All we need is a crab. Everyone come down again at 4:30 to-morow morning and watch her crash."

The faithful spectators began to disperse and trudge home.

"Say, you ain't a goin' to get up that early to see it, are you?" one man asked.

"I dunno," his companion answered. "It does sound kind-a early. I'll have to think it over."

NO MONEY FOR OKLAHOMA PARK

Secretary Garfield Attacked in the House During Debate on the Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Representatives Ferris and Carter of Oklahoma made a fight in the House to-day for an appropriation of $20,000 to be used in improving Platt National park in Oklahoma. The proposition was defeated.

Mr. Sherley of Kentucky took Secretary Garfield to task in course of the discussion. Mr. Garfield, in a formal statement to the appropriation committee, said $19,000 was available on account of a previous appropriation for work in Platt park. In a letter to Representative Ferris read in the House the Secretary said only $3,000 was available for that work. Mr. Sherley declared that such inconsistent statements by a head of a department were inexcusable.

Out for Congress in Oklahoma.

GUTHRIE, OK., May 2.—Representative William Murdock of Ralston announced to-day that he would be a candidate for the Democratic congressional nomination in the First district. Murdock now is the only avowed Democratic candidate in the field, A. H. Ellis of Orlando and William Eagleton of Pawnee having withdrawn.

WHO WILL SUCCEED CAMPBELL?

Senator Curtis and Representative McGuire Talk It Over With President.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Senator Curtis called at the White house to-day and discussed with the President the appointment of a successor for Judge Ralph Campbell. Mr. Roosevelt said that he would take the matter up with Attorney General Bonaparte Monday. He added that he had requested Mr. Bonaparte to recommend a candidate. Representative McGuire also had a talk with the President concerning the appointment.

It was said to-day that Pliny Soper, ex-United States district attorney in the Indian territory, was a candidate for the judgeship.

BLOODED CATTLE TO MEXICO.

Co-Operation of Hereford Men Sought by Far South Breeders.

The introduction of blooded American live stock, particularly cattle, into the Republic of Mexico, with intent to improve the breeds there, is contemplated in a co-operative plan submitted to the directors of the American Hereford Cattle Breeders' association here a few days ago. The plan was proposed by E. E. Miller, a stockman and owner of a large ranch in Durango, Mexico.

Mr. Miller desires to organize a co-operative company with a capital stock of ¼ million dollars, composed about equally of Mexican and American breeders. He offered to guarantee the stability of the Mexican stockholders, saying that the governors of five states in the republic had promised to take part in the enterprise.

President Diaz, he said, has promised his moral support to the plan. The Hereford breeders referred the proposition to a committee of which C. R. Thomas, secretary of the association, is a member. This committee is now in communication with Mr. Miller, who returned to Mexico in order to complete more definite plans.

"Mr. Miller explained to us," Mr. Thomas said, "that in recent years the Mexican stockmen have endeavored to improve their live stock by breeding with American importations, but in the transactions, they were treated improperly by unscrupulous individuals. As a result the Mexicans grew wary of Americans and the attempt at improving their stock almost entirely ceased.

"What Mr. Miller proposes is the organization of a responsible company, in which the Mexicans will have confidence, to establish and conduct a large breeding farm, where blooded cattle, sheep, hogs and horses may be offered for sale with the guarantee of the company behind every sale. Such a plan would restore the confidence of the Mexicans, Mr. Miller told our board of directors. The plan commends itself to our directors."

There are comparatively few first class breeds of live stock in Mexico, Mr. Thomas said. Generally speaking, the live stock is vastly inferior to that of the United States. Considering that the republic of Mexico is nearly all first rate country for raising live stock it is not strange, Mr. Thomas said, that the movement to improve the quality should assume almost a national importance there.

A Simple Cleaning Process.

From Harper's Bazar.

Many of us embroider linen or lawn shirt waists, or linen centerpieces and doilies, for our friends. Many of us, too, though naturally neat, will find our work soiled before it is finished. But if one desires to make up the material or give it to a friend without washing, it may be made perfectly clean by sprinkling thickly with French chalk and rolling up for a few days. The chalk may then be easily shaken out, and an immaculate gift presented without destroying the original finish of the fabric. I know from experience that this is as efficacious as it is simple.

NO LEISHMAN ANSWER YET

THE WARKENTIN CASE NOT EXPLAINED BY THE AMBASSADOR.

Two Weeks Ago, However, a Report on the Case Was Received by the State Department—What He Said Then.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Further facts regarding the case of Bernard Warkentin, the Kansas banker who was shot in Assyria were made public by the State department to-day. It was announced at the department at the close of business this afternoon that John G. Leishman, ambassador to Turkey, had not replied to the cablegram sent him yesterday. In this cablegram Mr. Leishman was notified that Mrs. Warkentin had made charges against him which were set forth in detail.

Failing to hear from the ambassador, the department gave out a copy of the reports that have come from Mr. Leishman with reference to his investigation of Warkentin's death. The ambassador cabled the facts about two weeks ago and immediately after Mrs. Warkentin left Constantinople. He said that Warkentin had been accidentally shot by Mehemed Said, a grandson of the famous Abdul Kadir, emir of Algier.

YOUNG PRINCE IS IN DISGRACE.

The cablegram indicated that Mehemed Said was in disgrace and that he had been banished from Constantinople by the sultan.

Ambassador Leishman also informed the State department of Mrs. Warkentin's visit to the American embassy in Constantinople. According to Mr. Leishman, she said that she did not desire to press a claim against the Turkish government or Mehemed Said to her own profit. She believed that the young prince should be prosecuted for carelessness in the handling of firearms. If damages were awarded her, she said she would give the amount to the German hospital at Beirut.

The ambassador adds that Mrs. Warkentin was informed that a conviction would be very difficult. He explained that under the Turkish law the accused, if found guilty, could not be imprisoned for a longer term than a few months. Mr. Leishman says that Mrs. Warkentin finally decided to abandon the idea of a prosecution.

Instead of urging her to do this, as charged, the ambassador says he insisted that she take the matter up with the State department in Washington, the usual diplomatic course. It was at his suggestion, he says, that she gave her power of attorney to the American consul general at Constantinople.

SAY REPORTS ARE INACCURATE.

The department officials said that in view of Mr. Leishman's cablegram they were justified in asserting that the published reports were inaccurate and that Ambassador Leishman would explain satisfactorily every phase of the affair.

Representative Murdock of Kansas called at the department again this afternoon. He was furnished copies of the reports the department has received. These reports he will submit to Mrs. Warkentin with a copy of the ambassador's statement in reply to the department's cablegram, when the reply arrives.

HOCH GIVES LELAND A BOOST.

The Doniphan County Man Was Loyal, Says the Governor.

TOPEKA, May 2.—Governor Hoch, said to-day:

"The statement that Cyrus Leland was either sulking or inactive during the campaign two years ago is a mistake. Mr. Leland was doing all he could do for the ticket, and at his invitation I went to Doniphan county and spoke there. The big Republican majority in Doniphan was the result.

"I want to say also that Governor Bailey went out in the campaign and made speeches for the party and the ticket and showed his loyalty to the Republican party and its principles. I do not suppose that Governor Bailey was very enthusiastic about me personally, as I had defeated him for his second term, but he did just as much good as if he had been whooping it up for me.

"Everybody knows the facts about Mr. Stubbs in that campaign, and I do not care to discuss them," said the governor.

Diplomacy.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

"Who's talking of bolting?" demanded the Nebraskan fiercely.

"It must have been the janitor," replied a timid voice. "He mentioned the necessity for bolting the door to keep out the admiring throng."

Then the Bryan smile came back.

Smarty—Why, she ate six ices in succession.

Patience is not much of a virtue when it is utilized for the purpose of teaching a dog to hop on three feet.

FRIENDS HELP

St. Paul Park Incident

"After drinking coffee for breakfast I always felt languid and dull, having no ambition to get to my morning duties. Then in about an hour or so a weak, nervous derangement of the heart and stomach would come over me with such force I would frequently have to lie down.

"At other times I had severe headaches; stomach finally became affected and digestion so impaired that I had serious chronic dyspepsia and constipation. A lady, for many years State President of the W. C. T. U., told me she had been greatly benefited by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee; she was troubled for years with asthma. She said it was no cross to quit coffee when she found she could have as delicious an article as Postum.

"Another lady, who had been troubled with chronic dyspepsia for years, found immediate relief on ceasing coffee and beginning Postum twice a day. She was wholly cured. Still another friend told me that Postum Food Coffee was a godsend to her, her heart trouble having been relieved after leaving off coffee and taking on Postum.

"So many such cases came to my notice that I concluded coffee was the cause of my trouble and I quit and took up Postum. I am more than pleased to say that my days of trouble have disappeared. I am well and happy." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

CONTINUOUS advertising is what makes your name familiar and identifies it with your business. Continuous—never turning your back to give the other fellow a chance when you're not looking. Take an advertisement like this:

BURKE'S BEDSPRINGS
Like Truth, Will Rise Again. Buoyant, Durable, Inexpensive.

Inserted in The Star, every morning, every evening and every Sunday for one year, that announcement would appear more than

Ninety Million Times

Your monthly bill would be $94.02 and everybody in town would think of "Burke's" every time they thought of bedsprings. But if you advertise only occasionally, or only evenings, or mornings, or Sundays, somebody else may share in the benefit of your expenditure by chancing to be in when you are out. The householder whom you have been exhorting, once a day or once a week for months, and who at last needs bedsprings, may find, instead of your announcement, one like this:

MURPHY'S MATTRESSES
Easy as a Clear Conscience. Elastic, Indestructible, Cheap.

And Murphy might reap where Burke had sown. The thing is, to keep your lamp trimmed and burning. Every morning, every evening, every Sunday.

To extend the publicity field to cover the whole of Kansas City's commercial territory it is necessary only to add The Weekly Star. Morning, Evening, Sunday and Weekly, the little advertisement in one year would, in all, be published a costof $124.26 a month. Persistency wins.

One Hundred and Ten Million Times

FOR A GRAIN BARGE LINE

THE PROJECT PUT UP TO THE BOARD OF TRADE MEMBERS.

Kansas City Would Thereby Become the Chief Western Grain Market—Large Profits Figured on a Low Cost of Transportation to the Gulf.

A barge line on the Missouri river to carry grain, coal and such commodities from Kansas City to St. Louis and New Orleans is being talked of by members of the board of trade. A man who is closely identified with the board broached the project last week and since then some of the members have been giving the proposition study. It was figured that grain could be carried to New Orleans from Kansas City for about six cents a bushel, a saving of 40 per cent over present rates, or that it could be carried to St. Louis for about one-half of the present rate.

What such a saving would mean to Kansas City only members of the board of trade can fully appreciate. It would, without doubt, give Kansas City an overwhelming lead as a primary wheat market.

"It would make Kansas City the market for practically the whole Trans-Missouri grain country," one of the men who is interested said yesterday. "Kansas City would be like a funnel through which the grain would pour in a never ending stream for export. It would practically eliminate Kansas City's competitors in that field."

A NEW COMPANY PROPOSED.

The barge line idea in its present form is for a company separate from the present boat line company. It is proposed to form an organization with sufficient capital to build a fleet of towboats and barges and an elevator on the river front and provide for a surplus for working capital.

In figuring the cost of transporting grain one way and the possible profit no upstream freight is counted on. It is believed, however, that there would be considerable traffic in rice, coffee, sugar, molasses, sisal and such commodities from New Orleans. The only slightly increased cost over pushing empty barges upstream in carrying such commodities would leave a large profit to a barge line company.

J. H. Sweeney, the expert employed by the Kansas City Transportation and Steamship company, estimates that a steel towboat and six barges, which would be a unit for a grain fleet, would cost $110,000. Other estimates place the cost of such a fleet as low as $75,000. A barge line project, now being worked up by the grain men of the Mercantile exchange in St. Luis, contemplates a company with a capital of 2 million dollars to build a fleet of four towboats and thirty barges, each barge to carry 75,000 bushels of grain. Stock subscriptions are now being asked.

WATER TRANSPORTATION IS CHEAP.

Coal is carried from Pittsburg to New Orleans for one-third of a mill per ton mile. Grain probably would cost two to three times as much and figuring on the higher basis a tow of grain, say 400,000 bushels, should be carried from Kansas City to New Orleans, with the cost of returning the empty tow included, not over $3,000, leaving $1,800 for profit. With upstream freight this profit would be increased.

Captain E. H. Schulz, engineer in charge of the Missouri river, in his report on the cost and project of improving the river, says that the greatest benefit of river improvement will be to the grain growers and dealers and that with a twelve foot channel, such as he recommends, there could be no competition with the river as a grain carrier—that grain could be carried by barge to the gulf at a rate that railroads could not possibly meet except at a heavy loss.

FAIRMOUNT TO OPEN NEXT WEEK

Workmen Are Busy Now Freshening and Brightening the Park.

"Busy?" a man asked Bert Young, manager of Fairmount park, at the park yesterday.

"Busy?" Mr. Young replied, "busy, just look about you." Men were everywhere. Some were working on the new skating rink, some were painting, others sodding and placing new flowers in beds. Only a week now remains until the park opens. More than the usual number of concessions have been arranged. New lighting effects are being installed and the park is being freshened and brightened in many other ways. One of the features being arranged for the children will be the Angora goat farm. The goats will be harnessed to wagons for the children to drive. There will also be the new skating rink, the new playground and picnic grounds and other places of interest.

H. O. Wheeler's band will furnish the music for the park this year. Albert's orchestra will be in the dancing pavilion. The opening is next Sunday.

BROWNSVILLE HATES FORAKER.

The Ohio Senator's Views of the Riot Unpopular, Dr. G. B. Thompson Says.

According to Dr. George B. Thompson, county coroner, who has just returned from a visit of two weeks in Brownsville, Tex., the residents there have formed an intense hatred for Joseph B. Foraker, the "fire alarm" Ohio senator, for his publicly announced views on the now famous Brownsville shooting affair.

"The Foraker idea that the citizens of Brownsville had any knowledge of the affair or in any manner connived in the riot is repudiated with such violent indignation as to make it unsafe for anyone to express such a view there," Dr. Thompson said. "On the other hand, they are outspoken in their commendation of Senator Warner. I heard only the warmest praises of the manner in which he conducted the investigation."

WHAT THE CITY CLUB URGES

RECOMMENDATIONS ON THE CHARTER TO THE FREEHOLDERS.

A Reorganized Upper House of Five, Civil Service Provision, Excise Commissioner, Referendum on Franchises and a Limited Initiative Are Suggested.

The charter committee of the City club made up of R. McE. Schauffler, Thornton Cooke, Elliott H. Jones, Henry D. Ashley, Clement A. Lawler and H. M. Beardsley, has addressed a letter to the board of freeholders outlining the club's charter suggestions. The recommendations were approved by the club at a special meeting Wednesday. They include an upper house of five members, appointments by the mayor to be without confirmation by the upper house, the mayor to appoint the police judges, the city attorney to be detailed from the counselor's office, the simplification of council procedure, a merit system, the excise power to be removed from the police board, the extension of terms of office to four years, the initiative on charter amendments and the referendum on franchises.

UPPER HOUSE TO BE REORGANIZED.

The letter in full follows:

Gentlemen: The City club of Kansas City, through the undersigned committee, whose report has been approved by the club, beg to submit to your honorable board the following suggestions relative to the new city charter.

In doing so we fully appreciate the complexity of many of the problems involved in framing such a charter and the necessity of giving consideration to the existing public sentiment and we wish to express our confidence in the board of freeholders and our disposition to accept as wise their final verdict and to extend to it our cordial support. We respectfully submit the following recommendations:

First—That the term of the city administration be four years and that the term of the council and administrative officers be coincident with that of the mayor.

Second—That the present plan of ward representation in the lower house of the council be undisturbed.

Third—To facilitate concentration and efficiency in administration the following recommendations:

1. That the upper house of the council consist of five members elected at large and that an adequate salary of not less than $4,000 be provided for each.

2. That each of these upper house members be the executive head of one of the following five city departments:

1. Public work.
2. Finance, excise, penal.
3. Parks.
4. Water, fire, light.
5. Health and general welfare.

3. That the mayor shall assign these department positions to the several members of the upper house and shall have power to rearrange their cabinet assignments.

POWER FOR THE MAYOR.

4. That the mayor shall appoint without confirmation the City conuselor.

Police judge (two if needed).
City clerk.
City assessor.
Inspector of weights and measures.
Boiler inspector.
Elevator inspector.
City hospital board.
Parole board.

The city attorney to be appointed and be under the city counselor's office.

5. That there shall be elected directly the mayor, treasurer, controller and city council.

6. That the steps of procedure for public improvements be unchanged, but that as many as possible of these steps be transferred to the executive head of the appropriate department and only the final ordinance to be passed on by the council.

We recommend:

Fourth—Civil service provision substantially as submitted in the charter draft of 1905. The club at its special charter meeting wished this recommendation to be especially emphasized.

Fifth—A lay board of three or five men for the control of the city hospital, essentially on the lines of the provisions of the charter draft of 1905. The first board to be named by the freeholders for different terms of service, afterward to be appointed by the mayor as their terms expire.

Sixth—A parole board of three appointed by the mayor, to be provided with an appropriate salaried secretary or field agents, to have control of the proper segregation, parole or pardon of all offenders convicted in the police court.

FOR AN EXCISE COMMISSIONER.

Seventh—In reference to excise:

1. That the licensing and control of dram shops should be placed in the hands of an excise commissioner or board independent of the police commissioners.

2. We recommend the general provisions of the charter draft of 1905 on this subject; incorporating the necessity of petition, as in the procedure before the county court, but requiring a majority of the owners of real estate to protest in order to prevent the renewal of the license without new petition.

3. We urge the incorporation of the most stringent provisions to prevent the brewery control of saloons, imposing a heavy penalty on brewery ownership or interest in building or fixtures, or in the loans to the applicant for a license by brewery agents, or on the deposit of collateral, or other guarantee, direct or indirect, by such agents on which a loan to the license is based.

Eighth—Garbage and sewage. We recommend that provisions be made substantially as in the draft of 1905 for the letting of a long term contract for the disposal of garbage; further, that in consideration of the fact that an order may issue from the War department forbidding the pouring of sewage into the Missouri river (for the protection of water supply) that powers be granted by which the city may itself acquire property and erect a plant, or make contract for the same with a private corporation, for the disposal of sewage on one of the approved European plans.

A CITY REPAIR PLANT.

Ninth—Street repairs and street cleaning.

1. We recommend that authority be given the city to operate it's own repair plant and that for all repairs not covered by general appropriation for minor repair work the city should have the power to issue tax bills against adjacent property.

2. We recommend that permits for digging up the streets or for their use for the storage of building material should issue from the commissioner of streets.

3. We inclose with our indorsement a letter and draft of a section prepared by one of the standing committees of the City club on this subject.

Tenth—We recommend, in reference to the mayor's court, that concurrent jurisdiction be established with the circuit court.

Eleventh—We recommend the establishment of the referendum in relation to franchise grants, with a requirement of 20 per cent of the voters on the petition.

Twelfth—We recommend the initiative for charter amendments only.

Lastly, we wish to call favorable attention to the recommendation of the art committee of the City club, forwarded under separate cover.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL CROWDED.

Thirty-Seven Patients at St. George's and Dr. Sanders Advises Vaccination.

Forty-seven persons, afflicted with smallpox, are now in St. Goerge's hospital. It is crowded to its capacity.

"The smallpox germs are active at this time of the year," Dr. St. Elmo Sanders, city physician, said yesterday afternoon. "It takes a lot of warm weather to kill off the germs.

"Vaccination is the best and only preventative. Of the 204 cases that have been sent to St. George's hospital this year only fifteen of them were persons who had been vaccinated. The majority of these were persons who either had been vaccinated in infancy or had waited too long after being exposed to the disease before being vaccinated. The disease usually appears fourteen days after exposure.

"Since the system of vaccinating school children was abolished we have had a number of cases of children of school age. When they were subjected to compulsory vaccination we never had a case. Smallpox is a very contagious disease and very often a person that is exposed to it in a mild form takes it in the most severe form."

FOR A RANDOLPH COUNTY VOTE.

The Prohibitionists Anxious for a Trial of Strength Next Month.

MOBERLY, Mo., May 2.—The Rev. W. B. Palmer, editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate and president of the Anti-Saloon league of Missouri, addressed a meeting at the First Baptist church to-night in the interest of prohibition. He will speak tomorrow morning and evening at the Methodist Episcopal church, South, on the same subject. The friends of prohibition will ask that the election in both Moberly and Randolph counties take place next month. In the meantime lawyers have been engaged to see if prohibition does not already exist in the county on account of a vote not being recorded by the county clerk of a previous election when the county was declared in favor of those voting against prohibition.

To-Day!—FREE EXCURSION
—TO—
MARLBOROUGH·HEIGHTS

COME OUT WITH US! A REFRESHING CAR RIDE AT THE COMPANY'S EXPENSE AND A DELIGHTFUL AFTERNOON SPENT IN GOD'S GREAT OUT-OF-DOORS!

This is our second excursion of the season.

Last Sunday we gave the first one and over 600 people responded, as a result—notwithstanding the fact that the day was a cold one.

To-day, however, is ideal for such an outing!

The warm, kindly sunshine, the breath of Spring, the song of the birds, create a longing within us for the open.

Humanity wants to get away, on a day like this, from the influences of the city—longs to get out into the freedom of the suburbs and enjoy the majesty of Nature.

Come to MARLBOROUGH HEIGHTS!

Come out at our expense and spend a delightful half-holiday in this Beauty Spot of Kansas City.

We have prepared for your visit and there is no expense—no planning—no exertion necessary on your part except to board one of the cars that will leave the Junction (Ninth and Main) every hour this afternoon—and come!

Many of the very choicest locations in the entire addition are yet to be had, for in spite of the vast crowd that visited us last Sunday, only a very few sales were made at that time, it being apparent that the day was entirely too cold to view property. So that all those folks who came out last Sunday at our invitation were denied the one, real object of their visit—that of inspecting this peerless 640-acre Residence Park, the finest in Kansas City—the largest in all the West.

But we expect the majority of these people back out to-day—and many more.

We have made ample provision to take care of as many as will likely come—perhaps a thousand.

All afternoon we will run SPECIAL CARS to MARLBOROUGH HEIGHTS!

Now take note of the following:

We repeat—and with added emphasis—that Marlborough Heights, with all her improvements completed, a year hence, will be by far the finest Residence park in Kansas City—the largest, the most exclusive and desirable of them all (and Kansas City even now has some highly creditable ones).

But Marlborough Heights will be THE Residence Park.

Because, primarily, it has been carefully planned and thought out—fashioned with a definite purpose in mind.

Not only have we gone to extremes in placing iron bound restrictions on the district—we pledge every purchaser to abide by those restrictions for twenty years, a far-sighted precaution against having the desirability of Marlborough Heights depreciated in nearby years of the future; as many of Kansas City's principal Residence Districts have been irreparably injured in the past.

These restrictions impose on all buyers these obligations:
(a) Not to build a home, the cost of which shall be less than $2,500.
(b) Not to build it nearer than 50 feet to the street.
(c) Not to build more than one house on each lot (and every lot in the addition has a frontage of one hundred or more feet).
(d) Not to build stores, flats or other undesirable structures—and other important restrictions which space will not permit of our enumerating here.

Now, what does our offer of choice building lots in this ideal residence park at from $5 to $12.50 per foot and upon easy terms of weekly or monthly payments include?

(1) The installing of all improvements at our own expense; graded and macadamized streets, granitoid sidewalks, shade trees, parks, conduits for the drainage of the entire addition, street car facilities the equal of those of the city, telephone service, city water, gas; everything, in fact, needed to possess Marlborough Heights with advantages the equal of those found in the heart of the city.

Picture a big Residence Park, one square mile in area, thus improved and thus restricted; and then you will appreciate Marlborough Heights for what she surely will be—"The City Beautiful."

Come and See for Yourself—at Our Expense—To-Day

Our special Cars will be plainly marked (by means of big side signs) "FREE EXCURSION TO MARLBOROUGH HEIGHTS." Of course any regular south-bound car makes connection with the regular MARLBOROUGH HEIGHTS cars at 47th and Troost, but in order to ride FREE, you must take one of these special cars. Our special cars will leave the Junction at 9th and Main Streets on the hour. The first car will leave that point at noon, to-day. There will be another car at 1 p. m., one at 2 p. m., one at 3 p. m. and the last one at 4 p. m.

They will run out the Troost Avenue division and you can board one of them anywhere along the route. (The route is as follows: Start at Ninth and Main, thence west on Ninth to Wyandotte, thence south to Tenth, thence east on Tenth to Troost and out Troost to Forty-Seventh Street, thence direct to Marlborough Heights.) They will stop to let passengers on (but not off) at any street crossing between Ninth and Main and Forty-Seventh and Troost. They will run direct to Marlborough Heights without change. No coupon or ticket or car fare or any credential is required; simply say to the conductor that your destination is MARLBOROUGH HEIGHTS. And since our special cars will be run for the exclusive benefit of our visitors it is recommended that you make sure of boarding one of the cars marked "Free Excursion to Marlborough Heights." In this way we can assure you a comfortable seat and a FREE ride.

NO BOY OR GIRL UNDER 16 YEARS OF AGE WILL BE AFFORDED FREE STREET CAR PASSAGE UNLESS ACCOMPANIED BY PARENT. CARS WILL POSITIVELY NOT STOP AT FORTY-SEVENTH AND TROOST TO ALLOW PASSENGERS TO ALIGHT. If you cannot find time to get out to-day, call up our office or ring for us over the phone any day this week and we will call at your residence or place of business and take you over the property in our big automobile and thus enable you to see the entire tract without effort to yourself.

GAZING DOWN ON NEW YORK

HOW THE METROPOLIS APPEARS FROM THE SINGER BUILDING TOWER.

A Thrilling Ride of Forty Stories in Forty-Five Seconds and a Further Climb of Five Stories Lands One at the Top.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Twenty-five newspaper men got the first public view from the top of the Singer tower Friday morning, and the trip through the building was followed by an informal luncheon given by the company. The party was in charge of a reception committee made up of C. N. Coleman, secretary of the Singer company; Fred P. Whitney, superintendent of construction for architects, and George A. Priest, the company's advertising manager.

In a traction express elevator the party shot up to the fortieth story in forty-five seconds. The reception committee smilingly explained that the ascent could be made at 700 feet a minute, but the law sets a speed limit of 600. After the visitors had taken in the view from the windows of the fortieth floor they were told they could get even nearer to heaven if they wished, as there remained five more stories, which had to be reached by iron ladders.

The last and hair-raising stage of the trip, which the reception committee termed the forty-fifth degree, consisted in climbing out into the crow's nest at the foot of the flagpole. Only a few of the party would submit to this ordeal, which entailed crawling out on a piece of sheet iron about two feet square, surrounded by a low iron railing. Those of the party who managed to overcome their positive conviction that the footing must surely give way had the pleasure of experiencing that thrill peculiar to being poised above nearly 700 feet of space in a gale.

From the crow's nest the view on a clear day extends north up the Hudson river Highlands, south to Sandy Hook and the Highlands of Navesink, east over Long Island toward Garden City, and west over the Orange mountains.

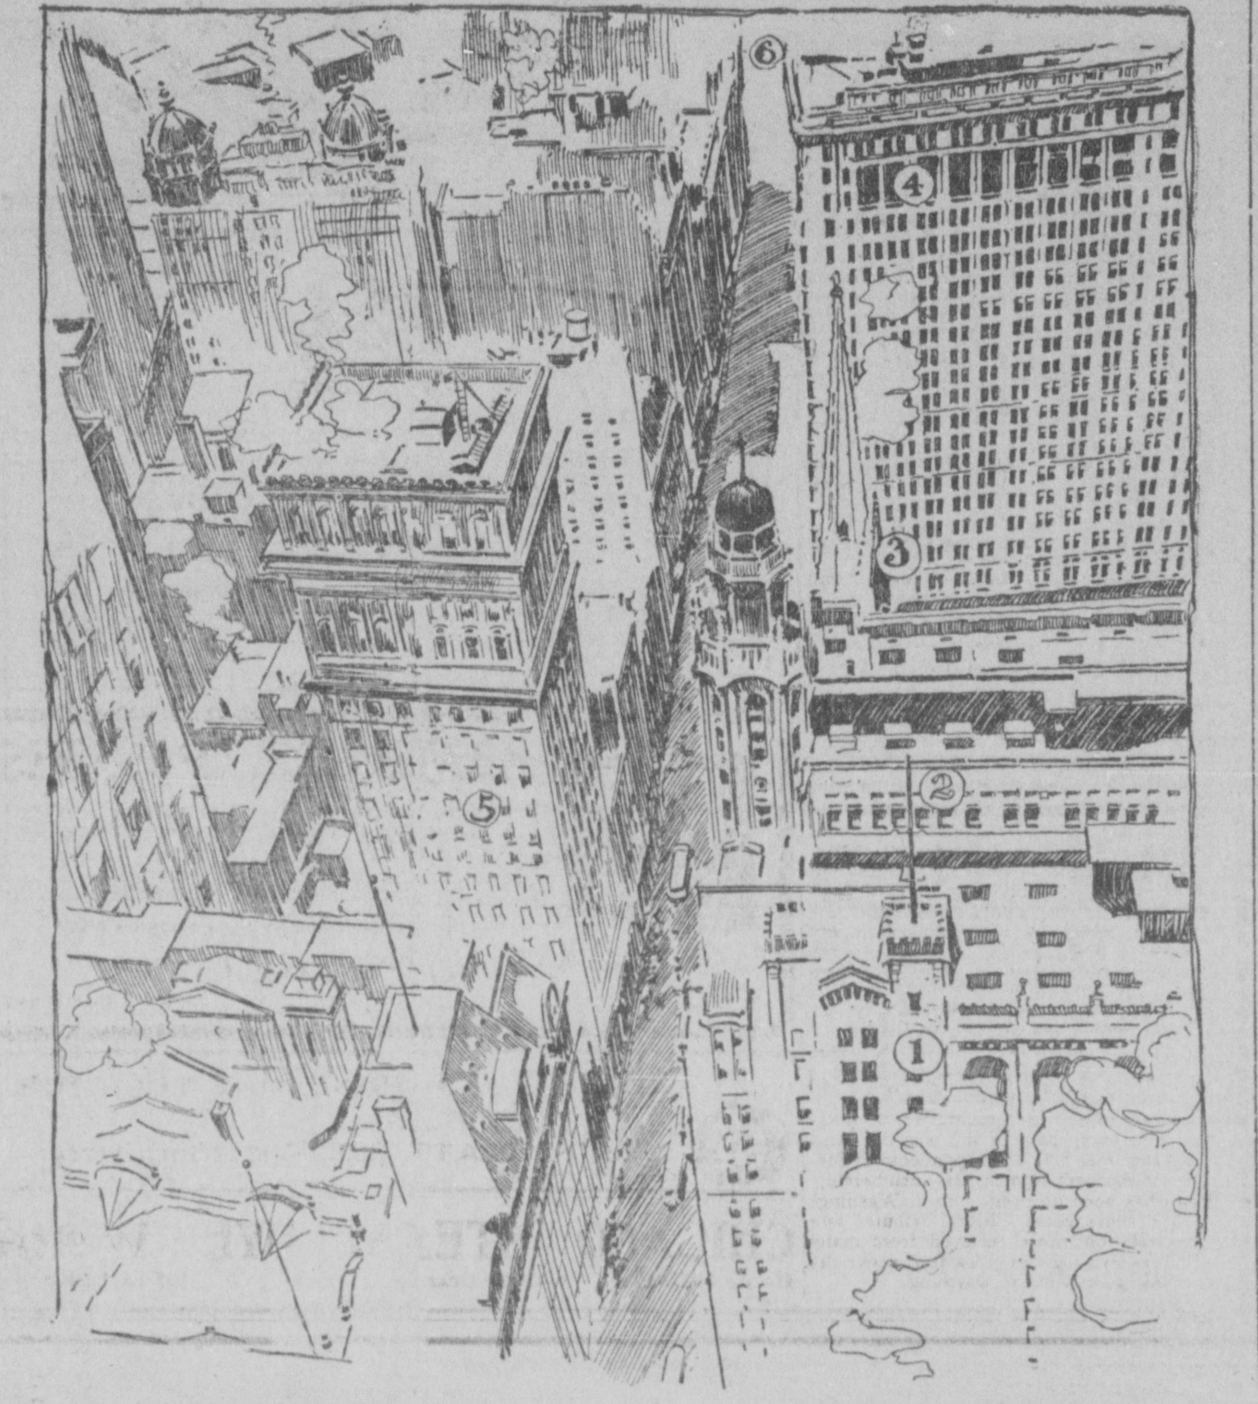
Incidentally there were seen two baseball games on the roofs of neighboring buildings, one the McAdoo terminal structure. One of the games was abruptly terminated because the ball went over the parapet into the street.

The committeemen led the party downward from floor to floor, explaining the details of the building as they proceeded. They took particular pride in the fireproof construction. No wood is used anywhere. Even the doors, door casings and window casings are lightly constructed of steel, skillfully stained and grained to resemble wood.

To illuminate the exterior of the building an ingenious plan has been devised. Such parts of the walls as the searchlight will not reach will be dotted with 5,000 incandescent lights, hidden from the street side by aluminum covering and throwing their rays back against the building in such a way as to produce a phosphorescent effect. It is believed the tower, so illuminated, will be visible beyond Sandy Hook.

There will be seventy electric clocks in the building and all will be governed by one immense master clock in the main entrance hall.

The building will contain 935 offices, for which forty-two floors will be available. Each of the tower floors, which begin at the fourteenth, is good for sixteen offices. Among the novelties in each room are a nice water faucet and a pneumatic whisk broom.



A VIEW OF NEW YORK FROM THE TOP OF THE SINGER BUILDING TOWER. THE BUILDINGS MARKED NO. 1 AND NO. 2 ARE TRINITY BUILDINGS, NO. 3 IS TRINITY CHURCH, NO. 4 THE EMPIRE BUILDING, NO. 5 IS THE AMERICAN SURETY BUILDING, NO. 6 IS THE BATTERY.

AS TO THE VANITY OF MEN.

The Habit of Displaying Loud Socks Commented on by "Merry Widow."

To The Star: While so much has been said about the vanity of the women, especially in regard to the wearing of a "Merry Widow," aren't the men just a little vain? Observe the actions of the would-be "swagger" young fellow upon finding a seat in a street car or other public place. Did you ever see one wearing a pair of low shoes accompanied by a pair of hose of the latest and very loudest pattern, that didn't invariably pull his trousers to a height of from six to eighteen inches above the top of his shoes? Is this vanity or just absentmindedness? I am rather a close observer of both sexes and I, for one, believe the "style" adopted by a great many men is just as absurd and vain as that of any underneath a

DAISIES GIVE WAY TO HOMES

A 28-ACRE TRACT AT SIXTY-FIFTH AND TROOST TO BE PLATTED.

R. L. Winter Pays $28,350 for the Flower Farm—By a Mistake Daisy Instead of Grass Seed Was Planted Nine Years Ago.

The "daisy farm," on which millions and millions of little white and yellow flowers blossom annually, is to be platted into an addition for homes. It is a twenty-eight-acre tract, lying between Sixty-fifth and Sixty-sixth streets and Troost avenue and the Marlborough line of the Metropolitan. It has been purchased by R. L. Winter, a real estate dealer in the New York Life building, for $28,350, and is to be platted into suburban lots 100 by 200 feet. Streets are to be extended and paved and city water brought to the tract. It is to be known as "Maryland Ridge," and it will be restricted to residences costing not less than $2,500. The lots will sell for $10 to $12 a front foot on easy terms. The tract was owned by the Bayse estate, the sale having been negotiated by George Law.

THE HISTORY OF THE DAISY FARM.

Hundreds will regret the passing of the "daisy farm." About nine years ago Jacob Bayse looked out over his broad acres. With the exception of the twenty-eight-acre tract the fields, timbered land and meadows were green with grass and wild flowers. The grass on the "thirty," as it was called, was thin and sparse. Bare spots showed on the ground. Bayse ordered grass seed and sowed it over the tract. Then he waited. But the growing sprouts did not resemble blue grass. As the summer advanced the stems grew into blossoms. The green of the field was hidden by the white petals and the yellow centers of a great waving mass of daisies.

A MISTAKE HAD BEEN MADE.

Through some mistake the flower seed had been planted instead of grass seed. Mr. Bayse mowed the daisies down. They grew up again. He turned the meadow into a cornfield. The daisies outgrew the corn. He set boys to work pulling them up by the roots, but with no avail. The flowers grew and multiplied. Mr. Bayse then advertised in The Star inviting the public to help themselves to the flowers. Hundreds of people visited the fields and have been making annual pilgrimages since. Houses have been decorated and churches beautified by the blossoms. They have cheered the sick in the hospitals, have been distributed to prisoners in the jail and the workhouse and have aided the beautiful mission of flowers in other ways. Now all this is to be given up because of the demand for homes, caused by the steady growth and development of Kansas City.

BEGINNING

MONDAY, MAY 4th

THIS year's "Nemo Week" is more than usually attractive, and there are two good reasons why retailers are anxious to co-operate with us to make this annual event a great success.

1. Nemo Corsets are not like ordinary corsets. Each is a patented specialty that does something—reduces the abdomen, strengthens the back, straightens the form, or brings health, comfort and style in some way quite its own. Nemos must be understood. To know Nemo Corsets is to wear them.

2. The phenomenal success of the Nemo has naturally brought forth many worthless imitations, which are so adroitly named and so skillfully misrepresented that any woman who doesn't happen to know, may easily be deceived. It is only right and fair to give all women every opportunity to guard themselves against such imposition.

MERCHANTS generally recognize these facts, and desire to protect their trade by exposing frauds. "Nemo Week" gives them an exceptional opportunity to explain to their trade the invaluable patented special features that have made Nemo Corsets famous throughout the world.

THE new Nemo models are of absorbing interest. Some of them are entirely new inventions, producing results heretofore thought impossible.

THE wonderful "Back-Resting," and the ingenious and lissome "Willow-Shape," should be studied carefully by women of slender and medium figure, while the stout woman will rejoice in the new "Flatning-Back" models in the "Self-Reducing" styles, whereby graceful Princesse effects may be attained even by fleshy women.

SELF-REDUCING, No. 312, for tall stout figures; and No. 320, same with Flatning-Back
SELF-REDUCING, No. 314, for short stout figures; and No. 318, same with Flatning-Back } $3.00
SELF-REDUCING, No. 516, for tall stout figures; and No. 517, same with Flatning-Back
SELF-REDUCING, No. 518, for short stout figures; and No. 515, with bust supporters.... } $5.00
SWAN-SHAPE, Nos. 205, 206, 303 and 355—$2.00 to $3.50; MILITARY BELT, Nos. 301, 302 and 304, $3.00
BACK-RESTING CORSET, No. 351—$3.50; WILLOW-SHAPE CORSET, No. 500—$5.00

"Nemo Week" is an educational event, for it teaches women how to be shapely and stylish without transgressing the laws of health and hygiene. It demonstrates that, though the first great Nemo success was the famous "Self-Reducing" Corset, the new Nemo models for slender figures are superlatively chic and dainty as well as hygienic.

TRADE WINNERS GO TO-NIGHT

THE COMMERCIAL CLUB TO SPEND A WEEK IN KANSAS.

Public Meetings to Be Held at the Night Stops and There Will Be Souvenirs for Everybody—The Club Party to Number 104.

One of the largest parties that has ever gone on a Commercial club trade extension trip will leave at midnight to-night to spend a week in Northern Kansas. The party will travel on the most completely equipped train the club has ever had, and it is believed that in every other way the trip will excel the twenty preceding ones. There are 104 members of the Commercial club in the party, five representatives of the Missouri Pacific railway, who will have their own car in the train, representatives of the newspapers and a crew of twenty-six, including Jackson, the Commercial club's factotum, without whose presence no trip would be complete. A tailor and a barber are also to be taken along. Dr. H. P. Kuhn will look after the health of the members of the party.

MANY CONVENIENCES ON THE TRAIN.

The train will consist of two baggage cars, two dining cars, seven sleeping cars and the special car of the Missouri Pacific railroad officials. The cars will be equipped with an intercommunicating telephone system and at night the cars will be connected direct with the Kansas City exchange so that members of the party may converse with their families. Daily news bulletins also will be furnished. There will be a quartet aboard and Zimmerschied's orchestra will furnish music. While the orchestra is resting there will be phonograph music. Nearly every town along the route has arranged for some sort of a reception and wherever night stops are made a public meeting will be held. Night stops are to be made at Washington, Downs, Minneapolis, Ellis and Lincoln Center.

A feature of every Commercial club trip are the souvenirs. Nearly every member of the party has something to give away at the different towns and the collection filled several large boxes at the club rooms yesterday. In addition the Commercial club furnishes each member a badge with his name on it, and a card case and memorandum book. For general distribution E. M. Clendening, the secretary, has prepared a handsome pamphlet, descriptive of Kansas City.

AND THEY'LL ALL PAY FARE.

The route of the trip is from Kansas City to Atchison and then over the Central Branch railway to Stockton, including the Leonora and Washington branches. From Beloit the train will go over the Solomon branch of the Union Pacific to Solomon, thence west over the main line to Oakley, then up to Colby, east to Salina and over the main line to Kansas City, arriving here Saturday night. The first stop will be made at Effingham, Kas., to-morrow morning.

The club this year will pay, in addition to the car rental, a fare of two cents a mile for each person on the train. When the first excursion was taken twenty years ago the railroads fell all over one another for the privilege of hauling the trains free of charge. Later so many towns followed the Kansas City example that the railroads began to charge enough to pay the actual cost of running the train. Then the railroads fancied they ought to have a little profit and the charge went up. Last year they charged $1.50 a train mile. Now the law prohibits free transportation of any kind and the charge of two cents a mile straight is made.

LITTLE GIRL A LONE TRAVELER.

She Will Make the Trip From New York to Arizona With Only a Carpet Bag.

From the New York Globe.

Little Helen Bowe, not yet 12 years of age, whose home is at 909 Adams street, Wilmington, Del., where her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Bowe, live, started on a long trip alone Wednesday. She will leave for Patagonia, Ariz., to visit her uncle, William Powers, a mining man of means, accompanied only by her little green carpet bag, which she carries on all her travels.

A few days before Easter Mrs. Mary Ashton, an aunt of the little girl, was sitting in her home at 280 St. Nicholas avenue, knitting when the door bell rang. She went out and little Helen stepped in with the green carpet bag.

"Why, what are you doing here?" asked the aunt in some surprise.

"Oh, papa was busy and mamma couldn't bring me, so I thought that I would just come up by myself," said the little niece. "I want to do some Easter shopping."

She settled herself down and was soon "at home." It was the sixth time that the little girl had made the trip from Wilmington alone. She had not run away. She had traveled so much alone that her parents think nothing of sending her off on a long trip whenever she wants to go and they cannot take her. Mr. Bowe is a wealthy carriage manufacturer, so that his little daughter does not lack for means for her trips about the country.

For the past week she and her aunt have been all about New York buying presents for the parents of the little girl, and they have shipped off big boxes of things to the Wilmington home. When at last Helen had seen enough of New York, the wonderlust came back in full force. The other day her aunt found her packing her little green carpet bag.

"Why, are you going to leave us, Helen?" she asked.

"Yes," answered the little girl. "I think that I will go out to visit Uncle William."

"Uncle William? Why he lives in Arizona."

"Yes, I know it. Of course, you'll have to figure out for me how to get there, because I don't know where it is."

After that there was some correspondence with Mrs. Bowe, who readily consented to the journey, such faith has she in Helen's ability to take care of herself.

"I am going to stop off in Chicago to see some relatives," said the child in explaining her trip. "Then I must stop again in El Paso, Tex., to see more relatives. You know papa and mamma have so many relatives scattered all over the country. Why I've been to Baltimore and Cincinnati to see some of them, and I go over to Washington very often."

"She knows as much about traveling as Secretary Taft," said Mrs. Ashton. "She just jumps into the Pullman, selects her berth, and then unfastening the green bag, pulls out some book and proceeds to make herself comfortable. She is generally in the dining car four seconds after the first call, and she knows how to order from the bill of fare better than many grown people."

TO TALK FOR COMMISSION PLAN.

The Active Campaign in Kansas City, Kas., Will Begin This Week.

The active campaign of those who are to manage the canvass of the Commission Plan party in Kansas City, Kas., will begin this week. The election is to be June 2. At 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon the executive committee of ten members will meet in the new headquarters on the second floor of the Bankers Trust building at Seventh street and Minnesota avenue. A list of men who are to work in the campaign of education in the precincts will then be appointed. The committee will also decide at the meeting to-morrow the nights for the week ward meetings and the places for holding them. The first meeting of the campaign probably will be Tuesday night.

While no organized opposition has developed against the adoption of the commission plan in Kansas City, Kas., some of those who are not acquainted with the provisions of the Kansas commission law are talking against it. Interests that are benefited by the present system, but would not have the same power under the commission form, are trying to organize an opposition.

KANSAS CITY, KAS., MAY EXPAND.

A Plan to Extend the City Limits by Taking in Territory on the West.

An ordinance to extend the city limits of Kansas City, Kas., one mile west to include in the corporate limits the platted territory now lying along its western border, will be taken up at the meeting of the council Tuesday night.

About 15,000 persons live in these additions, which extend from Quindaro to the Kaw river. The streets in many of these additions are continuations of those in the city and the homes there have gas, electric light and telephone service. In case of fire the city is called upon for protection, but the property owners do not pay city taxes. There are no paved streets or sewers and only a few sidewalks.

The Kansas law provides that platted territory may be taken in by the city council. The plan is to extend the limits a mile west. The largest additions to be taken in are Chelsea, Cissna, Kensington, Rose Hills, Clifton Hills, Kerr and Midland. There are also several smaller ones. The present west city limits are at Eighteenth street.

In 1907 he made a six months' trip to Australia and New Zealand to study government ownership, on which he wrote for newspapers and magazines. HOW AN 85-DAY SLEEP FELT

MRS. BEULAH HAWKINS WAS CONSCIOUS AT TIMES.

Knew What Was Going on, but Could Not Speak or Act—Her Mind Was Receptive, but Not Capable of Effecting Action.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., May 2.—"I just wanted to tell you that I was awake."

These were the first words of Mrs. Beulah Hawkins, who had been in a cataleptic state for eight-five days, when she awoke at midnight last night in the county hospital. Her long sleep began February 10. Physicians from all over the country became interested and came here to see the strange patient. They tried by various methods to awaken her, but all efforts failed.

"I can't describe my feelings during the time that I slept," said Mrs. Hawkins. "My memory seems impaired a little, but gradually things come to my mind. A part of the time I was conscious; I can remember a number of occurrences, in fact, I could see a number of things.

"I never felt cold or hungry during the time I was in the trance. Positions did not tire me, and I felt as if in a nightmare a great deal of the time. I had no control over my mind or power of speech when I was conscious, and although I tried a number of times I was unable to make a sound.

"I feel very much awake now, and do not want to go to sleep for a long time, as I am afraid I will lapse into a trance and sleep another long period of time. I hate the looks of a bed and never want to lie down in one again."

Dr. Barber, the superintendent of the county hospital, expressed the opinion that unless unforeseen nervous complications arise, Mrs. Hawkins will remain in a normal condition of health indefinitely.

The Japanese Horror of Milk.

From Harper's Weekly.

There was a time when milk was regarded in Japan with the same abhorrence as cheese in China. Recent statistics, however, show that time has worked a great change in this respect, and milk and butter are now in great favor in Japan. Whereas twenty-five years ago not more than 1 or 2 per cent of the persons visiting a European restaurant, or eating a European meal at a friend's house, would have thought of touching butter, fully 40 or 50 per cent now eat it with a relish. They are, however, quite content to do without it.

Dairy farms have increased notably in recent years. Butter, however, is a by-product at these places. It is to milk that they look for their profit. Milk has a curious history in Japan. Thirty or forty years ago it was abhorred. The average Japanese could not induce himself to drink it. But to-day many a household consumes one or two bottles of milk daily, partly because people have come to like it and partly because the doctors have recommended it as a unique and wholesome beverage. "Milk halls," too, are now quite numerous. Butter will probably take much longer to come widely into vogue, because of its expensiveness. A pound of fresh butter costs at least 1 yen (49.8 cents, gold) in Tokio to-day, an extremely high price for Japan.

BEES ABLE TO TELL TIME OF DAY

French Apiculturist Finds That He Can No Longer Eat on Terrace in Peace.

From the Chicago Inter Ocean.

PARIS—Bees, the most intelligent of the insects, and among the most intelligent of all living things, have a remarkable knowledge of time. Auguste Forel, a French apiaculturist, has proved this, much to the discomfort of himself and of his family.

It was the custom at his house to serve breakfast on the terrace in the open air at 7 o'clock. The family always had preserves at this light repast, and these remained on the table until about 10. At noon the midday meal was served, also on the terrace, but at this meal there were no sweets. At 4 p. m. there was a light lunch, with sweets, which remained on the table from half to three-quarters of an hour.

About one hundred yards from the terrace was a hive of bees. One day M. Forel's cook placed a dish of stewed cherries to cool upon the sill of a window which was surrounded by flowers and overlooked the terrace. A bee, busy among the flowers, discovered the cherries and speedily made his find known to his companions, for in a few hours the whole swarm was sucking the sweet juice of the fruits. The fine feast they had incited the bees to visit the window as a regular thing, and one fine morning one of them discovered the preserves upon the breakfast table. On the morrow he had several companions at the feast, and every day the number increased.

"We are lost!" said M. Forel; "we shall no longer be able to take our breakfast upon the terrace."

And so it proved. At first the bees arrived at almost all hours, but soon they realized that there was "nothing doing" except between 7 and 10 o'clock in the morning and about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, so they ceased their visits except at just those hours, when the preserves were on the table. Soon the place was untenable, and the family had to retreat indoors and renounce from thenceforth their custom of open air meals.

But the table was placed on the terrace to observe the effect. At 7 o'clock in the morning the bees began to arrive and their number steadily increased, the insects buzzing about everywhere, vainly seeking the preserves to which they were accustomed. By 9:30 or 10 o'clock they had all gone. One or two showed up at noon, undoubtedly having come to see if the preserves might not have been postponed for the midday meal, and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the swarm returned. For several days the bees kept this up, arriving in clouds between 7 and 10 o'clock and again at 4 o'clock, until at last they learned that their visits were in vain; then they ceased.

Insomnia and Nervousness

Chas. B. James The Eminent Scientist Makes a Wonderful Discovery.

IT COSTS YOU NOTHING.

Chas. B. James, the eminent scientist, whose reputation is international, has made a wonderful discovery. Words cannot describe the happiness it will bring to those unfortunates who, during the night, toss, twist and turn in their beds, and have restless, sleepless nights, for insomnia is sapping them of their vitality and wrecking their nervous system, for even if they doze off, it is only for a short period of restless sleep, and then they arise in the morning more worn than when they retired, until at last the bed seems to them a hideous place of torture.

This scientific discovery costs you nothing, and it changes restless night into restful, health-giving slumber. Through scientific researches James has perfected a harmless compound of celery, hops and lettuce which brings about the desired results, for they are scientifically blended—no narcotics—therefore create no habit, and are absolutely harmless. The after effects, instead of being harmful, are beneficial to the entire system: for it produces energy, vigor and force. While it calms, it also tones the nervous system, and it is surprising how quickly it produces restful, soothing, refreshing slumber.

James, in his generosity and wish to place this wonderful compound of his in the hands of all suffering from insomnia and nervousness, will immediately, upon your request, send you, postpaid, a supply absolutely free. James stands at the head of the James Sanatorium, the greatest Sanatorium of its kind in the world, and his reputation for the curing of the Drug and Drink habit is second to none. He thinks so highly of this particular discovery of his that he has given it his own name, calling it "JAMES MIXTURE FOR NERVOUSNESS AND INSOMNIA," and those who know the high standing of Chas. B. James, and the pride he takes in his scientific discoveries, know that any remedy that he stands sponsor for and permits to bear his name must be all it claims.

In his Sanatorium, James discovered that thousands of cases of drunkenness and the drug habit owed their origin to insomnia, and also confirmed the well known theory that nervousness causes sleeplessness, indigestion, constipation, headaches, stomach troubles, and loss of appetite. He hopes, through this compound, to keep thousands from the drug and drink habit who otherwise would become addicts, besides effectively dispelling nervousness and insomnia, for many who otherwise would not only have a wrecked constitution, but a shattered mind as well.

You need not suffer another day—no further need to be nervous, and no cause to have nights of terrible torture and days of nervousness, and what is termed as the "blues." For relief is in sight. All that is necessary is to send your name and address in confidence to Chas. B. James Sanatorium, 236 No. Missouri Trust building, St. Louis, Mo., and you will receive, without cost or delay, this wonderful compound.

N. B.—If you are addicted to the excessive use of whiskey, morphine, tobacco, cigarettes or other nerve-destroying addictions, say so in your letter in order that he may intelligently determine the strength mixture best suited to the requirements of your case.

No matter what you want it will save you time and money if you use THE STAR'S WANTS.

TO A SUN WORSHIP COLONY?

THE REPORTED DESTINATION OF MRS. WINTHROP E. STONE.

That His Wife Will Give Up Her Yoga Philosophy and Return to Him and Their Boy Is the Hope of Purdue's President.

LAFAYETTE, IND., May 2.—There is a report here that cannot be confirmed that Mrs. Winthrop E. Stone, wife of the president of Purdue university, who left her husband and two sons because of her acceptance of the teachings of the Yoga philosophy, has gone to Kabakon, an island in the South seas, to join a colony of sun worshippers. Friends of President Stone say that they do not know whether or not this is true. President Stone says that the last time he heard from his wife she was in Germany.

President Stone probably will leave the university for a time and take a rest. He is suffering greatly from nervousness as a result of his wife's actions. He first revealed his sad story to the Presbyterian church of which he is a member, telling the members of a letter received from his wife in which she announced that she would not return to him.

"I'm utterly crushed," he said. "I can scarcely bear up under it. I want your sympathy and prayers. I love my wife; I would welcome her back. She is as dear to me as she ever was, but I am so sorry for her. I hope that in a year or two she will come to her senses and return to me and my boys.

"I feel it my duty to tell you of her letter, but I believe she still respects me. I don't believe she would say an unkind word of me. I hope that her mother love for the boys will triumph and lead her to undo this hasty act. I do not contemplate any legal proceedings and neither does she."

The doctrine of Yoga, as practiced by the Kabakon colony, contemplates the withdrawal of the devotee from all outside communication with the world and by the concentration of the mind to project the individual into a beatific condition.

Following are some of the bits of philosophy from the Yoga teachings that touch upon love:

> Who loves the mortal creature, ending there, is no more free—he has given himself away to death.
>
> If one loves another in such a way that if that other's love be withdrawn all happiness will fade out of life, then that first person is a slave of circumstances, a slave to the other's emotions and passions.
>
> So long as one is tied or attached to any particular person or thing so that his happiness seems dependent thereon, he is the slave of that person or thing.
>
> Love, glorious though it be, is a disease as long as it destroys or even impairs the freedom of the soul. Therefore, if thou wouldst love withdraw thyself from love, make it thy slave and all the miracles of nature shall lie in the palm of thy hand.

Here is the Yoga prayer to be repeated by the devout. It exemplifies the doctrine of the ego:

> I am master of my mind, not its slave. I can set aside my sensations, emotions, passions, desires, intellectual faculties and all the rest of my mental collection of tools as not "I" things, and still there remains something, and that something is "I" that cannot be set aside by me, for it is my very self.

A number of years ago one phase of the Yoga cult was forcibly called to the attention of the public through the lectures of Mrs. Ida Craddock, who applied its theory to details of life in such a way that her books and publications were barred from the mails, and she was indicted. She styled her book "The Church of the Yoga" and, after federal interference expurgated it, sold many copies. As a result of the investigation by the federal authorities she went to Denver and later to Washington, where she committed suicide after being indicted and sentenced.

Mrs. Craddock began her career in Chicago by opening an office at Monroe and Dearborn streets. There she unfolded the principles of her doctrine of Yoga to those interested. The sale of her books came to the attention of the federal authorities, and she was indicted for misuse of the mails.

She agreed to modify her publication and was released by the government and went to Denver. Unlike many organizers of cults, she did not profit by her work. Her books were sold for a moderate price and she refused to recognize any students except those who appeared to her to be sincere and earnest. Almost penniless she went to Washington and the accumulation of her troubles when the sentence of imprisonment was imposed led to her tragic death.

A PLEA FOR THE CHILDREN.

Mr. Warden Says Mrs. Wilton Did Not Knock Him Down.

To The Star: An article in The Star of Saturday regarding an officer of the juvenile court deserves some notice from the officer in question. Anna Wilton has been often before the court for her neglect of her children. The court made every effort to induce this mother to keep her children free from contact with the creatures who were the mother's associates, made every possible effort to induce her to see where such teachings would eventually lead her daughters. The neglect of her children by this mother is a moral neglect, more than a physical, for which she will be judged in a higher court some day. The trouble at the Institutional church was witnessed by the matron and housekeeper of the institution and little children who were frightened at the noise and language of the woman who came there to annoy those in charge of the children. When the matron called me over the telephone to come and aid them, I went, not to arrest Mrs. Wilton, but to protect the children and those in charge of them from insult and abuse. I ordered her to leave the building. Her answer was an attempt to strike me. Her statement that I was knocked down and beaten is untrue. Sympathy may be felt where it rightly belongs, for the poor little ones who are in a far worse plight than if they were orphans, so far as their mother is concerned. EDGAR WARDEN.

A GIRL RIDER'S STRANGE FEAR.

"Bronco Buster" Who Admits That She Hasn't the Nerve to Cross the Ocean.

From the New York Telegram.

How many girls who cross to Europe every summer would ride a man killing bronco or a bucking, goring steer? Probably none of our New York girls would care to try it. And yet, in crossing the Atlantic, many a timid girl has done a thing which Annie Shaffer, the girl broncho buster, admits she hasn't the nerve to do.

There is a moment in the course of Buffalo Bill's Wild West show where the cowboy band stops tooting. That is when Miss Annie Shaffer swings into her Mexican saddle, aboard a bronco guaranteed to buck. No band can keep time to a bucking bronco. And, moreover, the band players, like the other members of the congress of Rough Riders, want to see what the brute will do.

"Yes, I could have gone to Europe, only I'm afraid to go out on the bounding billows, with nothing to see but water," said Miss Shaffer, as she reflectively pulled the fringe of her short leather skirt. And she had just before told of a man killer, an "outlaw" horse, that she atempted to ride and that leaped into the air and fell backward on her, breaking three of her ribs.

She had said she expected to die with her "boots on" and was willing to tackle that same "man killer" again, but drowning or the fear of it kept her away from the ocean.

"I just naturally drifted into bronco busting," she said in reply to questions. "And by bronco let me explain that that means an unbroken horse that bucks. I understand Easterners call any gentle broken Western cow pony a broncho.

"My father, John Shaffer, has a ranch thirty miles from Fort Worth, Tex. I grew up there and rode a pony before I could walk. I can't remember when I didn't ride. I helped around the ranch with the roping and driving. I did a man's work.

"The love for adventure and danger was in me. At 14 I tried my first bucking bronco. It took a good many nasty throws before I became expert. In eight years I've learned so well I am seldom thrown.

"I rode at local exhibitions in Texas, for a woman bronco buster is a rarity even down there. This last winter there was an exhibition at Dennison, Tex., where they offered me $300 to attempt to ride a big gray 'man killer'—'an outlaw'—that had killed one cowboy in the past, though I didn't hear of it until after I tried.

"The gray weighed 1,150 pounds and was a fighter. They had to blindfold him before they could saddle him, and while a crowd was holding him I jumped into the saddle, set my spurs into him and he began. I was giving him the whip and thinking he was bucking fine, when he jumped into the air and fell backward on me.

"It broke three ribs and laid me up ten months. But I would try him again, for enough money, for I know that he's a 'back falling' horse, and can look out for it and clear the saddle in a fall.

"It's hard to do, in skirts—hard enough for men to do—but I can do it. Not for my health, though.

"I never know how the broncos are going to act. Twice since I joined the show I've had accidents. Once a bronco began 'sun fishing,' rearing from side to side, and fell over on his side, stunning me. Another time one went through the scenery canvas with me riding. You can't rehearse that act.

"But if broncos are bad you should see me on a bucking steer. I have ridden them in Western local exhibitions. The men tie a rope around the steer's body and I had to hold to that while the animal bucked, wriggled and tried to gore me. No saddle or bridle. One time a steer's long horn ripped my skirt.

"On another occasion the steer threw me, turned and charged, head down, to gore me, when a cowman dropped him with a lariat. Those steers are as bad as bull fight bulls for killing people.

"The 'looping the gap' in an automobile is nothing compared to riding a crafty 'outlaw' horse or a wicked steer. On one occasion a showman with a diving horse, on which a woman took a high dive, offered $1,000 for any one else who'd ride the horse over. I can't swim, but I tried to take him up. He backed out.

"We're always in the saddle in the cattle country. We have dances on horseback. I can do eight dances riding."

The girl bronco buster stood up, slim and lithe, from red banded sombrero to dusty spurred boots. She wore a linen duster, leather skirt and knickers, while, femininely enough, a charm, held by a slim gold chain, hid behind her red neck bandanna.

"For luck," she explained. "I don't expect to die a natural death. It's not a profession to recommend to your woman readers. I'll probably die with my boots on. Who knows?"

RIVER TRAFFIC IN MEXICO.

Picturesque Port Scenes at the Tampico Market Place.

From the Mexican Herald.

TAMPICO—Perhaps no city of its size in Mexico has so picturesque a market place as Tampico. Activity at the waterport, the gateway to the city, with its morning flotilla of dugouts propelled by natives and laden to the walls with the tropical products of the jungles, is a sight not seen in many cities of the republic.

It would be a difficult matter to estimate the number of people who are directly dependent upon the mercantile supplies of this port, but it is certain that the number can be written with six figures. More than 5,000 of these boats are in commission on the Tamesi and Panuco rivers, they vary in length from twenty to sixty feet, and carry the wild and cultivated products of the interior to Tampico, where they discharge their cargoes and reload with merchandise and other supplies.

With two great waterways, the Tamesi and the Panuco, the native navigators find their business profitable, despite the fact it requires about thirty days to make a round trip to distant points on the river. Every conceivable form of tropical plant and fruit may be found in their cargoes, as well as native made earthen ware and other manufactured articles. A long pole is the only compass required by the captain of one of these barques, but he wields the bamboo which pilots him safely over the shoal filled waters of a tropical waterway. Many of the plantations along the rivers keep several of these boats in commission all the time, carrying their smaller products to the market and bringing back supplies for the hacienda.

In the early hours of the morning green bananas are piled up along the wharves like cordwood, baskets of cocoanuts, pineapples, wild and cultivated lemons and oranges, and innumerable other products of the tropics can be seen in enormous quantities. And it is surprising how quickly the supply of the day is exhausted. A string of freight cars on the track opposite the market are waiting for a portion of most every cargo, and by noon there is little left but the small fruits and vegetables in moderate quantities.

UP GO THE MEAT PRICES

A GENERAL ADVANCE OF FIVE CENTS A POUND BY THE DEALERS.

Retailers Blame the Packers and the Packers Say the Financial Flurry Did It—A Scarcity of Cattle the Direct Cause, They Declare.

Retail prices of meat have been increased from two and a half to five cents a pound by the butchers and grocers in the last week. The retailers blame the packers and the packers say the high prices are the result of a decrease in the receipts of live stock. The price of cattle advanced last week sixty cents on the hundred pounds.

The down town butchers and caterers quote the following advances: Sirloin steak, from 17½ cents to 20 cents a pound; round steak, 12½ cents to 15 cents a pound; porterhouse steak, 25 cents to 30 cents; roast beef, 15 cents to 20 cents; lamb loin chops, 25 cents to 30 cents; lamb rib chops, 30 cents to 35 cents.

Prices of pork fluctuate with the live stock market. Pork chops have not risen in price and are about 15 cents a pound.

THE PACKERS STARTED THE ADVANCE.

"We have been compelled to raise the retail prices because the packers have advanced the wholesale prices," a dealer said last night. "The packers began to advance the prices of beef a month ago. For awhile we stood the raise believing the market would go back to normal, but in the last week or ten days we have realized that we would have to raise the retail prices as there seemed to be no promise of the packers' prices declining.

"A retailer does not like to raise prices because it disturbs his trade and causes dissatisfaction among his customers, but he has to do so for self protection when an advance in the packers' prices remains stationary. Indications are that the present high prices will continue."

A FALLING OFF IN RECEIPTS.

The high prices of live cattle are charged to the flurry in the money market several months ago. When the money pinch came there was a liquidation movement and a rush of cattle to market and now there is a shortage in the supply. The breaking up of the large ranches and the marketing of large herds several months ago to make farms for the homeseekers is also given as a cause for the present shortage of cattle in the market. The small farms that were created from the large ranches have not yet begun to produce while under the old regime the ranches produced large herds.

At the five Western markets the last week 24,000 fewer cattle were marketed than in the same week last year. In Kansas City the shortage was 6,500 compared with a year ago.

THREE POLES IN A CONCERT.

Sembrich, Paderewski and Adamowski Play and Sing at a Benefit.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Three Poles made music in Carnegie hall this afternoon for the pleasure of a large audience and the pecuniary benefit of the Legal Aid society. It was a large assembly that gathered to listen to the three artists and the society came off with both honor and profit. The dauntless three of this occasion were Mme. Marcella Sembrich of the Metropolitan Opera house, Ignace Jan Paderewski, pianist of the wide, wide world, and Timothee Adamowski, violinist of Boston and the Adamoski Tri.

Mr. Paderewski opened the proceedings according to his custom something near a half hour later than the advertised hour. But the impatient public was well repaid by his sonorous and varied playing of his own theme and variations, a composition which has been long ago described as a work worthy of much consideration.

Mme. Sembrich contributed the next number, an air from Moniusko's opera, "Halka." Mr. Adamowski played Paderewski's pretty melody in A flat and an air de ballet of his own, which won him such hearty recalls that he added the familiar unaccompanied "Gavotte" of Bach.

Now came the piece-de-resistance of the concert, the "Air L'Ameo," from Mozart's "Il Re Pastore," sung by Mme. Sembrich, with piano accompaniment by Mr. Paderewski and violin obligato by Mr. Adamowski. It seemed as if the audience would have heard this again, but the artists hardened their hearts and made only bows in acknowledgement of the applause.

Mme. Sembrich sang next a group of five songs, including "Hark, Hark, the Lark," and "Nussbaum," to which she added, after long acclamations, the piquant serenade of Strauss.

Mr. Paderewski aroused much enthusiasm by playing five Chopin numbers, with the inevitable extras, including the "Butterfly," played in wondrous large style. Mme. Sembrich sang a group of songs by Paderewski, the composer playing exquisite accompaniments, and beautiful songs they were, too. But the audience would not go home till the prima donna sang her perennial Chopin "Maiden's Wish," accompanying herself. It was a joyous afternoon.

RAIDED A "BLIND TIGER."

In an Armourdale House the Police Found a Large Stock of "Booze."

Five patrolmen from the Armourdale police station raided a "blind tiger" at 934 St. Paul street at 11:30 o'clock last night. James Hogan, who was in charge of the place, was arrested on a charge of vagrancy. The officers found in the joint twelve cases of beer, a gallon of whisky and three cases of empty beer bottles.

Telephoning From Eiffel Tower.

From the New York Times.

PARIS—For the last few weeks the French war office has been experimenting at the Eiffel tower with the system of wireless telephony invented by Lee de Forest, and this fact has been made known through the cable dispatches. But the success of the experiments and their scope have just been published.

Sets of apparatus were installed at the tower, in the fort of Mont Valerien, and at Villejuif, a southern suburb of Paris. The experiment for telephonic communication between Villejuif and the Eiffel tower succeeded excellently. Mrs. de Forest, using the apparatus at Villejuif, spoke quite easily to her husband at the Eiffel tower, more than six miles away.

By means of the apparatus at Eiffel tower and in Fort Mont Valerien, a conversation was carried on at a distance of three and a half miles with equal ease. The experiments were carried on before several officers of the French army and navy. Mr. de Forest has stated that he is entirely satisfied with what he has done. He is to make similar experiments in Germany and Italy.

The Death of John P. Miller.

John P. Miller, who had been in business at the stock yards twelve years, died last night at the home of his sister, Mrs. K. M. Taylor, 3840 McGee street. He was born in Sturgeon, Mo., and was 64 years old. The burial will be in St. Louis.

"MERRY WIDOW" CHURCH WAR.

Women Quote Apostle as Authority for Defying Ministers—Hamlet in Reply.

From the Chicago Examiner.

Even the Bible has been dragged into the controversy now agitating the Chicago churches concerning the wearing of "merry widow" hats during services.

Following the "ukase" delivered from several pulpits on Easter Sunday ordering the "merry widows" to a position under the seats beside the hats of the men folk, the women have discovered wherein their pastors shall be set at naught.

The first epistle of the Apostle Paul to the Corinthians, 11:5, 6, forms the rock on which they found their faith and intention to "just wear their 'merry widows' anyhow."

The pastors meanwhile are quoting the passage from Shakespeare and expressing grave fears that the millinery war that evolved the "merry widow" hat will draw debutantes, matrons and even feminine church leaders of the fashionable congregations into a league with the powers below instead of allowing them to sit bareheaded under the influence that comes from on high.

The Rev. Abel M. White, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, La Salle avenue and Locust street, was pronounced in his declarations that the hats subjected the congregation to the greatest annoyance and inconvenience.

"I often request the men to refrain from putting their hats on just as a hint to the women to take theirs off" said he, "and I am of the belief that the letter of Paul merely had a local application.

"In that time and place the headdress of the women was very modest and consisted merely of a drapery. The women who wore no drapery were considered 'scarlet women' and Paul's letter was written with this in mind."

The women who have taken up the gage of battle hurled by the ministry in discussing their articles of faith refuse to mention that portion declaring that the woman be shorn and shaven beyond saying that it is "ridiculous to even think of such a thing." The fact that it is all a part of the Bible is sufficient for them.

Mrs. LaVerne W. Noyes, 130 Lake Shore drive, is one of the stanchest advocates of her sex on the question.

"I believe," said she, "that the minister who asks the women of his church to remove their hats is altogether too vain of his good looks or the magnetic qualities of his presence to be given consideration.

"Gazing at a preacher is not like witnessing a dramatic production and I believe that if folks go to church in a spirit of prayer and meditation the apparel of other people will not trouble them. It is a blow at personal liberty to request a woman to remove her hat in church.

"A woman cannot be happy without her spring hat and I think that the true purpose of a real gentleman is to try and make life as happy for the women as he can.

"Anyway, the Bible advocates the wearing of headdress and I think the ministers would better keep silent on the subject."

The "Merry Widow" Hat.

From the New York World.

With "Merry Widow" hats serving as a screen to hide a church fire from the congregation, delaying an express train until the wearer could be extricated from the aisle of a Pullman car and raising a question of ecclesiastical discipline in New Jersey churches, this millinery monstrosity may be thought to have reached its climax of sensationalism. To what further extremes of breadth is it destined to go? It has already relegated the parasol to uselessness. Its possibilities as an aid to a seaside tete-a-tete on the sand will not be lost on the summer girl.

The sudden outbreak of the big hat is one of the social phenomena of the year. It is a form of millinery measles and will run its course unchecked. Ridicule will be leveled at it and satire shot at it, but the fair wearers will remain as blissfully unconcerned as when they wore crinolines and chignons. The eternal feminine is amenable to but one authority. She acknowledges no dictator but fashion. An interstate millinery law would merely add to the size of her hat and a special message increase its vogue.

The morality of the "Merry Widow" hat is sure to provoke discussion. Its very name connotes wickedness. In fact, it is a protective device encompassing woman's head as with defensive armor and compelling man to keep his distance. It is a millinery chevaux-de-frise which makes any osculatory attack on the part of the male a perilous proceeding.

Not a Single Thought.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

"I hope, Mr. Smith," the young man began, "that you share in the confidence of your daughter seems to repose in me."

Her father nodded with a receptive air.

"I am now getting $25 a week," the young man continued, "and I want to know if that—is, I thought that circumstances——"

"Exactly. I understand your embarrassment. We all go through that. You want to know if $25 a week is enough to marry on."

"No-o. I was going to ask if you could let me have $10 until pay day."

THE DARK WAY FOR TOLEDO

ARMOUR'S SWATSMEN AT THE ZERO END OF A 5 TO 0 GAME.

Monte Cross's Players Performed Like Real Athletes—"Ducky" Swan Tossed an Admirable Game and Was Well Supported.

No lights were gleaming in the victory cabin for Armour's children at the ball village yesterday afternoon. The Toledoans trod the narrow path, dark, gloomy, wearisome, for nine brief innings. Only once, in the fifth, did a light far away, cast a ray of hope in the lane of the visitors and then the athletes of Monte Cross leaped into the breach and snuffed the candle ere its flickering gleam lighted the way to the plate for the Armourites. The Blues were never in the shadow and Armour wired the sad tidings home. This was his message: Blues 5, Hens 0.

The fracas was as tight as the opening game was loose. It was as replete with fast, peppery fielding as the first affair was characterized by sloppy play. Three rapid fire double plays were recorded. Two of these went to the Blues. In the fourth Armbruster led off with a beaut rasp to center for two bags. McCarthy was an easy out, "Buster" going to second. Lister lined a fierce drive toward second. Roy Brashear stabbed the ball and tossed Armbruster out at second. The other came in the fifth and it proved the play that snuffed the only light that gleamed for the Armourites. Hopkins pried open the round with a clean smash to left for a sack. Grover Land placed another in the same place, Kerwin holding Hopkins at second. Asher whiffed. Jap Barbeau dropped a Texas leaguer over second. Hugh Hill made a good run for the fly and nabbed the ball in time to hold Hopkins at third. Bases jagged and only one in pickle. The light began to gleam for "Bill" Armour's hopefuls. Hinchman smote a sizzling grounder toward third. Paul Krueger, playing in, hooked the ball, hurled Hopkins out at the platter and Joe Crisp whipped the batter out at first. Then and there the gloom thickened for Toledo.

OUR ATHLETES STARTED WELL.

The Blues started on the right foot from the jump. Ed Asher, the O. and P. pitcher, who held our athletes to five blows in Toledo, was on the firing dome. He had a lot of recklessness in his wing, but he unloaded most of it in the first. Hallman walked. Cross followed suit. Beckley's sacrifice advanced the runners to third and second. Brashear drew the third walk of the session. Bases full and one out. Looked good for Monte's boys. But just at this stage Joe McCarthy introduced his swell double play to the Saturday matinee audience. Hugh Hill cracked a screaming line drive toward third. Joe looked neither to right nor to left, but gallantly clutched the ball in his manly mitts and shoved his pedal extremities to the bag, doubling Billy Hallman. That play put our athletes on Queer street when hopes were rosy.

"Ducky" Swan was hoisting his teasers in his own inimitable style and the heavy swatsmen of the Armour crew were at his mercy all the itinerary. It was masterly ball the little Southerner tossed and elegant support his mates accorded him. The Blue batsmen started their run getting in the third. One down, Billy Hallman beat out an infield hit. The hit was a hot grounder over second and Barbeau made a great play, stabbing the hit, but not in time to nip the runner. Then Cross was tendered his second pass. Beckley grounded out to first, the runners advancing. Brashear hit one to Asher, who flirted long enough with it to permit Hallman to cross the plate in safety and Roy to cop first uninjured. Hill slammed a hot one past second counting Cross and Brashear. Kerwin was easy.

THE ONLY EARNED RUN.

The next Blue count happened in the sixth. Kerwin walked and Krueger sacrificed him to second. Crisp whiffed and Asher heaved Swan's rap over Lister's cupola, Kerwin tallying. The last register of the Cross crowd appeared in the seventh and was the only earned run of the day. One out, Beckley placed his only blow of the day into short left. Brashear followed with a lucky Texas leaguer that fell in safety over Lister's tower. Hill popped up to Barbeau and the signal was passed for a double steal. The play worked to perfection, Jake reaching the pan unharmed while Brashear landed at second and paddled on to third on Land's low throw. Kerwin atmosphered. That was all the tallying. The score:

NOTES OF THE GAME.

To-day's affair with Toledo will be called at 3 o'clock. Chester Milton Brandom will pitch for the Blues. Grover Gillen will toss for Toledo.

Monte Cross is eyeing the ball well. He walked the first three times he came to bat. The A. A. twirlers are finding Cross a hard man to pitch to.

It began to look as though Jake Beckley would go two games without a bit, but Jake couldn't stand for that.

Hugh Hill went into the game with a bandaged knee, but the fan would not have guessed it from the way the center fielder played. His one hit counted two Blues and he made four neat catches. His running-in catch of Lister's short fly in the last half of the ninth was one sweet catch.

Howard Wakefield, batting for Asher in the ninth, failed to land a pinch hit. To cop two in two days was too much for Wakefield. There aren't many Jack McCarthys in this league.

Asher, who twirled good ball for the visitors yesterday, was the star pitcher of the Ohio and Pennsylvania league last year. He won twenty-five games and lost ten.

Jap Barbeau was there with four cleanly accepted chances and one blow. Barbeau's headgear must have been a pipe, for the Jap hasn't worn the affair in Kansas City. His cap band pulled down is some stall.

Hopkins was the only Hen who became familiar enough with Swan's serves to gather two hits. Both of Hopkins's singles were clean drives to left.

Grover Land is playing a clever game behind the bat this year. Armour probably has the best backstopping department in the league.

McCarthy plays a great game around the third bag, and Mr. Elwert will have to travel along some to improve on the brand of ball Joe has been exhibiting during the Toledo club's stay here. Five chances were accepted by McCarthy without the semblance of an error yesterday.

Dan Kerwin didn't have a chance in left except several ground hits that he took the best of care to handle correctly.

JAYHAWKERS WON A CLOSE GAME.

Washburn Was Beaten in a Ninth-Inning Finish, 6 to 5.

LAWRENCE, KAS., May 2.—A brilliant batting bee in the ninth inning gave the Jayhawkers a close victory over the Washburn college nine this afternoon, Kansas taking the long end of a 6 to 5 score. It was a neck-and-neck race from the pole, first Washburn having the lead, then Kansas another seesaw and the game over in the ninth, with their end of the score up. Both pitchers were batted freely and generally for long bingles.

Washburn opened the hostilities in the first inning, a base on balls, a single and two-bagger and McCampbell hit by a pitched ball netting them two scores. The Jayhawkers took the lead again by a two-bagger by Carlson and singles by Jennings, Angney and Doubleday. This closed the scoring until the eighth, when Washburn landed on Harlan for two singles, which, coupled with a base on balls, pushed two runs across the pan. In the last of the ninth Hoffman pulled the game out of the fire by a pretty three-bagger, followed by a sacrifice by Rockerfeller which tied the score. Gibbs followed with a single, stole second, reached third and finally scored the winning run on a wild throw into the bleachers.

The K. U. freshmen defeated Dickinson county high school this morning by a score of 2 to 1.

SUSPENDED FOR 60 DAYS

THE KANSAS CITY ATHLETIC CLUB IS UNDER THE A. A. U. BAN.

Failure to Send a Delegate to a Recent Meeting in St. Louis and Alleged Non-Registration of Athletes the Cause.

The Kansas City Athletic club is under a suspension of sixty days from the Western division of the Amateur Athletic union, with headquarters in St. Louis. The suspension dates from May 1. There are several reasons given out by the St. Louis authorities for the suspension. The foremost among these reasons is that the K. C. A. C. ignored the Western A. A. U. board of directors by not sending a representative to the meeting of that body held at the Central Y. M. C. A. in St. Louis the night of April 16. Another reason advanced is that the Blue Diamond athletes who competed in the indoor games in Convention hall, March 20, were not registered in the A. A. U. The club is threatened with permanent banishment from the A. A. U. unless sufficient reasons for these actions are submitted at once.

When the St. Louis board gave the Western championships to Christian Brothers college the K. C. A. C. protested, alleging that it was not notified of the meeting and asking that another meeting be called in order that the Kansas City organization might have a chance to bid for the games. The St. Louis officials agreed to do this and set the date for the meeting. But the Athletic club did not send a delegate. It is for this that the A. A. U. has called the club to account.

When Martin A. Delaney, the athletic director of the K. C. A. C., was arranging for the indoor meet he learned that James Masker, the local representative of the A. A. U., was out of the registration blanks. The chairman of the athletic committee wrote to St. Louis for blanks, but they failed to arrive by the time they were needed. Nor have they yet arrived. Delaney had each entry sign written statements covering the points of the registration blanks. These statements Delaney pinned to the entry blanks and mailed to Theodore Bland, the official handicapper.

Bland named the handicaps and returned them. No kick was made by Bland at that time, and it seemed that Delaney took the only way out of the dilemma. All the Kansas City Athletic club athletes, with the exception of three men, were registered in the A. A. U. and their cards were good on March 20, the date of the indoor games.

The St. Louis authorities also allege that the handicap of one of the Blue Diamond entries in a field avent was changed. Delaney says that none of the handicaps was changed and that the handicaps went to the printer just as they came from the official handicapper. There is to be another meeting of the A. A. U. board in St. Louis Wednesday night and Delaney may be sent there to straighten out the muddle if possible.

NATIONAL COMMISSION RULING.

Harry McCormick Reinstated and Willie McGill Turned Down.

CINCINNATI, May 2.—On the payment of a fine of $100 Harry E. McCormick, formerly of the Philadelphia National league club, will be reinstated, according to a decision reached today by the National Baseball association. McCormick left the game to engage in other business, but while thus engaged he played various times with other clubs harboring ineligible players, for which reason the fine is assessed.

Player McGill's request that he be declared a free agent was denied, there being found no action in his purchase by the St. Louis Americans from the Austin club of the Western association and later return to that club which would warrant such decision.

Double Header at Stevens Park.

There will be two games this afternoon at Stevens park, Twenty-fourth and Summit streets. The first will be called at 1:30, between the Bentons and Marfordings. The second between the R. S. Stevens and Master Plumbers. They will line up as follows:

HOW TO RUN RELAY RACES

THE LAST OF DELANEY'S SERIES OF INSTRUCTIONS TO WARD SCHOOLERS

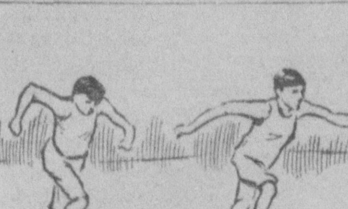
An Outline for the Week's Work—The Science and Art of Receiving and Getting Away With Exchanges Thoroughly Explained.

(This is the last of Martin A. Delaney's series of instructions for the ward school athletes. In this article the K. C. A. C. coach explains relay racing for boys and tells the young athletes how to train for the 145-yard relay.—Sporting Ed.)

BY MARTIN A. DELANEY, K. C. A. C. COACH.

In beginning I will outline the week's work for the boys who desire to become proficient in relay racing:

Monday—Try starting three times and run only fifteen yards, stopping slowly. Then try exchanges of relays. Make the exchanges every fifty yards. Try this twice. Then run 150 yards slowly and finish the last twenty-five yards at top speed.



THE START OF THE RELAY. NOTICE THE DIFFERENT WAYS OF SWINGING THE ARMS—ALL GOOD FOR BOYS.

Tuesday—No starts. Try exchanges of relays same as on Monday. Do this three times. Then run a fast fifty yards.

Wednesday—Start four or five times, but run only twenty yards each time. Slow up gradually. No exchanges on relays. Run 100 yards at top speed.

Thursday—Try three starts, each to be twenty yards. Try one exchange of relays. Run full distance (145 yards). After a rest run 150 yards slowly and finish the last thirty yards as hard as possible.

Friday—Try only starts and sprints. Five will do, and make each forty yards long. Walk back slowly before you try the next one.

Saturday—This will be trial day. Warm up by jogging slowly for fifty yards. Then make the full relay as hard as possible and afterwards run 100 yards at top speed.

Boys will notice that each day an exchange of relays is given. This is only because the boys are slow to take advantage of the rule which allows them the exchange between the starting point and a line drawn parallel with the same twenty feet in advance. When standing on the line ready for an exchange, the left foot should toe the starting point, the right foot should be directly behind the left foot about eighteen inches to two feet. The foot should point parallel with the starting line. The right leg should be bent at the knee, and the body should be in a crouching position, leaning well toward your runner, who is coming for the exchange. The right arm should be extended at full length, the left should be held back a little toward the body, so as to help give the body a swing when the start is made. As the runner nears you, say, about fifteen feet, then you start so as to exchange with him between the twenty-foot lines. This is the only real science in relay racing, and the team which makes the best and fastest exchanges will be the one to win. If you have drawn the outside position, it would be well to reverse the positions and start with the right foot on the starting line.

The schedule above will do for the next two weeks, or until the day of the meet, May 15. The runner should do no training the day before the meet. And only light work for two or three days previous.

The jumper should not jump after May 12. Rest the spring muscles and let them relax for the final test.

At a recent field day many boys were troubled with sore and tired feet. A good remedy for this is to wash in cold water (add a little salt) twice a day. Rub with hand afterwards.

I also noticed that boys, both large and small, all had and were eating lemons. This is wrong. Your apparent thirst was caused from being nervous, waiting for your event to take place, and you must accustom your nerves to bear this strain. Instead of eating a lemon, say "I will do my best to win this race," and figure how to contest the same. Train the will power with the body, and as the contest draws near you will notice how much easier it is to compete. After the race has started, never let the mind persuade you that you cannot win. Always go in to win and never give up. Remember, the other man has gone as far as you, and is just as tired.

Boys must now stop drinking coffee, which is the stomach's most deadly enemy. Also milk, which we know affects the wind; pie, pudding and ice cream, which will offset the training and soften the system and ruin the stomach, and ice water, lemonade and soups will do the same.

THE EXCHANGE OF RELAYS ON A TURN.

A MEDLEY OF SPORT.

Cy Young has pitched 730 games in major league company, winning 459.

Denmark will be represented in the Olympian games by seventy men and women contestants.

The Milwaukee A. C. announces that it is certain of getting Ketchel and Papke for a feature bout May 25.

George S. Lyon, amateur golf champion of Canada and winner of the Olympian honors at the St. Louis games, will go to England for the Olympic games.

South Africa will probably have a lacrosse team in the Olympic games, made up almost altogether, if not entirely, of Scotch Africans in England at the universities or in business.

The famous old sloop Shadow was burned in the Chelsea, Mass., fire, and thus another of the old-timers has passed away, leaving behind, however, a history of many brilliant victories.

Tom Longboat's amateur standing will be acted upon by the Canadian Olympic committee. It is also settled that Longboat will not go to England unless he wins in the Toronto trials June 6.

"Chief" Zimmer, the famous catcher and later National league umpire, who is now residing in Cleveland during the summer, has been selected to umpire the high school senate games. Unless there are conflicting dates he will umpire all.

Ben Vickery of Philadelphia is wondering what has become of the little English fighter, Boyo Driscoll. Vickery cabled him the price of a trip to this country some time ago, but so far he has heard nothing from the other side regarding him.

The men who have operated the famous Glenville race course at Cleveland will cut it up into building lots and sell it. A new home is to be established at the Forest City Stock farm, twelve miles from Cleveland, and it may be that Grand circuit racing will take place there.

Members of the Chicago Athletic association have been asked by the board of directors to contribute $1 each to a fund to send an American team of athletes to the Olympic games to be held in London, England, next July. It is estimated by the directors that $8,000 can be obtained by these means.

Manager Clarke of Pittsburg is having a portable cover made for the infield of the Pirates' grounds. The canvas will be held by poles seventy feet high, and the end over second base attached to a wire running between two higher poles set a considerable distance from first and third bases on the foul lines. If the experiment is successful Pittsburg will play in the rain.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, July 7 and 8, the American Automobile association will hold at Buffalo, N. Y., the most important gathering of motorists, and others, highway commissioners and others interested in the problems of the car that has ever taken place in this country. It is planned to make it similar in many respects to the international affair occurring abroad this year. The convention will immediately be followed by the start of the Glidden tour on July 9.

No expert in the history of the light harness sport has attracted so much attention in racing circles as the announcement that the directors of the New England Trotting Horse Breeders' association has adopted the suggestion of Secretary Jewett to hold a $50,000 handicap trotting race as the feature of the Grand circuit meeting at the Readville track in August. The event was heralded with enthusiasm all over the United States, and promises to establish a new era in trotting in this country.

Everything in the sporting line in England this year will be subsidiary to the Olympic carnival, which takes on a national aspect, and is being supported by every sport loving Briton. In recent years Great Britain has lost several championships which she held for years, notably rowing, which the Belgians captured; short distance swimming, won by C. M. Daniels, a New Yorker; court tennis, won by Jay Gould, an American; lawn tennis, won by Australians, and some other minor championships. This year the Englishmen will make every effort to regain these titles.

Advance has been made toward the bringing about of the Imperial cricket tournament which it is proposed to hold in England next year. The county clubs were placed in possession of the draft scheme a few weeks ago, and the M. C. C. general committee met to receive their replies. As a result of the favorable expression of opinion the following cablegram has been dispatched to Australia and South Africa through the respective representatives on the special committee, Mr. L. O. S. Poidevin and Captain E. G. Wynward: "Committee M. C. C. cordially invites you to send a representative eleven to England, 1909, to take part in imperial cricket contest. Counties have accepted principle of draft scheme, which has been forwarded to you through your representative."

THE ENTRIES ARE HERE.

Two Hundred and Sixty-Five Athletes Will Compete in the Conference Meet.

Athletes to the number of 265 will compete in the first annual track and field meet of the Missouri valley conference schools to be held in this city Saturday, May 23. Following are the official entry numbers of the seven schools in the conference:

Drake	50
Nebraska	45
Washington university	44
Iowa	39
Ames	37
Missouri	28
Kansas	21

Drake will send the largest number, fifty athletes from the Des Moines school being slated to contest. Kansas has the smallest entry. The place for holding the meet has not been definitely decided, but it probably will be at Elm Ridge.

J. C. SNYDER, A MISSOURI TWO-MILER, WHO IS EXPECTED TO DO WELL IN THAT EVENT.

Martin Delaney of the Kansas City Athletic club will handle the big meet, which promises to be the greatest and classiest track and field meet ever pulled off west of Chicago.

HATCH OF CHICAGO WON MARATHON.

First Regiment Winner to Represent America in Olympic Games.

ST. LOUIS, May 2.—Displaying remarkable reserve strength at the finish of a wearing run of twenty-five miles, Sidney R. Hatch of the First Regiment A. C. of Chicago, to-day for the third time won the Missouri Athletic club's Marathon race and gained the right to represent America in the Olympic games at London this summer. Hatch made the twenty-five miles in 2:29:00 3-5, official time, breaking his own record of 2:39:26 for the same course. The official markings for the four runners who followed the leader were:

Joseph Forshaw, Missouri Athletic club, second. Time, 2:33:50.

Alexander Thibeau, First Regiment A. C., Chicago, third. Time, 2:37:48 2-5.

A. L. Corey, First Regiment A. C., Chicago, fourth. Time, 2:38:47.

F. L. Jackson, M. A. C., fifth. Time, 2:45:44 2-5.

Hatch's time was but five minutes slower than the world's record of 2:24:00, held by Tom Longboat. The runners started from Freeburg, Ill., promptly at noon, and until the small group of leaders reached the middle of Eads bridge, a few hundred yards from the finish, Forshaw of the M. A. C. looked like an easy winner, but he began to flag at the approach to the bridge, and in the middle Hatch dashed up and took the lead from him. Following their teammates' example, Thibeau and Corey of the First Regiment A. C. of Chicago closed up the gap between them and the two leaders and finished ahead of Jackson of the M. A. C., who had run alongside Forshaw for more than twenty miles.

There were thirty-five entries in the race, the majority of them being local runners. Those entered from other cities were: R. J. Reeves, unattached, Oklahoma City; W. M. Campbell, unattached, Belleville, Ill.; Joe Greenrod, unattached, Belleville, Ill.; William Transler, Armour square, Chicago; J. L. Felte, unattached, Chicago; G. E. Vick, Armour square, Chicago; G. Marriman, Illinois A. C., Chicago; C. E. Heath, unattached, Chicago; R. Selle, jr., Chicago.

TRYOUTS AT LINCOLN.

Nebraska Athletes for Big Meets Will Be Named Wednesday.

LINCOLN, NEB., May 2.—Sixty athletes at the University of Nebraska participated in a preliminary track meet to-day and from the winners Dr. R. G. Clapp, physical director, will make his selections to represent the Cornhusker institution in the coming meets with Kansas and Minnesota universities and at the Missouri Valley conference meet May 23 in Kansas City. Dr. Clapp is to announce his selections on Wednesday of next week. The Kansas-Nebraska meet is to be held Saturday, May 9, in Lawrence. Sixteen men are to constitute the Nebraska team.

In to-day's preliminaries unfavorable weather conditions prevented any performances out of the ordinary. The Cornhuskers promise to be strong only in the weight events and the prospects for high honors at the Missouri Valley meet are not encouraging at this time.

RECORDS BROKEN AT CAMBRIDGE.

The Meet Was Won by Worcester With 28 Points.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., May 2.—Two records were broken and one equaled in the annual interscholastic track and field games under the auspices of the Harvard Athletic association to-day. The meet was won by Worcester with 28 points; Phillips-Andover was second, with 27 points, and the Volkmann school of Boston, third, with 15 points. The feature was the work of E. E. Nelson of the Volkmann school, who ran the 100 yards in 9 4-5 seconds, which is claimed to be within a fifth of a second of the world's record.

Delaney Will Referee Dual Meet.

Martin A. Delaney of the K. C. A. C. has been selected to act as referee and clerk of course at the Kansas-Nebraska dual meet scheduled for May 9. Last year this meet was protested. The Nebraska two-miler was disqualified because he ran off the track. This lost the meet for the Cornhuskers.

Middies Defeated Johns Hopkins.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., May 2.—The midshipmen field and track representatives defeated the team from the Johns Hopkins university on the academy oval this afternoon. The score was 69 to 27, in favor of the midshipmen, out of a possible 96, the points being made on a basis of five to firsts and three to seconds.

James Murphy, a Former Jockey, Dead.

MIDDLETON, N. Y., May 2.—James F. Murphy, formerly a well known jockey, was found dead in bed here to-day. His death is believed to have resulted from heart failure.

Chicago Defeated Purdue in Dual Meet.

LAFAYETTE, IND., May 2.—In a close and exciting dual track meet on Stuart field this afternoon, Chicago defeated Purdue by a score of 62 to 55.

THE LONDON SPORT LETTER

PARISIANS LIKE "LE BOXE" AND AMERICANS ARE GETTING THE MONEY.

Baseball Will Also Be Introduced in France This Summer—Tommy Burns Is Preparing to Squeeze Another Lemon.

LONDON, May 2.—Willie Lewis, the American fighter, who is now in France, agrees with Tommy Burns that there is more easy money in the pugilistic game on this side of the water than there is at home. He manages to get on a fight about as often as he cares for one, and his openings are generally easy. Lewis appears to be about as far superior to the middle weight condition of the English pugilists as Burns is to the heavy weights. The Parisians are greedy for "le boxe" and the fight promoters in Paris are not only able to offer good purses, but their bank accounts ares waxing fat.

The Americans in Paris are about to introduce a game of baseball into France. The new organization of American athletes and the "Athletic Club of Paris" made plans to lay out a diamond on their club grounds at Sandicourt and professional ball players from the United States will be imported to coach the members of the club. Many Frenchmen are in the new organization and they have become enthused over the great American game. The introduction of baseball is only one feature of the progress the founders of the club hope to make. Silas H. Jenkins, who has been a member of the Illinois A. C. of Chicago, for many years and is now secretary of the Athletic Club of Paris, said yesterday that he believed that Frenchmen could be made very proficient in baseball, as they show great fondness for all athletic sports.

There is no question but that association football has the call in public interest among British sports. If any further evidence of this fact is needed the fact that 120,000 people attended the match game between England and Scotland at Glasgow would furnish it. It is doubtful if there is any other sport in the world which would attract so great a paid attendance.

Tommie Burns, after his brief and profitable excursion across the channel, where he knocked out Jewy Smith just about as he did Moir, Palmer and Roach, is now getting ready for his match with Bill Squires of Australia, whom he defeated in San Francisco some months ago. While nobody expects Squires to be able to whip Burns, there is an impression that the Australian may be able to make a better show than the British fighters have been able to with the American. The bout will be fought in the open air on the Chelsea football grounds. These grounds will accommodate 100,000 spectators, and as the prices of admission are from one shilling up to three pounds, the promoters of the battle will be able to pay Burns a big figure, which he demands for his appearance, and ought to make a reasonably good thing out of it in addition.

The arrival here of Jack Johnson, the negro heavy weight, who claims that Burns is afraid of him, has aroused considerable interest. The idea that Burns is afraid of the negro is ridiculed here. Whether or not the match will be arranged between the two on this side is doubtful. It is hardly probable that one will be made if Burns holds out to his determination not to fight the negro unless he gets $30,000, win, lose or draw.

The defeat of Hackenschmidt by Gotch in Chicago caused considerable surprise here, and the impression is strong that Hack's claim that he did not get a fair deal in Chicago is founded on fact. The writer saw Hack recently and he stated emphatically that he had no doubt of his ability to defeat the American wrestler if the match was arranged at some neutral point. He is perfectly willing to meet Gotch in England or in France. He might be willing to arrange for a match in New York, but he certainly will not wrestle at any other place in the United States. He is very bitter over the treatment he receivd in America, and declares that never in his life has he met a man who so absolutely disregarded the rules of the game as did Goth in their recent match.

The Olympic regatta at Henley will undoubtedly be the greatest boat race which has ever been rowed. Already crews are assured from the United States, Australia, Germany, France, Canada, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Norway and Sweden. Great preparations are being made for the reception and care of the visiting oarsmen while they are here. The fact that the Belgium crew, which twice won the world's championship in the Henley regatta, was barred from competing this year has increased interest in the Olympic event. Much interest is felt here as to the American crew. Among oarsmen the chances of the Americans are not regarded as bright. While it is believed that it would be possible under proper conditions to get together a crew in the United States which would be extremely dangerous under conditions as they exist, it is believed that it will be found impossible to get eight comprising the best men in America together in time to enable them to acquire the time necessary to row a successful race.

The official course has been selected by the English Olympic committee for the Marathon race, which will be held on Friday, July 24, in connection with the Olympic games in London. It covers a distance of twenty-six and one-third miles, with the start in Windsor Great park and the finish in the Shepherds Bush stadium, and is full of small turns and twists varying in distance from a matter of yards to one of miles. It would be well for the American patrons to come over in ample time to familiarize themselves with the course, otherwise they will certainly be at a serious disadvantage in comparison with the English runners, who will be able to practice over it steadily.

COMMERCIAL LEAGUE OPENING.

Three Games Were Played in This Organization Yesterday.

The opening of the season in the Commercial Amateur Baseball league was celebrated yesterday. The fast Montgomery Ward & Co. team won from the good team of the Fidelity Trust company at Stevens park by the score of 15 to 13. The game, while loosely played, was interesting. At Schmelzer park the Union National Bank trimmed the McPike Drug company by the one-sided score of 7 to 2. The game was more interesting than the score would show, and the McPikes should show well later. At Chelsea park the Commercial National Bank team, the Kansas City, Kas., representative in the league, was smothered by the score of 13 to 6. The Commercial Nationals were handicapped by the absence of several of their good players, and will certainly do better in the future under the leadership of their manager, Ed Wilson. The scores follow:

M. Ward & Co.	0 0 7 1 1 0 0 1 5	15	9	3

Manhattan Aggies Won From Epworth.

MANHATTAN, KAS., May 2.—The Epworth university team, champions of Oklahoma, were defeated here to-day by the Kansas State Agricultural college team in a shut out game. The game was the fastest of the season and was cleanly played. The visitors could not get a man on third while the "aggies" runs came by opportune hits. The score was 4 to 0. The score by innings:

		R.	H.	E.

The Leavenworth Team Won.

LEAVENWORTH, KAS., May 2.—The Fort Leavenworth baseball team defeated the Frankfort, Kas., team by the score of 6 to 1 at the Soldiers' home grounds this afternoon. The soldiers were far the better players and the visitors had hard work to score. The batteries were: Fort Leavenworth, Trutner and Donovan; Frankfort, Nerchon and Nebon.

WITH THE "HEADSPINNERS" UNION.

A Lively Wrestling Campaign Planned by the M. A. C.

Manager W. D. Scoville has enough good wrestling matches in sight to keep Convention hall open for some time if he only closes the matches. After the Lundin-Gotch bout in Convention hall next Friday night he proposes to stage seven or eight bouts and pit the winner against the mighty man from Iowa. There are three men in particular that he is trying to secure. They are Tom Jenkins, Dr. Roller, the Seattle wonder, and Cazeaux, the French champion. The latter is in Montreal at present, but his manager, George Kennedy, writes that he will match him against any man the M. A. C. selects. Zybysco is also coming next month, and out of this collection of first class material he ought to be able to land a man who can make Frank Gotch work to the limit.

When Charley Hackenschmidt was here last week he said that he would like to meet Hjalmar Lundin for a side bet of $500. The news is evidently pleasing to Lundin. The big Swede writes as follows: "Will be in Kansas City about Wednesday and the first thing I do when I arrive will be to post that $500 Hackenschmidt is talking about. It looks like finding it to me. The only reason I have not dumped him before is simply because there was not enough money in the game for me. That $500 looks pretty soft and I hope the Missouri Athletic club will make a bid for the match."

While Dr. Roller is not very keen after a match just at present with the champion, he says that he will meet Jenkins, Cazeaux or Beell and then if he is successful he will tackle the champion. He wants a good tryout before breaking into real fast company. Two years ago Gotch met the Seattle man and agreed to throw him twice in an hour. After struggling on the mat for one hour Gotch failed to win a fall. This makes the doctor look like the real goods. It is to be hoped so, for if someone doesn't turn up shortly Gotch will be like Jeffries.

DEMAREST DEFEATED CONKLIN.

The Amateur Billiard Champion Played in Fine Form Last Night.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Calvin W. Demarest of the Chicago Athletic club defeated his clubmate, Charles F. Conklin, in the eighth game of the international amateur billiard tournament at the German Liederkranz club to-night. Demarest, who has held the national championship title for two years, ran out his quota of 400 points in seventeen innings, while Conklin's efforts only netted 123. By deft manipulation of the ivories Demarest made a run of 151, in this thirteenth inning, the best of the contest so far. Demarest's fine work was loudly applauded and ReRolle, who was practicing in the lower part of the building, ran upstairs and watched the young champion finish the game. The French expert congratulated Demarest for his splendid work. The score:

Demarest—12, 0, 0, 0, 6, 37, 47, 14, 8, 0, 2, 5, 151, 55, 22, 26, 15—Total 400. Average 23 9-17. High runs, 151, 55, 47.

Conklin—5, 1, 0, 0, 20, 9, 0, 13, 0 13, 0, 1, 34, 5, 16, 6—Total 123. Average 7 11-16. High runs, 34, 16, 13.

WITH THE Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball club is now fully organized and is open for games with any first class team, either in or out of the city. The following players have been signed: Mason, Stuyer, Strothers, Gallagher, Storm, Bowman, Etherton, R. Durbin, O. Durbin, Brockhouse Waters, Phillips, Loos, Riis, Gant, and Downs. They will carry at all times twelve men in uniform. Any team desiring a game for Saturday afternoons should either call up or write the baseball committee, 810 Wyandotte street, or O. B. Durbin, manager, at 1308 Union avenue, Home phone 4871 Main.

A most gratifying interest is being shown in the field and track work. Forty men are already doing regular training and new men are coming out every day. There is much good material in the bunch and Dr. Exner, who is coaching the men, is much pleased with the prospects. The Y. M. C. A. meet will be held at Lawrence on the K. U. grounds, Saturday June 6.

Last night the first of a series of try-outs for a water polo team was held in the swimming pool of the association. Reed, Downes, Beatty and "big" Huff look good for places on the team. From the material in sight it is expected that the team chosen will be one hard to defeat anywhere.

The association tennis courts have been in excellent condition for two weeks and a good many are getting into the game in spite of the cool weather. The tennis membership will be limited to fifty. Those who desire to play should get in at once.

THE HONORS TO LAWRENCE

WON THE ANNUAL INTERSCHOLASTIC TRACK AND FIELD MEET EASILY.

Dickinson County Highs Were Second and Overbrook Third — Martin Was the Star of the Meet—French Broke the High Jump Record.

LAWRENCE, KAS., May 2.—Before a crowd of 2,500 yelling and wildly enthusiastic high school students this afternoon, Lawrence High school carried off first honors in the annual interscholastic track and field meet, scoring a total of 43 points. Dickinson County High school, with a total of 20 points, carried off second place in the meet, while Overbrook, one of the smallest high schools entered in the contest, won third place on the honor roll, piling up 18½ points. Lawrence High school also won the silver loving cup offered for class A schools making the most points in the meet. The other high schools in this class scored as follows: Pittsburg 15½, Kansas City, Kas., 11½, Topeka 8½, Wichita 10 and Fort Scott 1.

Dickinson county led the class B schools, those having an enrollment between 125 and 250, with Ottawa following with 5 points, Paola 4 and Hutchinson 2. Overbrook, the winner of third place in the entire meet, easily won the loving cup offered for the small high schools. Burlingame came second with 11 points, Garnett 5, Wetmore 5, Argentine 3, Attica 3, Wellsville 2, Rosedale 2 and Halstead 2. Jefferson county won the class AA loving cup offered for teams of the combined high schools of the county making a total of 10 points to 3 by Waubaunsee county.

MARTIN THE STAR OF THE MEET.

"Dutch" Martin, captain of the Lawrence High school squad, was easily the star of the meet, winning firsts in three events, the high and low hurdles and the broad jump. He also ran a splendid race in the relay event. His fifteen points entitled him to the silver loving cup offered the individual athlete making the most points. In class B, Sterling, Davis and Perrill, all of Dickinson county, tied for the individual cup, each having won a single first. In class C, Brackney of Overbrook carried off the individual honors winning first in the shotput, second in the hammer throw and fourth in the discus.

The relay races were among the prettiest events of the meet. Lawrence again won among the class A teams, defeating teams from Kansas City, Kas., Topeka and Fort Scott by a wide margin. Dickinson county High school won the loving cup offered for the class B relay race, defeating teams from Ottawa, Hutchinson and Paola. Garnett in a close and exciting finish edged out a victory in the class C relay, defeating Argentine, Rosedale and Wellsville, Concordia, Wetmore and Halstead. Jefferson county defeated Wabaunsee county for the class A relay loving cup.

It was an ideal day for a meet. The weather was perfect and the track was in the best of condition. The crowd was by far the largest ever assembled on McCook in the five years the interscholastic athletic carnivals have been pulled off here, while the number of high schools entered was nearly twice that of last year. By noon the visitors from every nook and corner of the state commenced to pour out to McCook and a full half hour before the meet was to begin the bleachers was a mass of waving colors, while the shrill yells of the high school lads could be heard for blocks around. Lawrence and Topeka, of course, had the largest delegation of rooters and kept up a continual yell fest back and forth, while the other high schools would chime in with their war crys when one of their representatives crossed the tape among the winners. So many men were entered in all the events that the meet dragged along slowly, but the interest of the high school students did not lag and when the last event was being pulled off the rooting was even more lusty than when the first crack of the starter's gun was heard.

FRENCH OF PITTSBURG BROKE A RECORD.

The prettiest work of the day was done by French of Pittsburg, who broke the only record of the meet, crossing the bar in the high jump at five feet nine inches. This not only cracked the interscholastic record, but also raised the university record for this event a quarter of an inch. Martin of Lawrence did some pretty work in the hurdles, taking both events by a wide margin, without a competitor even in striking distance in either event. The prettiest contests from the spectators' standpoint were the half mile and mile. In each of these events some twenty odd men entered. They ran closely bunched for the first lap but the finish in both contests found them strung out half way around the track.

WOOD WAS THE TENNIS STAR.

This morning in the tennis tournament for the interscholastic championship of the state, Wood of Lawrence high school defeated Wilson of Horton by scores of 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-5. The finals were fast and exciting and brought forth by far the best tennis of the meet. Wood, champion in the singles, and his partner, Marshall, also of Lawrence high school, won the final match in doubles this afternoon, defeating Worth and Wellington of Salina, 6-0, 2-6, 6-2. City Tourney Starts To-Morrow.

The city tournament to be held at Kid Nichols's bowling academy will begin to-morrow night at 7:30 o'clock. This tournament is the first of its kind attempted in this city, and every bowler entered will be on practically an even basis, as the handicaps will be big factors in the scores. While new pins will not be used in every event, it will be the same thing, as every five-man team will shoot at the "bright ones," and they will have to hit them to get them. The alleys have been put in special shape for this "doings."

Amherst Beat Wesleyan in Dual Meet.

MIDDLETON, CONN., May 2.—Amherst won the dual track meet with Wesleyan to-day, scoring a total of 68 points to Wesleyan's 58. One record was broken, Faraday of Wesleyan doing the 440-yard dash in 51 2-5 seconds, which is three-fifths of a second better than the Wesleyan record.

The Better Part.

From Puck.

Three old men having met by chance, it was but natural that they should fall into some comparison of their several achievements.

"In seventy years," said the first, "I have amassed a hundred million dollars."

"But I, during an equal span," said the second, "have written one hundred novels, each of which sold more than a hundred thousand copies."

A slight smile, as of disdain, curled the lip of the third old man. "During seventy years," said he, "I have digested my food."

The others were too overcome to speak. They could only wring his hand in silent acknowledgment that the palm was his.

To Be Pitied.

From the Chicago News.

Prof. Beacon—It is believed by many astronomers that Mars is inhabited by a superior race of people.

Mrs. Backbay—Well, they have my deepest sympathy.

Prof. Beacon—And why, pray?

Mrs. Backbay—Because they are denied the privilege of living in Boston.

CENTRAL BY THREE POINTS

MANUAL FINISHED SECOND IN THE 8TH ANNUAL TRACK AND FIELD MEET.

The Blue and White Came From Behind After the Crimson Had the Victory Counted—Five Records Were Broken.

In the closest track meet of the athletic history of the schools, Central High defeated the Manual Training High school at Elm Ridge yesterday afternoon, nosing out a victory by a score of 60 to 57. The Central team completely upset the dope, coming from behind in a thrilling finish after Manual supporters had the victory counted.

On form Manual was picked by the wise ones to win. But the dopesters had failed to put the brothers Charles and Harry Woodbury into their calculations. Between them, these youngsters counted 32 of Central's 60 scores, and it was to their magnificent finish the blue and white owes its victory. The real feature of the meet was the winning of the mile run by Montague of Manual. The runners got away to a fast start with a high wind. Montague set a hot pace from the first and held the lead all the way, finishing with a burst of speed that left his nearest competitor half a furlong in the rear. The time was 4 minutes, 46 2-5 seconds, nearly nine seconds faster than the conference record. The feat seemed to take away the courage of the white and blue rooters, who could scarcely believe there was not some mistake in the timing. When, closely following this, crimson sprinters finished one, two, three in the 220-yard dash, giving them a substantial lead, Manual appeared to have a walk-away. Central hung on, however, never allowing Manual to increase its lead.

THE HIGH JUMP SAVED CENTRAL.

The crisis came in the high jump with the score of 33 to 46 favoring Manual, and Charles Woodbury fighting for first place with Boright of Manual. Boright was jumping the bar easily, while Woodbury was in distress, requiring his three trials to make every inch. The Central man finally outgamed his antagonist and forced him to divide first and second places. Then when Mayberry failed to capture the pole vault for Manual, the blue and white came within striking distance of the cup. By capturing all nine points in the broad jump, the last event, the Eleventh street institution won the Spalding trophy for the year, evening the score of victories for the eight dual contests.

FIVE RECORDS WERE BROKEN.

Five records, those for the 440-yard run, the mile, the 220-yard dash, the high jump and the broad jump, were broken. In the invitation events, McConnell of the Linwood school ran away with the meet, capturing twenty-three of forty-nine possible points. The Hyde Park school finished second with fifteen points and Garfield third with eleven. Hyde Park won the mile relay.

A GOOD MEET AT COLUMBIA.

Central High of St. Louis Won the Missouri Interscholastic.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 2.—Before a crowd of 5,000 persons Central high school of St. Louis won the track and field championship of the state here to-day, scoring 37 points. The surprise of the meet was furnished by the team from the Wentworth Military academy, hitherto little known in track athletics. The cadets finished second with 31 points. The Wentworth team is coached by H. W. Anderson, formerly captain of M. S. U. football and track teams and competing for the Kansas City A. C. Anderson turned out a lad by the name of Wyatt, who ran the hundred in 19 flat and did 22 1-5 seconds in the 220-yard dash. This established a new interscholastic record in both events.

Harry Minton's records in the hurdles were also broken, Lincoln of the St. Louis Central high doing 16 2-5 seconds over the high sticks and Davis of the same school running the low hurdles in the remarkable time of 25 4-5 seconds. The record in the mile was lowered to 4 minutes, 50 1-5 seconds, by Christine of McKinley high school, St. Louis. Mellor of Wentworth ran the 440 in 52 seconds, making a new mark. Hull of Westport high, Kansas City, ran a pretty race in this event, getting second place. Seested of Westport got third in the quarter mile. These were the only points scored by Westport. Excellent condition of the track was partly responsible for the fast time made. The meet was run off in time and the medals were distributed by 5 o'clock. Wheels.

From Harper's Weekly.

He was a great inventor.

"The thing I am working at now," he began, stroking his thin beard with a thinner hand, "will be a boon to every family and will startle the whole world. In fact it will put the Alarm Clock trust out of business. The idea is simply specially prepared tablets that help you get up in the morning. For instance, if you want to rise at 5 you take five tablets; if you want to get up at 6 take six tablets; and so on."

"But how will it affect the Alarm Clock trust?"

"Why, these tablets will cause a ringing in the ears at exactly the hour desired——"

But the little crowd could wait to hear no more and hurriedly disbanded.

THE GIZYCKIS' WEDDING DAY

WASHINGTON SOCIETY RECALLS AN INCIDENT OF THE MARRIAGE.

The Count Forced His Bride to Go Alone to the Depot and He Met Her There in Time to Catch Their Train.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Washington society is not surprised at the marital troubles of the Countess Gizycki of Paris, Vienna and Washington. It is shocked, however, over the fact that the ex-Miss Patterson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Patterson of Washington and Chicago and granddaughter of the late Joseph Medill, should be placed in the attitude of defendant in a divorce suit.

The filing of a cross suit by the countess is expected to lead to many sensational revelations covering the four years of her married life. The conduct of the bridegroom on the day of the wedding, April 14, 1904, afforded a nine days' piece of gossip which has been revived by the present disclosures.

The marriage took place at noon at the Patterson mansion on Dupont Circle. The 200 guests included the several ambassadors and their families, the daughter of the President and the Countess Cassini of Russia, then the leader of the particular clique of young persons with which "Sissy" Patterson had identified herself.

Shortly before 2 o'clock the bridegroom announced that he would return to his hotel and make his final preparations for the wedding journey which was to begin with a trip to New York, followed by an early departure for Europe. The bride retired to her room to don her traveling gown. When the bride's toilet was completed and a tender confidence with her mother concluded the latter noticed the lapse of time without the return of the bridegroom. At a quarter past 3 o'clock the bride's brother, Joseph Medill Patterson, called up his new brother-in-law's hotel.

"Yes, the count was there. Did anyone wish to speak to him?"

Some one did.

Mr. Patterson spoke, and the count replied. Accounts differ as to the detail, but every one of the score or more of persons waiting to see the couple off and the several attaches of the hotel knew that Count Gizycki refused to return to the Patterson home. He not only suggested but insisted that his bride should go to the railroad station, where the count joined her in time to take the limited for New York. They sailed two days later for Europe.

Solving a Postal Riddle.

From the Philadelphia Record.

W. K. Smith of 2938 North Twelfth street, a clerk for five years at the Germantown postoffice, who has earned the reputation of being able to decipher all manner of superscriptions on letters or other mail matter, has never been "stumped" by a horribly written or puzzling address. The other day Smith was floored for a time while endeavoring to simplify an address on a postal card postmarked New York, which had been forwarded by a person signing himself "Holmes Shylock." "Well, my dear D." began the brief message, "I don't expect you'll ever receive this postal card, because the clerks in Billy Penn's postoffice are as slow as the city. The clerk, however, who would be able to decipher the fumbled up superscription is certainly a dandy and a valued employee of the government service. Write me at once if it should so happen that the card gets into your possession." The following are the peculiar wording and characters which embellished the face of the card:

"D
"(Latin for father)—CK LE
"5x3 st. & Kaatskill? No, Not road.
"Bivalve (drawing of a house).
"Filadelfia."

This is how Clerk Smith read the address: "Patrick Donnelly, Eighth street and Allegheny avenue, oyster house, Philadelphia." Within a few hours after being received at the Germantown postoffice Mr. Donnelly received the postal card.

Necessity Makes, Etc.

From Judge.

A man, bearing the stamp of a New York business man in moderate circumstances, stood before the free lunch counter of a cheap East Side saloon one day recently. In one hand he held a schooner of beer, while the other fist was pushed forward to grasp the last square of cheese on the plate. Just as his fingers were in close proximity to the desired bit of food, they came in contact with another hand, which, like his, had reached out with the same object in mind.

Like a flash both hands were withdrawn, and their owners glanced into each other's face. Both men flushed guiltily.

"Hello, old man!" spoke up the first man, when he had recovered himself. "I hadn't expected to meet you here. The truth is," he added, a little apologetically, "I don't dine here regularly. On the contrary, I usually patronize one of the better establishments farther over town. But," he went on, reddening again, "I was hard hit one day this week, and I—I've been forced to cut down expenses."

"Financial blow anything to do with your wife?" calmly ventured his friend, gazing deeply into his eyes.

"Yes. I——"

"An Easter bonnet?"

"It was! How——"

At that moment a mutual something flashed between them which spoke pages. Then both men again faced the free lunch plate, and, dividing the lone square of cheese equally, touched glasses with a "good health" nod, and silently downed their schooners at a gulp.

A MAN OF 60 BREAKS JAIL

TOO MUCH TRUST PLACED IN A RHEUMATIC PRISONER IN OLATHE.

Given the Freedom of the Cell Room, He Cut a Hole in the Ceiling While the Sheriff Was at Dinner—A Rope Aided Him.

W. M. Williams, 60 years old, a prisoner held on the charge of robbing homes in Shawnee, Kas., escaped from the Johnson county jail in Olathe Friday night.

Williams owes his freedom to the kindness of John Steed, sheriff of Johnson county. Because he was bent and crippled with rheumatism, the sheriff gave Williams the freedom of the big cellroom. In this room are several cells, or cages, in which prisoners are confined. The ceiling of lath and plaster is six feet above the top of the cells.

WHILE THE SHERIFF WAS AT DINNER.

Williams was walking up and down the cell room Friday night when the sheriff went to dine with his family in their apartments adjoining the jail. Williams climbed on top of the cells, taking with him a chair. Then he stood on the chair and ignoring his rheumatism, stabbed a hole through the ceiling with a small poker. Although the hole was above his head, he succeeded, without a hand to assist him, in drawing himself up through it into the attic. Then he proceeded carefully through the dark attic to a fire door in the ceiling of the part of the building occupied by the sheriff, and descended a ladder into a bedroom.

SLID TO LIBERTY ON A ROPE.

Williams's escape must have been carefully planned, for he had the forethought to take with him a rope made by cutting the cords from the window weights. He tied this around an iron bedstead, raised a window, and slid down to the ground fifteen feet below.

Sheriff Steed and his deputies at once began a search for Williams. Members of the anti-horsethief league also joined in the search and the police in this city and Kansas City, Kas., were notified. Williams had not been captured last night.

Willing Workers.

Take cheer, good friend, and strive anew
The public ear to reach.
Even though ideas may seem few,
You still may make a speech.

You need but memorize "reform"
And "great and glorious cause,"
And some such things to raise a storm
Of popular applause.

So let's be merry as the birds,
And bid ambition climb;
The dictionary's full of words
All working overtime.

Just So.

From the Chicago Tribune.

Mr. Hockafus—Perhaps you wouldn't mind telling me, Amanda, how much dough I will have to dig up when the bill comes in for that new spring hat of yours.

Mrs. Hockafus—Not at all, Hiram. It will set you back about half as much as that new fishing rod of yours did.

Hand Bags of Soft Leather.

From Vogue.

Square shaped hand bags of soft suede tooled leather in all the pastel tints are very much in evidence. "Jaune brule," "beau dore" and Marie Louise blue being the predominating shades in hats and gowns, many bags are seen in these colors, to match the dresses.

Could Count on More.

From the Chicago News.

Her Father—And so you want to marry my daughter, eh?

Young Man—That's what I said.

Her Father—But how do you expect to support her on an income of $800 a year?

Young Man—Oh, come now, your income must be ten times that amount.

Free Advertising for Alveolar Method

The most valuable advertising we receive is that which costs us nothing. The man or woman who goes out of our offices entirely satisfied with the work we have done for him or her and passes the good word along to friends and acquaintances will do us more good and send us more business than we could possibly obtain from a published advertisement, no matter how convincing we might try to make it. Here is a case in point:

Kansas City, Mo., March 30, 1908.
G. Gordon Martin, Inc., Kansas City.
Gentlemen: I feel as though I am doing myself justice in letting you know how satisfactory the work is that you did for me about a year ago.
I never believed artificial teeth would answer the purpose of natural teeth. Your teeth feel the same as my natural teeth did, and answer the purpose as well. Mastication is again an enjoyment to me, and I heartily recommend your system to anyone in need of good teeth. Very truly yours,
Hall Bldg. WM. HALL.

Our Alveolar Method of restoring missing teeth without plates or ordinary bridge-work is a patented process and is not to be obtained in any other offices outside of those operated by this company. We have grown from a small beginning, five years ago, to where at the present time we do the largest dental business in the world, and the business is increasing daily. The world had been waiting for just such work as we are able to supply. The average "bridge," which is a structure placed between two teeth with a row of artificial teeth fastened to it, is not only unsanitary but UNSCIENTIFIC. Built higher in the middle than at either end, it is not possible to bite on the bridge without subjecting the pier teeth, at either end, to a terrific strain, which in time loosens them and necessitates the taking out of the entire work. This sort of bridge-work has been responsible for the loss of more teeth than any other one factor.

Ignorant dentists, who have pulled out sound teeth by the dozen in order to make room for a plate, are responsible for a large percentage of the missing teeth, but the bridge is a close second.

By the Alveolar plan we save teeth. If they are loose we tighten them and build our structure around them so as to supply the patient with a full set of teeth that shall be firm and strong in the mouth, beautiful to look at and as serviceable as nature's teeth.

If you are in need of our services we shall be glad to have you call at any of our offices and have a free examination made of your mouth. We practice dentistry in all its branches and employ none but the best experts. These men, because of their superior skill, have taken away the dread of going to the dentist.

If it is not possible for you to call in person let us send you our illustrated book, "Alveolar Dentistry," free of any charge. After you have read this book you will be more than ever determined to come and see us. It has brought patients to us from all over this continent. Send for it today.

CAUTION—Look out for imitators and impostors. We have NO OFFICES outside of those given below.

CRIMINAL LAW OF ENGLAND

LAWYERS AWAIT THE OPERATION OF NEW STATUTE WITH INTEREST.

Act of Parliament Gives Convicted Persons Right to Appeal, Which Has Heretofore Been Restricted to "Legal Error Apparent Upon the Record."

From the Chicago Inter Ocean.

LONDON.—The criminal appeal act of 1907, which took effect April 19 of this year, is expected to work a revolution in the administration of the criminal law.

In addressing the grand jury recently at the last East Sussex quarter sessions, over which he presided, Mr. Justice Grantham referred to the change. His lordship said he was that day practically attending the "last post" of the old criminal law of England. The latter provided that where persons were accused of crime the final appeal rested with a jury of their own countrymen.

On and after the 19th day of this month the criminal appeal act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, ch. 23), will become part of the law of this country.

It is an act of Parliament which undoubtedly owes its existence partly to the persevering agitation of the press and partly to a slowly increasing popular demand for some means of reviewing the judgments that are given in the course of the administration of our criminal law. Mistakes occasioning a miscarriage of justice and inflicting intolerable hardships have been so frequently made that it began to be felt that not only were the best traditions of the law in danger of violation, but even the security of the subject was a matter of gravest concern.

NO REMEDY FOR BLUNDERS HERETOFORE.

Instances of serious blunders which have shaken public confidence occur readily enough to one's mind, and the worst feature of these mistakes has been the irremediable nature of the suffering and distress which they have caused. In many cases the worst results have been prevented by the untiring efforts of the press.

It is the first time in the history of English law that there has been a court to which appeal in criminal matters may be made, more or less corresponding in constitution and procedure to the court of appeals which now reviews decisions in civil actions.

The judicature act of 1873, although creating a general court of appeal in civil cases, still retained, by section 47, the rule that "no appeal shall lie from the high court in any criminal cause or matter." This rule has become widely known, generally representing the popular idea of the restricted nature of criminal proceedings.

RESTRICTIONS NOW REMOVED.

As a matter of fact, under the same section a right of appeal was reserved for any "error of law apparent upon the record," and a further appeal lay by petition to the House of Lords. But unfortunately the procedure governing these appeals did not tend to place them within easy reach of the ordinary individual, since in all cases of appeal under this rule the express permission of the attorney general had to be obtained.

It is interesting to note that by the new act writs of error are entirely abolished.

In addition there was the court for crown cases reserved, a tribunal of five or more judges of the high court, who considered any question of law that arose at the trial, whether it were "apparent upon the record or not." This court has not, however, been extensively used, the average annual number of cases which it tried being less than a dozen, while in 1900 only six of these appeals came before it.

THREE MAIN GROUNDS OF APPEAL.

The outstanding feature of the new act is that, subject to some restrictions, it gives a right of appeal upon questions of fact, although altogether there are three main grounds of appeal available to a convicted person. They are as follows:

1. On a question of law alone.
2. With the leave of the criminal appeal court or upon the certificate of the judge who tried him:
   - (a) Upon a question of fact alone.
   - (b) A question of mixed law and fact.
   - (c) Any other ground appearing to the court to be a sufficient ground of appeal.
3. With the leave of the criminal appeal court, against the sentence itself, unless it is one fixed by law.

The court to which the appeal may be made is fortunate in possessing the lord chief justice and eight king's bench judges as its members, but the court will be duly constituted for all working purposes if it consists of not less than three or any uneven number of those judges.

COURT HAS AMPLE POWER.

The court is to sit in London, unless otherwise directed, and has power to increase a sentence appealed against as well as power to decrease or quash it altogether. Appeal must be made within ten days of conviction, during which time execution of punishment is stayed, and where appeal is granted until such appeal has been heard and determined.

The appellant, notwithstanding that he is in custody, shall be entitled to be present at the hearing of his appeal, except where the appeal is on a question of law alone.

The court will have power to assign solicitor and counsel to the appellant in order that his case may be properly conducted, and can exercise a discretion in demanding the presence of witnesses at the hearing of the appeal. The expense which all this involves is, by section 13 (2), made a matter for the attention of the Secretary of State.

STENOGRAPHERS WILL BE HELPED.

The criminal appeal act, 1907, will come as a great boon to shorthand writers. It is enacted that shorthand notes are to be taken of the proceedings at the trial of any persons on indictment who, if convicted, is entitled, or may be authorized, to appeal under this act. This means that a small army of stenographers will be required to attend criminal trials throughout the country, and take note of all that occurs at the various hearings. The cost of the services thus required must inevitably amount to a considerable sum and will have to be met by the treasury.

For the purposes of applications and the like the powers of the criminal court of appeals may be exercised by any one of its judges acting alone, while the rules upon which its business will proceed are to be settled by the lord chief justice, the judges of the court and a committee for that purpose appointed.

Time alone can show whether the criminal appeal act of 1907 is really a reform or only an alteration. All one can say at present is that for an act consisting of only twenty-three sections the innovations are striking and original.

It has been argued that juries will regard their duties with a sense of less responsibility now that appeals are made possible, but those who have any experience of British juries will repudiate such a suggestion, knowing as they do, the high standard of integrity and probity which jurymen maintain in the fulfillment of their national obligation.

The consequence of most interest to the public is the amount of expense which the act involves, and it remains to be seen whether this extra expenditure is going to be justified by an improved administration of the criminal law.

Washing Delicate Embroideries.

From Woman's Home Companion for May.

Make a good lather with soap and warm water, adding one-fourth of a teaspoonful of powdered borax to each quart of water. Place the articles in an ordinary glass fruit jar, then nearly fill the jar with the lather. Seal tightly, shake the jar a little and place it in bright sunlight for twenty-four hours. Of course, if the weather is cloudy, the time should be allowed for. Turn the jar around occasionally, so that the sun may penetrate every part. When the time is up, pour off the lather, press the fabric gently, then rinse several times in clear, soft water. Return it to the jar with more clear water, set it again in the sun, changing the water daily, until the material is white. I recently renovated a bit of fine old hand embroidery, which had become as yellow as saffron, by this method, and it was beautiful.

New Way to Run Sewing Machine.

From the Boston Post.

I would like to suggest to the woman who has a family to sew for and to whom running the sewing machine by foot power is tiresome if not injurious, my method of saving myself in that respect. Fasten a long leather strap, or if that is lacking a piece of strong rope to the back of the treadle, place the sewing properly and start the treadle with one foot, then grasping the strap keep the treadle moving by firm, even, upward strokes, guiding the work with the other hand. After a little practice this can be done very easily with little strength. Fastening the strap to one of the handles on the drawers, prevents it from slipping to the floor when not in use. I hope some tired woman will try this as it helps me a great deal, especially on long seams.

As to the Dead Letter Office.

To The Star: In answer to "An Idling Spinster," who wonders if the dead letter office "is really a useful, an indispensable factor in the body politic," I would call her attention to the following authentic statement clipped from the current issue of the Railway Mail:

> The dead letter office received 1,053,899 pieces of mail matter in March, more than half of which were returned to the senders.

DOES THIS OZARK CAVE HIDE A SPANIARDS' TREASURE?

A NEWLY DISCOVERED ARKANSAS CAVERN BELIEVED TO BE THE STOREHOUSE FOR FABULOUS RICHES

NOTHING fires the imagination quite so quickly as tales of hidden treasure. From the days of Captain Kidd to the present there have been many ready to risk everything and go to the most inaccessible places in search of buried gold, and the more difficulties there were in the way of finding the treasure the more eager they were to start in search of it. The wonderful cave that recently has been discovered in northwestern Arkansas is, therefore, less interesting to the general public on account of its weird beauty and great size than because it is believed to be the hiding place of millions of dollars in copper-gold bullion left there by the Spaniards when the great Louisiana territory was a part of the Spanish dominion. This cave is said to be equal to the famous Luray caverns of Virginia, but it is called the "Old Spanish treasure cave," and more persons visit it to hear the story of the hidden gold than to look at its great chambers and underground watercourses.

INTERIOR OF THE "SPANISH TREASURE CAVE" IN THE OZARK MOUNTAINS OF NORTHERN ARKANSAS.

The cave is situated near Sulphur Springs, Ark., and owes its discovery to the accidental meeting of George W. Dunbar, a Scotchman of Gravette, Ark., with a Spaniard who was searching for the treasure believed to be hidden in that neighborhood. The natives of that section of Arkansas have a tradition that there once was a Spanish settlement on the southern slope of the Ozarks, somewhere between the headwaters of the White and the Arkansas rivers, and that the people had found gold in this region and had reduced great quantities of it to bullion. Some of this wealth, it is said, they carried away with them when driven out of the country by the Indians, and some they "cached," intending to return for it some future time. The tradition further states that a record of the "cache" or hiding place had been carefully kept by the descendants of these settlers and that at certain periods ever since the breaking up of the settlement Spaniards had returned to the locality to verify and renew the marks on trees and rocks by which the treasure could be found. Some say that these Spanish "scouts" took some of the treasure away with them each time they visited the locality and others believe they came merely to see that their hiding place had not been molested and did not venture to take any of the bullion themselves, for fear of exposing the hiding place to others. This latter theory is more general than the former, though no explanation of why the entire "cache" was not taken long ago has been made. The remains of an old smelter in the neighborhood of Sulphur Springs has lent color to the story. At various times gold bearing rock has been found in the vicinity and much prospecting has been done in the Joplin district (immediately north of Sulphur Springs) in the belief that the "cache" would eventually be found.

THE SPANIARD AND HIS MAPS.

Dunbar was out hunting when he met the Spaniard drinking at a spring near what afterwards proved to be the entrance to the cave. Dunbar called the stranger's attenion to a peculiar "blaze" on a large oak tree near the spring, saying that he had often noticed the tree and wondered what the lines and squares meant and who could have put such an elaborate sign upon the tree. As soon as the Spaniard caught sight of the tree he became greatly excited, and, running up to it, examined it closely, finally taking a yellow paper from his pocket and comparing the lines on the tree with similar lines on the paper. Then he began pacing off distances in various directions, muttering to himself in Spanish all the time. Dunbar watched him curiously until his pacings had several times brought him to the same spot on the wall of a log cabin which stood near. He seemed unable to get away from that particular spot and Dunbar thought he might help him either through or around it.

"What are you trying to do?" he asked.

"The cave, the cave!" the Spaniard replied excitedly. "It should be here. Where is the pine tree and where is the mouth of the cave?"

Dunbar decided to take a hand in the hunt himself.

"Sit down and tell me what you are hunting for and maybe I can help you find it," he said. "Let's see that paper you have."

The Spaniard was too excited to hesitate, so handed the paper to Dunbar. It proved to be an exact copy, allowing for the natural growth of the tree, of the lines on the tree, and was so evidently a map of some sort that Dunbar was amazed. It had never occurred to him that the blaze on the tree might be a map. He compared the two carefully and discovered what he had not seen before, that later cuttings had been made in some of the lines which had probably been nearly obliterated by the growth of the tree as time had passed.

"Well, what does it all mean?" he again asked the Spaniard.

"It means I have found the treasure, but I have lost it!" cried the man.

"Maybe you haven't," said Dunbar. "Where ought it to be?"

"Two hundred and ten feet northwest from this tree there should be the concealed entrance to a cave and the treasure is in that cave."

"How far is the cabin from the tree?"

"Sixty paces."

"When was the treasure put in the cave?"

"When my country owned all of the new world."

Dunbar began to remember the stories he had heard about the early Spanish settlement and the hidden gold.

"That must have been 200 years ago," he said, "and that cabin hasn't been there fifty years. Suppose we try going round it."

They did so, and found that by crossing a small stream they came upon what appeared to be a hole in the hillside, just 210 feet from the blazed tree. The hole was covered by undergrowth and loose stones and hidden from the casual observer by a large cedar tree which grew directly in front of it, but the two men had no difficulty in finding it. They pulled away some of the obstructions and went inside the opening, but having no way of lighting the large chamber in which they found themselves, they decided to come back later and explore the cave.

The Spaniard went home with Dunbar that night and not only told him the story of the cave and its hidden wealth, but showed him a map drawn on bear skin (evidently the original of the paper map), and a book printed in Spanish giving the history of the settlement and telling of wonderful copper-gold deposits in what is now Southern Missouri and Arkansas, and of the bullion hidden in the cave.

THE STORY OF THE TREASURE.

When De Soto crossed the Mississippi and commenced his journey inland, the book stated, he was induced to travel in a northwesterly direction by stories which the Indians told of untold wealth in silver and gold in the mountains above Coligoa. He found both silver and gold, and copper also, but the cold and privations which his men had endured on the march rendered them unfit for the labor necessary in reducing the ore to bullion. A map was made of the region, however, and when, after De Soto's death, the remnant of his once splendid army traveled down the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico some of his followers found their way to Nueva Espana (Mexico), carrying this map with them. These men eventually traveled north to Santa Fe and from there started overland with other adventurers in search of the land of the Akansas, where the mines that De Soto had discovered were. After long journeyings and many hardships they reached Coligoa and the mountains (Ozarks) beyond, found the Indians (the Missouris) friendly, and established a settlement there. They built rude furnaces for reducing the ore and, so the chronicle goes, took large quantities of the finest gold and copper out of the mine. The remains of these furnaces still exist and are to be seen on the north side of the valley opposite the cave. They are pits about eight feet deep and from four to five feet in diameter, and are lined throughout with smooth stones.

Tales of the fabulous wealth which these adventurers had found gradually filtered back to Santa Fe and fearing that the French would obtain possession of the region the Spaniards at Santa Fe organized an army of men, women and children with all the friendly Indians they could gather and set out for the land of the Akansas. Among the friendly Indian tribes picked up on the march were the Pawnees and their presence brought disaster to the expedition. The Missouris were at war with the Pawnees and although the Missouris had always been friendly to the white settlers they rose against them when they saw that there was peace between them and the Pawnees, and not only massacred most of the members of the expedition from Santa Fe, but drove the settlers of the Ozarks from their station. This expedition is known in history as the Spanish Caravan and its story was told by a priest who was one of the survivors. The book which the Spaniard showed Dunbar described the return of the expedition to Santa Fe. Thus history and tradition agree. The bearskin map is an accurate chart of the interior of the cave up to a certain point, but the cave has been found to be much more extensive than the map shows it to be. The book also tells of a bear's foot carved in the floor of the entrance and a Spanish pistol and ramrod carved in the wall about twenty feet inside of the entrance. These carvings have been found and identified, and are in a fairly good state of preservation. Ancient tools similar to those used in other Spanish mines in both North and South America during the period of Spanish conquest also have been found, and both gold and copper partly reduced have been taken from the cave in small quantities. The bulk of the alleged treasure has not as yet been discovered, and the fact that it is there at all remains to be proved.

DUNBAR BOUGHT THE CAVE.

After hearing the Spaniard's story and seeing his book and maps, Dunbar decided to hunt for the treasure himself, and so bought the tract of land surrounding the cave, organized a local company to work it, and has since devoted his entire time to the search for the fifteen million dollars' worth of bullion that is supposed to be there. He succeeded in reaching an agreement with the Spaniard by which all the documents were turned over to him, but with the trickery common to his race the Spaniard kept out one map, that which showed the exact location of the bullion. This, he said, he would sell to Dunbar and his company for one-fifth of the entire amount of the bullion, or 3 million dollars. Dunbar refused to listen to his proposition, and he went away and has not been heard of since. The buillion is supposed to lie in one or more of the cavities in the floor of the cave, but as these cavities are full of water which seems to be supplied from some subterranean stream, nothing can be accomplished toward locating it till machinery is installed that will pump the water out faster than it flows in. Dunbar recently sold the cave to Oscar Kihlberg of Joplin, reserving all mineral rights, and hopes with the added funds thus obtained to put in improvements that will greatly facilitate his work.

The cave lies in a small valley. It was opened for sightseers for the first time in January of this year, and is said by those who have visited it to be equal to any of the famous caverns of America. The lime and silicate formations are remarkably fine, some of the shapes produced being curious in the extreme. The cavern has been explored for less than half its supposed extent.

THE MERRY MONTH of MAY.

THE month of May was not so named after a popular actress, nor any other woman, although some have supposed that the month derives its name from Maria, mother of the god Hermes, a conjecture based solely on the similarity of sounds. In fact, the month was named in honor of the original Roman senate, called Majores or Maiores, as was June in honor of the Juniores, the lower branch of the Roman legislature.

The Saxons called the month Tri-Milchi, the improved condition of the pastures enabling the cows to give milk three times a day.

In the old Alban calender May was the second month, and had twenty-two days. In the calendar of Romulus May was the third month with thirty-one days. In the calendar of Numa May was the fifth month with thirty days and in the calendar of Julius Caesar it remained the fifth month, but was lengthened to thirty-one days.

In all ages there has been a superstition that May is an unlucky month in which to marry. Eighteen centuries ago the Old Roman poet Ovid records the fact that such was the prevalent belief among the Romans. On the morning of the marriage of Mary, Queen of Scots, to Bothwell—May 6, 1567—the last line of Ovid's verse, was found fixed upon the gates of Holyrood palace. In the north of England they have a proverb,

Mense Malas Maio Nubere bulgus ait.

Marry in May
And rue the day.

In Scotland they vary the verse,

Mary in May
And rue for aye.

An old Scotch clergyman told his congregation, "The girls are all stark mad that wed in May." Soothsayers predicted all manner of evil to those who defied the superstition:

Married in May and kirked in green
Baith bride and groom won't long be seen.

Women, it is told in soberness and sincerity, who marry in May will be childless, or their married life will not be happy. Even Sir Walter Scott was not free from this fear, for we read that he hurried away from London that his daughter's wedding might take place before the opening of the inauspicious month.

An old English proverb, which is met with all over the English speaking world declares that,

Who marries between the sickle and the scythe will never thrive.

The first day of May formerly was celebrated with elaborate festivities throughout Great Britain and, to a less extent, in France and Germany, and these festivities still have their local but much attenuated survivals. The celebration of May 1 or May day is directly descended from the Roman Floralia and the Druidic feast in honor of the god Bel—the Apollo, or Orus of other mythologies, the Baal of the Scriptures. But its remote ancestry is found in the Phallic festivals of India and Egypt, which in those countries took place upon the sun's entering Taurus, and celebrated the renewed fertility of nature.

The Druids celebrated the feast of Bel by lighting immense fires on the various cairns. Even to this day similar customs survive among the Irish and Scotch Highlanders—both remnants of Celtic stock. Not very long ago the following might have been witnessed as far south as Perthshire:

All the youths of a township or village met on the nearest moor and cut a round table or altar in the green sod. In the trench formed about the altar the whole company stationed themselves and kindled a fire. They then prepared a repast of eggs and milk of the consistency of a custard and at the same time kneaded a cake of oatmeal which was baked on the embers. Having eaten the custard they divided the cake into as many parts as there were persons in the company. One fragment they blackened with charcoal and threw all into a bonnet. Each member of the party drew out a piece, bindfolded, the holder of the bonnet drawing last. The person getting the black piece was obliged to leap three times through the bonfire. In the original service of Baal the person who took the black piece was literally sacrificed as a propitiatory offering to Baal for the productiveness of the ensuing autumn.

If Druidism survives most obviously in the Celtic portions of the United Kingdom, it is Roman paganism which has left its firmest traces upon the May day celebration in Anglo-Saxon regions. It is there a feast of flowers, a reminiscence of Flora, rather than of Baal or Moloch.

Survivals of the images of Flora which graced the Roman Floralia were the May-dolls which once were common throughout England and still are paraded in Devonshire and in Cornwall and other parts of Wales.

In Buckinghamshire the girls dress a doll with many ribbons and flowers and carry it about in a small chair. Evidently a transformation of the image of Flora into that of the Virgin.

May games, sacred to the month of May, were introduced into England in the Middle Ages and continued to flourish there until about the middle of the Seventeenth century, when they began to go out of fashion. They now survive only in rural communities.

In London the celebration was abondoned first to the milkmaids and chimney sweeps. From about the middle of the Seventeenth century it grew to be a custom for milkmaids to dress in their best on the first of May and call on their customers, from whom they received some trifling gratuity. Later the chimney sweeps made it a practice on the same day to parade the streets togged out in tawdry finery, ribbons and green boughs. The London name for May first is "Sweep's day." The Cambridge sweeps used to have similar customs and children still go round with a doll hung in the midst of a hoop wreathed with flowers, singing:

The first of May is garland day
And Chimney Sweepers' dancing day.
Curl your locks as I do mine,
One before and one behind.

In Hamick a few of the young people still go a-Maying and wash their faces in the morning dew, whereby they secure twelve months of rosy cheeks. Old Pepys tells us in his diary that Mrs. Pepys went to Woolwich on one occasion—April 30—"to lie there to-night and so to gather May dew to-morrow morning which Mrs. Turner hath taught her is the only thing in the world to wash her face with."

In Sweden May day is yet celebrated in a manner derived from its heathen origin. On the previous evening huge bonfires are built in every hamlet and around them the young people dance, while the older ones draw various auguries from the appearance of the flames. A sham fight takes place between two parties representing winter and summer, in which winter always gets worsted, and is burned in effigy. Children go into the woods to rob nests of magpies. The eggs and young birds are put in a basket and borne to every house in the village, the children singing:

Best loves from Master and Madame Magpie,
From all their eggs and all their fry.
O, give them alms, if ever so small;
Else hens and chickens and eggs and all,
A prey to magpies will surely fall.

Every housewife gives them something for a May bouquet.

On this day the Easter witches are wont to send their "Troll hares" to milk the neighbors' cows, so cattle usually are confined in the cow houses, which are fumigated with brimstone. In the evening they are carefully inspected. If any injury is found upon them it is put down to the account of the witches and a light is made by striking two flints over the creature, which is held to be a sure safeguard against any further evil consequences.

RODE ON THE FIRST TRAIN.

Mrs. Farrar Saw the Beginning of Railways in England.

Mrs. Salina Farrar, mother of the new postmaster of Macon, Mo., Charles Farrar, enjoys the distinction of having been a passenger on the first railroad train ever operated in England. She remembers quite distinctly that pleasant experience of her girlhood. Edward Entwistle, now a resident of Des Moines, Ia., was the engineer who hauled the little four wheel coaches from Huddersfield, Yorkshire, to Liverpool.

"People came from the country to Huddersfield just like they do now on a circus day," said Mrs. Farrar, who is vigorous, in spite of her 91 years. 'The word had been circulated throughout the county that an excursion train was going to be run on the new tramway, and that no horses would be used to it anywhere, not even in starting it or in holding it back from running down hill too fast. The people who gathered into Huddersfield were very much divided in their opinion as to whether Engineer Entwistle would ever return with his train load of passengers from his venturesome enterprise.

"Three small flat cars were behind Mr. Entwistle's steam motor. There were no seats. The passengers had to stand up and hold to each other to keep from falling off on the right-of-way. My mother and I were together. The little cars rocked violently and it seemed at times that they would certainly turn over. In going up hill the engine puffed and threw out great clouds of smoke and cinders. We felt like people who were enjoying our first experience in a dirigible balloon, I guess.

MRS. SALINA FARRAR OF MACON, MO., WHO WAS A PASSENGER ON THE FIRST RAILWAY TRAIN OPERATED IN ENGLAND.

"The train left headquarters at 10 in the morning, the engineer, crew and passengers receiving hearty cheers from the big crowd that lined the tracks. After we had proceeded a few miles, and no disaster occurred we began to feel easier, and fell to talking and laughing about our wonderful trip.

"The journey home was made after night. I don't recall that there was a light anywhere on the train. I guess they hadn't thought of headlights then, although afterwards they used a flat car ahead of the engine with pine knots blazing on a sand pile when they ran trains after dark.

"It was a beautiful night, and our engineer was not afraid of meeting any other trains. The only trouble that could have come to him would have been a cow or something getting on the track ahead.

"It must have been a strange experience to the country people near the road to hear that little train roar by in the darkness, with no lights about it anywhere except in the furnace. We didn't get back to Huddersfield until nearly 2 o'clock in the morning. Late as the hour was, there were many people waiting to see the train come in, and the cheering was as great over our arrival safe at home as it was when we left. Our friends hadn't the ghost of an idea when we would be back, because there was no telegraph then and no way to calculate just exactly what the speed of the train would be. We sat up the balance of the night and talked about that wonderful trip.

"The fare was three shillings six pence for the round trip. Not long afterward the railroad people began building passenger coaches which looked like the old-time stage coach, and then they ran regular passenger trains. It was the first trip, however, that was worth taking. I don't know that I ever have enjoyed such a thrilling railroad ride since, although I have frequently traveled much faster."

Forcing His Chances.

From the Washington Evening Star.

"So Shadboy is in trouble again?"

"Yes, a bit of card scandal."

"I told him not to play unless he could afford to lose."

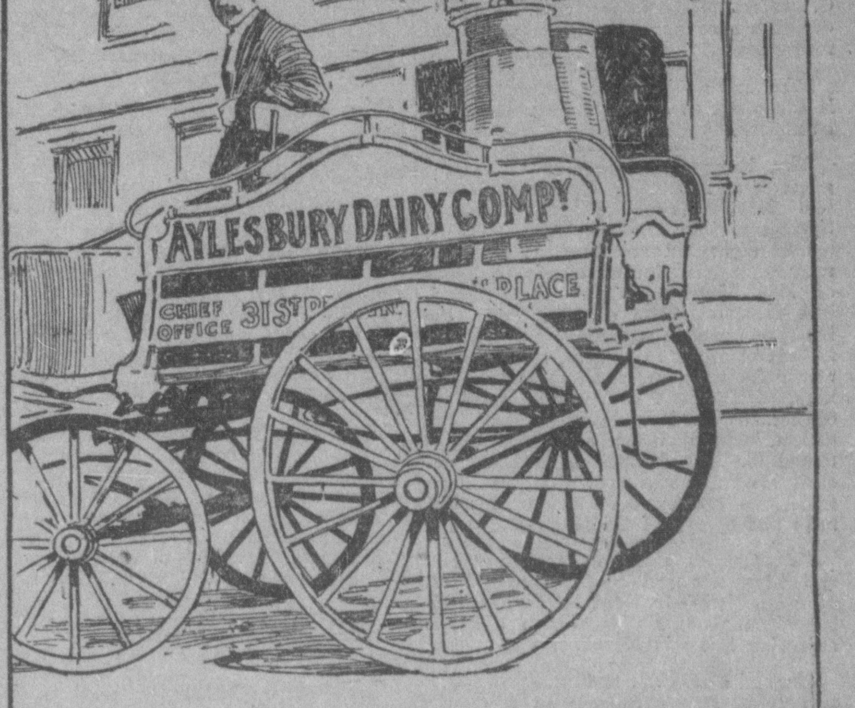
"He must have gotten your advice mixed, and decided he couldn't afford to play unless he didn't lose."

A PURE MILK SUPPLY IS BRITAIN'S GREAT NEED.

LONDON TO MAKE WAR ON UNSANITARY DAIRY METHODS.

THERE is no subject receiving more attention in England to-day than the problem of a pure milk supply. John Bull at last has awakened to the fact that the chief cause of the enormous infantile mortality which disgraces his country is due to the way in which the milk on which the infants are fed is produced and handled, and there are indications that he is really going to do something about it at last.

The newspapers are printing columns about the milk supply, the doctors and the public health authorities are preaching pure milk, and at last Parliament has taken the matter up and is going to legislate. John Burns, the president of the local government board, is about to introduce a bill which will deal with one phase of the existing evils, and it is hoped that aroused public opinion will have its effect on the farmers and milk dealers by insisting on a purer and better supply.



A TYPICAL LONDON MILK DELIVERY CART.

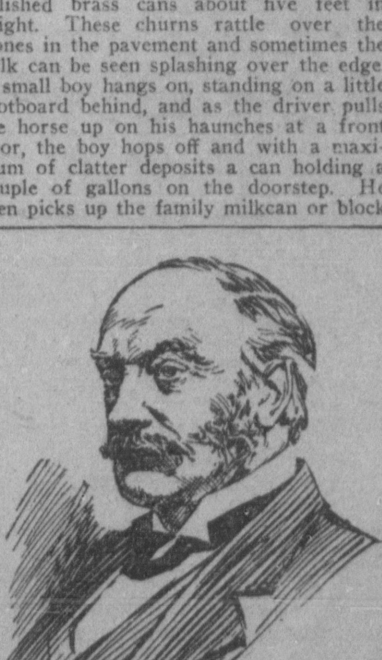
The present state of the English law affecting milk is anomalous. A dairyman who sells milk containing added water, or which is even naturally deficient in the normal quantity of butter fat, is heavily fined. But the milk he sells may contain much dirt and as many disease germs as can be imagined, and it is no one's business to interfere.

ENGLAND'S DAIRY METHODS.

Even if the milk were cleanly produced and properly handled at the farms the conditions under which it is handled before it reaches the consumer in London and other large towns are sufficient to render it a dangerous article of food. It comes to the city in huge cans or churns which are not locked and the lids of which are generally battered and ill fitting. These "churns" lie on the platforms of the great milk depots at the railway stations often for hours, exposed to all the powdered dirt and filth which is blown about by the wind. The railway employees have often been detected helping themselves from the unlocked cans and sometimes the vessel which they dip into the receptacles are not as clean as they might be.

It is after it reaches the city dairyman, however, that the danger of contamination is greatest. Every Londoner is familiar with the milkman's cry of "Milk-oo-oo," with which morning sleep is regularly destroyed, and with the clatter of the milk wagons as they rattle through the streets. These milk wagons look strange to American eyes. They resemble nothing so much as a small chemical fire engine.

Imagine a little cart with a seat for the driver in front, and at the back two highly polished brass cans about five feet in height. These churns rattle over the stones in the pavement and sometimes the milk can be seen splashing over the edge. A small boy hangs on, standing on a little footboard behind, and as the driver pulls the horse up on his haunches at a front door, the boy hops off and with a maximum of clatter deposits a can holding a couple of gallons on the doorstep. He then picks up the family milkcan or block tin, which has been left on the doorstep or perhaps hanging from a hook outside the door, bangs it about until he is sure everyone in the house is awake, and fills it with a tin dipper from the large can. Then he hops on the footboard again and yells "Milk-oo-oo" at the top of his voice. The driver shouts to his horse and goes off at a gallop to wake up the next customer. It is a point of honor with London milkmen that they never must drive at less than a gallop.



LORD RAYLEIGH, A RICH BRITISH PEER AND SCIENTIST WHO CONDUCTS A MODEL DAIRY.

Anyone easily can imagine the possibilities of contamination in this method of delivering milk. The large can is open on the dusty doorstep and the small can has been standing there perhaps all night. Sanitariums and others have urged the dairy companies to adopt the American system of delivery in sealed quart and pint bottles, but the dairymen have smiled and said that what was good enough for their grandfathers was good enough for them. One London company, however, recently has adopted the bottle system, and its managers have been surprised at the increase in trade which they have obtained.

NO ROSY CHEEKED MILK MAIDS.

The production of milk in the English country side is all wrong. The English farmer is not a scientist. He knows and cares nothing about germs and he does not realize the value of fresh air for his cows. The cow sheds and milking places are dark and close and dirty. The rosy cheeked, wholesome looking milkmaid of fiction exists only in fiction. In real life the milking is done by a slipshod male farm hand.

The result can be imagined. Dr. Collingridge, the medical officer of health for the city of London, took samples of milk recently as it arrived in London at one of the great railway stations. He found that 37.5 per cent of the milk contained particles of filth and hair, and the variety of disease germs which he found were enough to make a Londoner forswear the use of milk forever. More than 48 per cent of the germs were tuberculous.

Veterinary experts declare that a third of the cows in England are suffering from tuberculosis in a more or less advanced stage, and it has been proved, many contend, that bovine tuberculosis can be transmitted to man in the milk. A large percentage of the infantile death rate in England is caused by tuberculosis which has been traced to infected milk. Mr. Burns's bill will insist on the destruction of tuberculous cows and the payment of proper compensation to their owners. It also will give local authorities power to condemn and destroy insanitary cow sheds and to insist on the ordinary principles of cleanliness being observed by the milkers and the handlers of the milk.

Several attempts are being made to solve the problem by voluntary effort, but they must of necessity be partial in their application. Lord Rayleigh, an immensely wealthy peer, has started a model dairy near London, where all the cows are carefully tested for tuberculosis and where the strictest cleanliness is insisted on. The milk is cooled as soon as it is drawn from the cow and is brought to London in locked churns and guarded against all contamination. Local authorities, such as town and borough councils, have started infant milk depots at which a pure supply of milk is obtained, and it is modified and pasteurized before being supplied to poor mothers for infant feeding. The need for some such aid as this is evident in the face of the general infant death rate throughout England of 135 per thousand compared with less than a hundred in America and other countries where milk is more carefully produced and handled. In one district of London alone—Notting Hill—508 of every thousand infants die before they reach the age of 12 months.

Old Coins Found on Plum Island.

From the Boston Post.

NEWBURYPORT—That Plum island may become in real life what Stevenson's "Treasure Island" is in fiction is the opinion of hundreds of people as the result of the announcement made to-day of the finding of several old coins there recently. The coins, which were picked up on the beach by Albert Leet, a member of the Knobbs life saving crew, are believed by many to be part of a buccaneer's treasure.

The find, it has leaked out, was made late last fall just before the frost got into the ground and the snow began to fall. While patrolling the beach one day Leet saw something shiny in the sand that attracted his attention. Stooping, he picked the object up, and to his surprise saw that it was a silver coin of ancient milling. A few days later he picked up several others near the same place. He then became interested, and was about to systematically dig up the ground in the vicinity when the first snowfall appeared.

The ground got so hard that he decided to postpone it until spring. Leet, who has marked the spot carefully, refuses to let anybody else in on the secret as to the whereabouts of the "treasure spot." He will begin his digging at once. That there is more of the ancient money where the coins were found is the general belief.

The coins, found are dated 1721, 1749 and 1783. All are either English or Spanish. One was made in the reign of Charles III. Another dated 1721 was coined in the reign of Philip III. A Spanish coin bears the name and head of Don Carlos. All are of queer design and the milling is extremely odd.

Near the place where the money was found a number of old silver shoe buckles were picked up some years ago. Not far from the spot, popular rumor has it, a body was uncovered by the waves several years ago. This, it is said, was buried again at about the same place.

Spring Time in England

O spring time, how can I express
  The coyness of your gradual coming.
The caution of that first address,
So different from the loud caress,
  That bards are bent on thrumming?

They see (with Eros at her side Affixing to his bolt a new barb)
A corybantic lady glide,
And all the woods about her pied
  With red and green, like rhubarb.

They sing how at a glance she stirs
  The seeds that slumbered during snow time,
Till all the conquered dale is hers,
And on the bough the catkin purrs
  In practically no time.

I fail to see it. Calm and slow
  (A patch of rain and now a dry bit),
A proudly proper gait you go,
And, as I said, I do not know
  What words can well describe it.

Not with a sudden rosy stamp
  That sends a flush through fields and fences,
But dim and delicate and damp
With large goloshes and a gamp,
  The English spring commences.

KANSAS CITYANS 'BACK EAST'

SOME NOTES OF THEIR SOCIAL LIFE IN NEW YORK.

The Hardwick-Wood Wedding—The Bride and Groom to Visit in Kansas City Next Week—New Yorkers Seeking the Country.

NEW YORK, May 1.—The chief interest of Kansas Cityans in New York this week has been the wedding of Miss Mary Hardwick, the daughter of Mrs. George W. Hardwick of Agusta, Ga., and Lieutenant Robert Wood, United States army, who still calls Kansas City his home, though his visits have been rare since his graduation from West Point several years ago. The wedding occurred Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at St. Thomas's church and had many interesting features, not the least of which was the fact that it was a family affair with the popular rector of the fashionable Fifth avenue church. Miss Hardwick is the sister of Mrs. Ernest M. Stires, wife of the rector of St. Thomas's and has spent so much time here for several seasons that she has a large circle of friends in the exclusive set which counts her brother-in-law its spiritual mentor.

The romance which culminated in the wedding of Thursday had its beginning some three years ago when Miss Hardwick was a bridesmaid and Mr. Wood an usher at the wedding of Captain and Mrs. Woodruff at Governor's island. The young people met for the first time on that occasion and, contrary to the usual result in such cases, their interest in one another continued. The Woodruffs now are stationed at Fort Leavenworth and part of Mr. and Mrs. Wood's honeymoon plans include a visit to them there.

The wedding was arranged to take place in New York on account of the convenience both to the Wood and Hardwick families. Mrs. R. Whitney Wood, the groom's mother, and her daughter, Miss Julia Wood, were returning just at this time from Panama, while the Hardwicks are in the habit of closing their Georgia home at this season and coming to New York for a time before opening their summer establishment at Lake George. Moreover, the bride's deep interest in St. Thomas's made her desire to be married there.

The plans for the wedding were made as simple as possible under the circumstances, for both families are in mourning. Consequently there was little entertaining done prior to the wedding, and that was limited almost exclusively to members of the two families. Mr. Wood gave his bachelor dinner Wednesday night at the Hotel Astor, and Dr. and Mrs. Stires gave a family dinner earlier in the week. A very large company filled the church for the ceremony, and the usual crowd of curiosity seekers, inevitable at a St. Thomas's wedding, gathered in the street, and gave the policeman a busy half hour. The invitations to the house following the ceremony were, however, limited to a very few close friends, and the whole affair was very quiet and unpretentious.

Before the hour of the ceremony Mr. Macfarlane, the church organist, gave a programme of considerable length. The full choral service of the church was used, with the Lohengrin chorus as the bride entered, and a special adaptation of the Mendelssohn march, much used this winter at fashionable weddings, as she left the church. There was also a recessional hymn by the choir.

The bride was attended only by her sister, Mrs. Stires, as matron of honor. She was given in marriage by her oldest brother, Mr. W. W. Hardwick of Macon, Ga. Mr. Wood had for his best man Mr. Paul Mohr of Kansas City, and for his ushers, Captain Edward M. Adams, Lieutenant Robert F. Jackson, Lieutenant Frank P. Lahm, the celebrated aeronaut, and Lieutenant Frank O. Whitlock. The ceremony was read by Dr. Stires.

The bride's gown was of white satin, with yoke and sleeves of duchesse lace. Her veil was of tulle and lace, and she carried a white prayer book. Mrs. Stires was gowned in lavender silk, and carried mauve orchids. The decorations in the church and in the rectory were not elaborate, and were in keeping with the general simplicity of the arrangements.

After a fortnight of travel Mr. and Mrs. Wood will go to Kansas City to visit Mr. Wood's mother. They expect to return here early in June, and will sail late in the month for Panama, where Mr. Wood is still stationed.

The Wood family came up from Panama about a fortnight ago, but Mrs. Wood and Miss Wood were here only a day or two, and then went over to Williamstown to visit the family of President Hopkins of Williams college. They returned here the first of the week accompanied by Mr. Edward Wood, who is a student at Williams, and have been stopping at the Astor. They expect to be back in Kansas City early in the week. Mr. Stanley Wood was unable to secure leave of absence from his station in Panama, and so was unable to come north for the wedding.

Mrs. Robert Wood is not the first army bride in her family, for her sister is the wife of Captain David P. Cordray, U. S. A., now stationed in Manila, and has many friends among the officers at Fort Leavenworth. Mrs. Wood is much like her sister, Mrs. Stires, tall, and dark, with a beautifully slender figure, and with a delightful Southern accent.

Many Kansas Cityans resident in New York were present at the wedding, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Rice Miner, Mr. Albert Hopkins, Miss Lacy Withers, Mr. and Mrs. Massey Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. T. K. Hanna, Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Worthington Stone, Mrs. W. M. Abernathy and Miss Abernathy and Mr. Barton Hall.

Someone has said that the hardest thing about living in New York is getting out of it. This is true for every day in the week, and doubly true on Sundays. For the crowd that fills the subway, the surface cars and every other transportation line that leads to green grass and budding trees is jammed to the last degree. A little later the lines leading to the beaches will be the ones to dread and avoid, but just now the country is the favored place. It is all a mistake to think that "one can always get out of the city"—for one can't unless he is blessed with a motor car or sufficient strength of soul to rise early enough in the morning to get ahead of the rush. Otherwise he will be crowded and pushed and jammed while reaching his destination, and almost equally crowded and pushed about after he gets there. For the country places around New York, no less than the beaches, are entirely inadequate for the people who are anxious, once a week, at least, for a glimpse of blue sky and green fields. Van Courtlandt park, the big public pleasure ground above the Harlem river, was absolutely black with people last Sunday. There are grounds set apart there for all sorts of outdoor sports, but so great was the crush of people that they overflowed into tennis courts and baseball grounds, took possession of the golf links and made a huge picnic ground of them, to the disgust of the serious minded golfers.

A little later the beaches will claim the lion's share of the picnickers, and it will be impossible to find a scrap of ocean front within two hours' ride of New York that isn't jammed. Once last summer a man and his wife announced to another couple that they finally had found a little beach over on Staten Island away from the trolley to which the crowd had not penetrated. Moreover, there was a good little inn there where delicious food could be obtained, and to which even the ever-present motorist had scarcely penetrated. The following week the enthusiasts led their friends to their find, dilating all the way on the joys of the quiet, peaceful day on the shore that was to be theirs. But alas! that Sunday the Larry Mulligan association of Tammany hall had picked on that particular beach for its annual outing and the day stands on the records of that delectable organization as having had three drownings, the biggest crowd and the most fights of any similar occasion of the summer.

Miss Kate Stephens and her nephew, Nelson Stephens, will go to Lawrence, Kas., next month to spend the summer with the former's sister, Mrs. James W. Green. Nelson Stephens will attend Kansas university next winter. For the past two years he has been a student at the School of Ethical Culture, conducted by Dr. Adler. This school is a very interesting institution, and its progress is being anxiously watched by students of various kinds. The number of pupils is necessarily limited, but is kept carefully balanced in order to preserve its democratic and cosmopolitan characteristics. Only a certain number of American born students are admitted, a certain number of Jews, of foreign born pupils, of negroes, and so on through the list.

Mrs. Charles R. Russell is making a rapid recovery from her recent attack of typhoid. She left St. Luke's hospital on Thursday and joined Mr. Russell at the Hotel Imperial. She expects to be home in Kansas City early in the week.

New York has been so full the past few weeks of Kansas City people en route to Europe that the hotel registers have been almost equal to social registers. Most of these people have hurried through town, scarcely stopping longer than a day or two before sailing, but Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell have been the exception and have been here for a week stopping at the Breslin, and making the round of the theaters.

Seasickness and Salt Herring.

From the Emporia Gazette.

Henry Allen prints the following simple but reliable remedy for seasickness in his valuable paper, the Wichita Beacon:

"Those who have suffered the tortures of seasickness will welcome the following simple remedy: Take with you a small quantity of dried salt herring, chew and swallow the juices. This seems to be an infallible remedy."

The true test of a really great editor does not always lie in his ability to secure sensational news, or adopt wise political policies, or discourse fluently upon abstruse questions; he must ever bear in mind the real needs of his readers, and be ready with a cure for chilblains after a cold wave, a relief for indigestion after a banquet, a remedy for seasickness during a rainy season.

The formula advanced by Mr. Allen was compiled with special reference to the needs of the poor. No citizen is so sunk in abject poverty that he can't afford to equip himself with a herring before going down to the sea in ships, and although the juices of a dried salt herring may not be as delicious as the ambrosia of Jupiter, who would not rather chew and swallow them than be racked by the malady of the sea?

It will be observed that even in so small a matter as this, Mr. Allen manifests that caution that distinguishes the truly great editor. "This seems," he says, "to be an infallible remedy." He wisely refuses to be responsible for it, or to guarantee it. He holds in detestation that reckless school of journalism which advances any untried theory with unmeasured assurance.

His position, briefly stated, is that a dried salt herring may be good for seasickness or it may not. It is at least worth trying.

MR. WATTERSON'S VIEWS

WHY THE COURIER-JOURNAL WILL SUPPORT MR. BRYAN.

The Democratic Sage on the Confusion of Principles and of Party Lines—His Suggestion of Johnson and Why He Withdrew It.

Henry Watterson in the Louisville Courier-Journal, April 27.

Two weeks in Washington and two weeks in New York—rather in the thick of it—leave among other impressions the idea, or fancy, whichever you may care to call it, that both parties are treading on eggs and that some of the eggs are rotten.

"You are not going to put that death's head upon us again, are you?" said a distinguished Democratic senator, referring to Bryan, with something more of heat than relevancy, or justice. "Why," I answered, "what are you kicking about? Whilst there was a chance I, not you, made an honest effort for an alternative. You and the like of you, were as silent as the tomb. You lay flat down and let him tramp all over you. I got no second to my motion. The only response that came to me from you gentlemen in Congress was 'second your own motion, you son-of-a-gun!'"

Said an eminent Democratic editor of the South Atlantic seaboard, "We'll beat him," meaning Bryan, for the nomination, "don't you doubt it." And I replied, "Suppose you do beat him, what will you get for your victory except a repetition of 1904?"

The New York newspapers, abounding in conceit and ignorance, suffering from both provincialism and landlordism—some of them, as Parnell used to say of Ireland, from "absentee landlordism"—are at this time especially misleading and unfair. They have acquired the anti-Bryan habit, and, seeing nothing the other side of Jordan, or Jersey, it seems impossible for them to adjust themselves to actual conditions and the rest of the country. They imagine that money will do all things and think that, as New York has the money, New York should and will dominate all things. As a consequence of this delusion, both parties in the Empire state have dropped into the lowest depths of depravity—and very stupid depravity—now the Republicans in alliance with Hearst, whom the head of the national administration, himself a great New Yorker, had stigmatized an Anarchist and assassin, now the Democrats fallen under the mud-spell of Murphy and Conners. The New York newspapers cannot escape their responsibility for this.

Meanwhile, thousands upon thousands of good men and true, some of them calling themselves Democrats and others Republicans, yet agreeing in the main, are all at sea. The old historic issues have passed away. The old dividing lines are grown so indistinct as to be well-nigh invisible. The nature, the actuality and significance of the coming conflict—the crux of the situation—has not yet shown itself through the fogs and vapors with which the professional politicians, much assisted by the newspapers, have enveloped themselves. Public opinion here is in a fluid state, public sentiment is something of a squash.

Truly, Dr. Eliot of Harvard hit the nail on the head when he declared that the need of the time is publicity. Theoretically, the people rule. In practice, things are done by a few gathered together well inside of lock and key, too often in a darkened chamber.

Predatory wealth struggles to keep its footing and to hold its own. Aggregated capital is confused with predatory wealth. The three co-ordinate branches of our triple scheme of government are at loggerheads, a puissant executive seeking the power of an autocrat, the Congress weakly rebellious, the court still the rock of ages. Inevitably, the corrupt political manipulators see their opportunity, inevitably the corrupt leaders of high finance see theirs. Amid the clash and chaos, Socialism thinks it has a chance, whilst the leaders of the people, and the would-be leaders of the people—of varying degrees of honest zeal and good intention—truckle to every vagrant fancy of the hour, sure-footed stability and clear-sighted statesmanship for the most part caviare to the general, isolated, segregate.

I am old enough to remember the break-up of the Whig party. The conditions then were not nearly either so complicated or so baffling, as they are now. Politics in general were more in the open. Programmes had not become so equivocal, methods so unclean. There was acrimony, but there were standards of measurement, constituencies less preoccupied and indifferent, and, among public men, more of courage and intelligence, individualism yet a factor in affairs.

The shocking disclosures of the last three years make it quite certain that there has existed for a long time a conspiracy among a few allied Kings of Money, making their headquarters in and about New York, to control the operations of both parties.

* * * * * * * * * * *

It will be remembered that twelve months ago, when the Courier-Journal set out to try to organize within the Democratic party a volume of opinion sufficiently strong to impress Mr. Bryan and his friends that it were wiser of him to play Warwick than King, its purpose was not to divide, but to unite the party.

It was weary of factionism. It yearned for old fashioned Democratic brotherhood and an old fashioned Democratic victory. Mr. Bryan could not so see it. He refused to be impressed, and, with good reason, because the effort of the Courier-Journal received no answering voice.

The entire summer and autumn were wasted on tomfooling about "a dark horse." Did he have a mustache, wired Scott Bone? Was this blond, or brunette, joined in the chorus? Then it leaked out that the Democrat in reserve was the governor of Minnesota, and, iterating a line in a famous old play, we had a deal of guying which may have been humorous, but was certainly ill timed about "a party by the name of Johnson."

It grew a trifle tiresome. Except to an angel it would have been exasperating. Yet, it seemed Democracy. Governor Johnson declared himself out of it. So did Governor Folk. So did Senator Culberson. The Courier-Journal was put in for the costs and left to hold an empty bag. Naturally, it threw up its hands in disgust and took to the woods. And then? Why, then, right out of the open mouth of Wall street, came a stentorian voice, "Johnson!"

What chance would Johnson have over the dead body of Bryan? What chance would Johnson have carrying a Wall street tag? What chance would Johnson have using the undemocratic two-thirds rule to defeat the will of the majority and at the behest of the East, defying the West and working the South?

The thought is preposterous.

"But," cry the weak of faith, echoing the strong of purse, "Bryan cannot be elected." Let us look into this a lick or two. I think I have said some things along that line myself. All that could be fairly said, intelligently said, I have tried to say, that, with the two factions of the East and West hating each other worse than they hate the Republicans, the representative of neither faction could be elected. Either faction might beat the other. Hence Mr. Bryan could not hope to run so well in the debatable states as someone else to be agreed on—Johnson preferred—and I see no reason now to change this opinion.

Mark the sequel. The time has passed for "some one else," Mr. Bryan retaining th efield; it is too late for "some one else," the conditions what they are; and I confess that I am in sympathy with Mr. Bryan in refusing to be ruled off the track by a group of New York politicians, whose motives are, to say the least of them, suspicious, which will support no ticket except one framed by themselves, and which do not agree with one another touching the ticket to be named. Whatever his claims may be, or may not be, Mr. Bryan has his rights, and no thoughtful man can, or will say, that he cannot be elected, the ipse dixit equally of the unthinking, the interested and the prejudiced to the contrary being of no weight whatever. In American politics anything is possible. Assuredly Mr. Bryan may be elected; as an affair of dinner pails, if empty, he will be.

But, among Democrats, who know why they are Democrats, there ought to be other and higher considerations; some arrest of the breakneck speed on the highway toward the centralization of power; some real and not spurious purpose toward tariff reform; some sure separation of the politics of the country from its partnership with High Finance and the High Financiers; some breaking up of groups and rings, of wheels inside of wheels, always involved by a change of parties, even when made only for the sake of a change.

The Courier-Journal is a Democrat, not a Republican, and, standing by the sincerity of its record, it will support the ticket to be headed by Mr. Bryan, as actively and as earnestly as if it represented its original preference and opinion.

Manhattan Club, New York.

A Clever Trick.

From the Philadelphia Record.

It was only a half hour before the box office for the Mask and Wig club was to be opened, and two sophomores of the university had not even made an attempt to get in the line of waiting fellows who had stationed themselves on cots, chairs, etc., during the night. As they letf the dormitories they announced their destination, and were met with a general laugh from their classmates. But the "sophs" evidently knew what line of attack to make on the line. They were seen to stop at the grocery store, and when within a short distance of the waiting line were noticed to take something from their pockets and begin chewing on it. Their appearance was greeted with a laugh by those who waited also, but their arrival resembled a small panic at the head of the line. It was a case of back up for all but one or two, who apparently had some time or other spent a few minutes in Little Italy. The "sophs" were chewing garlic, and with each expiration were moving the line away from them faster than if they had been using brickbats. It is sufficient to say that the "sophs" have tickets for the fourth row.

Hail to the Fleet!

Thunder, ye guns! All ye banners, unfurl you!
Speed forth, ye shells, from the cannons that hurl you!
Vibrate in deep-booming, ear-splitting thunder;
Belch forth your fire until the world wonder;
Vomit your smoke in a proud burst of glory,
Spreading like thunder clouds over the earth.
Sailors, immortalized ever in story,
Honored the nation that gave you your berth!

Ah, what a thrill of proud glory shoots through us!
With what admiration your great deeds imbue us!
Up mounts the soul to pure realms of devotion,
More deep and more wide than the limitless ocean.
Oh, what fond fervor, what ravenous rapture!
More than the sentient person could think.
Ah, man! how unfortunate you must adapt your Thoughts to the impotent mercies of ink!

Oh, such a blaze of sublime exaltation!
Fleet! here is your harbor—the heart of a nation!
Here cast your anchor—'twill never pull loose;
Sooner 'twill rust in the grip of disuse.
Deep in our hearts we forever enshrine thee,
Forged in indelible letters of gold.
The arms of a nation, untiring, entwine thee,
Our Navy, the noble, and valiant, and bold!

FASHIONABLY MOULDS YOUR FIGURE
ROYAL WORCESTER ADJUSTO CORSET
FOR FIGURES VARYING FROM AVERAGE TO OVER-STOUT

PRICE $3

The ADJUSTO is equally adapted to medium or average figures. It is skillfully designed to fashionably mould and shape the form into graceful lines.

The ADJUSTO bands, when tightened, lift the abdomen, hold it firmly, and support in comfortably. Gradually the excess flesh of hips and back is reduced and distributed equally, giving the straight back and new flat-hip effect.

For all women obliged to stand a great deal, the ADJUSTO is absolutely without an equal. A wearer, who is of medium figure, said recently:—

"My duties require my standing most of the time, and until I wore the ADJUSTO it was difficult to finish my day's work without becoming exhausted. I can now do more work with less exertion, and feel much better. It supports my figure perfectly, and is the strongest and most serviceable corset I have ever worn."

Another remarked—"Since wearing the ADJUSTO my hips, abdomen and waist have become noticeably smaller, and my figure is greatly improved. In all other corsets I require size 27, but I wear a size 25 ADJUSTO with perfect ease."

All genuine ADJUSTO corsets have trade-mark "ADJUSTO" stamped on inside.

LATE FASHIONS FOR MATRONS

THIS is a most kindly fashion season to the matron, for never have lines in gowns been less trying to the matronly figure nor fabrics better suited to the slight tendency to obesity which is very apt to appear when the woman passes 40.

First, as to fabrics. The most desirable effect to obtain in your house gown, party frock, dinner robe—every piece of wearing apparel save the most decided tailored modes—is straightness and slimness, and for this purpose the home dressmaker must select the clinging fabrics.

In expensive goods this includes all the very soft silks, in which I wish to include particularly the crepe-finished foulards, which are exquisite in colorings and designs, and cost about a dollar a yard. Another good silk is the chiffon foulard, and still another the soft finished messaline. There are also innumerable gauze and chiffon cloths with silk and satin stripes in beautiful colorings. Taffeta silk, unless in a very soft, satiny finish at a high price, is practically out of the running. The novelty silks are peculiarly effective, and the new bordered, satin finished foulards are the richest things on the counters. These come in three patterns, Persian, Japanese and Egyptian, with borders showing the native art of those countries in exquisitely subdued colorings on equally subdued grounds, such as ashes of violet, a dull grayish blue, a soft brown, etc. The border appears at the foot of the skirt and is employed in trimming the waist.

Another peculiar novelty which is enjoying a tremendous vogue is a satin striped chiffon cloth, the stripes zigzagging and interweaving, with an effect which one woman aptly described as seasick.

STREET COSTUMES OF ROUGH SILK.

Even the rough silks used for complete street costume, which means a princess or Empire frock with a loose coat, are very soft and pliable, suitable for draping rather than plaiting.

Next to silk in point of popularity for the matronly figure come the soft nets, filet, princess, and chantilly patterns in lace. These, whether in black or white, are made over a white silk foundation. Incidentally, a well known modiste states that the matronly figure requires for summer frocks a lining of finest habutai, never taffetas, to secure slenderness.

In the wash materials the best fabric for clinging gowns is mull, either in silk or the clever mercerized imitations of silk. The woman with a tendency to embonpoint should sedulously avoid stiff, wiry materials of any sort, and her skirts, in particular, should be made to hang loosely around the waist or rather over the hip line. The skin tight skirt is extremely trying to the stout woman.

Many women who are either very short or too stout for their height, have asked me whether they dared to wear a bordered or trimmed skirt. That depends entirely upon the adjustment of the border or trimming. Vandyke points in the border are certainly less trying than the straight or scalloped effect, and three graduated folds, or bands, of trimming close to the foot of the skirt, are less trying than either a broad, solid band or trimming which is arranged to run almost to the knees.

The princess gowns made from soft, clinging material is much better for the matronly figure than the two-piece dress with the connecting girdle. In fact the princess with the suggestion of a short waist line or Empire girdle in the back, is a real boon to the stout woman, provided she does not make it skin tight. A princess frock laid in fine tucks over a chemisette of lace or net is far better for the motherly figure than one absolutely tight fitting, in heavier fabric, however carefully it may be fitted and tailored.

PRINCESS FROCK IN NEW CUT.

The newest cut for the princess frock shows a very deep yoke or chemisette, sometimes coming well below the bust line and outlined by folds, piping or embroidered bands. The lines are absolutely square and the opening as seen from the distance is an oblong, a trifle more narrow at the bottom, of course, than across the shoulders. Sometimes the chemisette or deep yoke is made from the plain lace or net, sometimes it is strapped with the cloth or silk used for the princess gown or with ribbon velvet in precisely the same shade.

A word as to coats. The mature woman will find that a Louis or cutaway coat, finished with deep points, is excellent for her use. The newest coats have only one or two buttons, an excellent feature for warm weather.

Some excellent modes for matrons are shown in this connection. One of the smartest is the princess skirt with double-breasted Empire jacket. The skirt has a shaped panel down the front and is cut in seven gores. The panel is finished with buttons to follow the line of the Empire jacket, which is double-breasted. This can be worn with a blouse of net or lace dyed to match the cloth, or in cream or ecru with strappings of the cloth or silk used in the gown.

A pretty blouse model is the surplice design showing an economical way to utilize a short pattern in silk. This is really an overblouse or jumper, but combined with a matching skirt in some soft silk, piped with another shade of the same color or velvet ribbon, over a guimpe of net or lace, it would make a most effective house frock.

The house gown in gray messaline, banded with darker gray silk and braid, shows one of the most desirable uses of the plaited skirt; also the deep chemisette effect referred to in another paragraph.

FLOWERS ON FRENCH MILLINERY

Smart Hats in Gray Are Trimmed With Bright Colors.

From a Paris Letter.

Day by day the styles become more settled, and it is almost safe to say that the average hat has a very high crown, a very small brim and few trimmings—but those few stand as erect as it is possible to make them. Light and smooth straws are in fashion and feathers for the moment are used, but only because it is rather early for flowers. There are many straw toques, trimmed with ribbon in various hues, but in perfect harmony.

Ribbon will be used for the adornment of walking hats, and many will also be made of soft ribbon plaited together. Faille ribbon is a novelty of the season, while etamine with satin border and spotted ribbons are also in great favor.

Although the foregoing seem to be the general rules concerning millinery fashions, it is yet possible that the summer styles will be absolutely different, for the very narrow brim and very high crown will appeal to no one but the ultra-fashionable—and then they sometimes hesitate at wearing absolutely unbecoming things, in spite of the decree of their confectioners.

Gray seems to hold its place in hatgear—or, at least, so it has been reported—but where could one find a more unbecoming color? And although it combines well with other colors, it seems impossible that it will be adopted to any great extent.

For walking hats the flat sailor shapes must be popular, because they are almost the only hats that are really appropriate on the street in the morning; on the other hand, many women never wear them at all and always adopt a more picturesque Gainsborough style.

Excepting for the very small hats, almost all those shown are slightly raised on the left side, and even the sailor shapes, lined with a different colored straw, are also slightly raised. A dark green hat of this shape is faced with a straw of the "ecaille blonde" and is trimmed with a huge bow of taffeta ribbon fastened in place with an empire buckle.

A hat of pewter gray yedda straw is faced with cerise yedda and has the Derby shaped crown, although the brim is comparatively wide and raised at one side—dropping over the ear at the other. This is trimmed with a mixture of lobelias, and there is also an aigrette of tulle in six loops. A large white yedda is faced with black straw and trimmed with pompadour ribbon, surrounding the crown and falling at the back, while flowers form a small wreath around the edge of the brim.

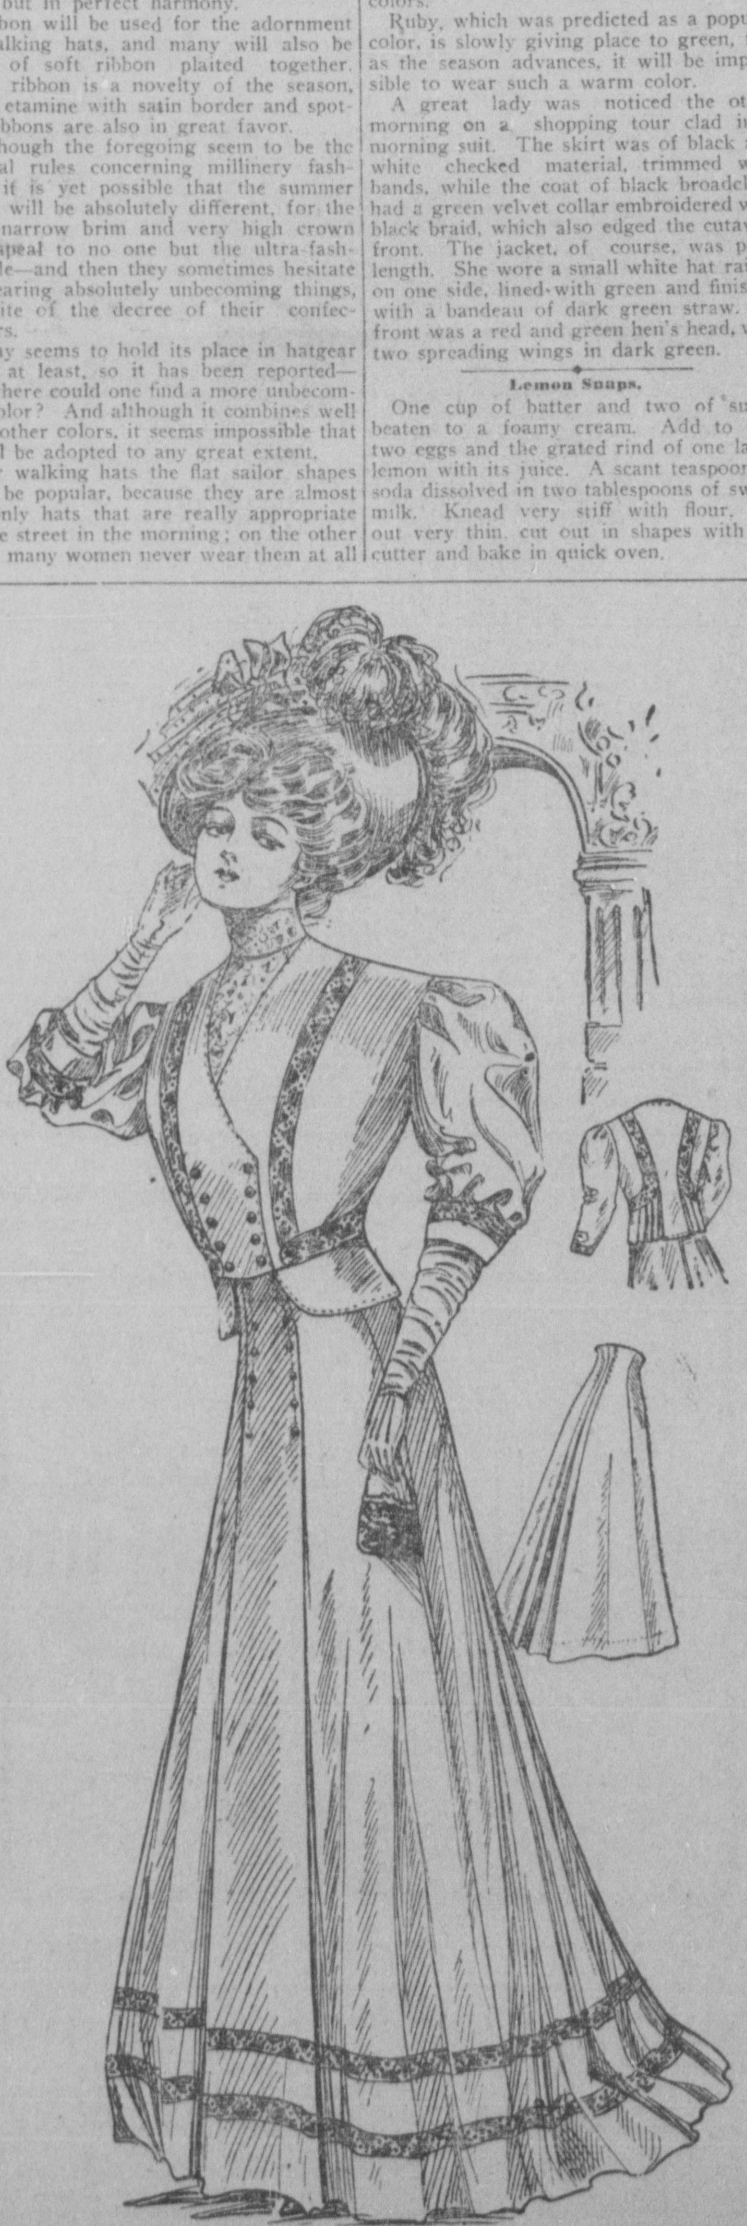
In the Paillassom, woven of two different colored straws, the prettiest are green and blue, green and brown, red and gray, violet and red, pink and mauve. The trimming always matches one of the colors.

Ruby, which was predicted as a popular color, is slowly giving place to green, for, as the season advances, it will be impossible to wear such a warm color.

A great lady was noticed the other morning on a shopping tour clad in a morning suit. The skirt was of black and white checked material, trimmed with bands, while the coat of black broadcloth had a green velvet collar embroidered with black braid, which also edged the cutaway front. The jacket, of course, was pony length. She wore a small white hat raised on one side, lined with green and finished with a bandeau of dark green straw. In front was a red and green hen's head, with two spreading wings in dark green.

Lemon Snaps.

One cup of butter and two of sugar beaten to a foamy cream. Add to this two eggs and the grated rind of one large lemon with its juice. A scant teaspoon of soda dissolved in two tablespoons of sweet milk. Knead very stiff with flour, roll out very thin, cut out in shapes with tin cutter and bake in quick oven.



PRINCESS SKIRT AND EMPIRE COAT.

FAIR, BUT NOT FAT, AT 40

HOW THE YOUNG-OLD WOMAN PRESERVES BEAUTY OF HER FIGURE.

Instead of Sending Her Children on Errands, the Mother Takes a Brisk Walk Herself—Exercises to Reduce the Hips and Waist Line.

SURPLICE BLOUSE.

Frankly, nothing irritates me more quickly than to hear some woman who is nearing or may have passed the fortieth milestone pronounced "vain" for trying to improve or conserve her good looks.

The critic who passes such judgment is first of all behind the times. This is the age of the young-old woman, not the callow maid, and it is every woman's duty to approach her fortieth birthday with a smile, not a frown. What is more, she owes it to her family as well as herself to do everything possible to make herself more attractive. This is not vanity, but common sense, for the woman who has said farewell to all hopes of beauty is never an agreeable person to live with. Her entire attitude is colored with bitterness.

The most important factors in retaining an appearance of youthfulness are the preservation of the figure and the care of the complexion. Quite frequently there is a common remedy for defects of figure and face. For instance, hot water and lemon juice, invaluable for reducing too, too evident hips and abdomen, are prime complexion aids, stirring the torpid liver and thereby clearing the skin.

The average woman who through stress of domestic duties or indolence has covered the youthful lines of a once good figure with fat, imagines that she must enter upon some desperately involved system of reduction. This is a grievous error. I know one woman who devoted but one hour in the twenty-four to intelligent, persistent reduction work, and lost thirty pounds in three months, ten pounds a month. But bear this in mind—she did not notice any great change at first, and yet she never wavered from her daily exercises and diet.

Here are the three exercises she used, all of which aimed to reduce the hips and abdomen and waist line:

A—Lie flat on the floor, shoulders, spine, calves of legs and heels touching the floor, the hands clasped behind the head at the base of the brain. Relax, that is, become perfectly easy and restful. Then, inhaling through the nose with your mouth closed, raise the right leg four times slowly, each time forming a right angle with the body. Exhale, resting, and then raise the left leg four times while inhaling. Rest, exhaling, and alternate the two legs, right and left, eight times, inhaling. Exhale, rest and repeat the entire exercise. This sounds and is extremely simple, but when you can do the exercise, say twenty or twenty-five times, rapidly, with accurately timed inhalations and exhalations, you will have secured some of your old-time elasticity and the heavy hips will begin to do down.

B—Stand erect, heels together, toes out, chest high, abdomen in, chin on a line with the body. Inhale deeply on four counts and raise your hands above your head palms forward, arms the width of the chest part. Now, exhaling forcibly, swing forward from the waist, keeping the arms stiff and bending as far as possible. At first your hands will not touch the floor or come within six inches of it, but when you have become accustomed to the exercise, you will be able to touch the floor and then rest assured your waist will be longer, its measurement smaller and your abdomen greatly reduced.

C—For this exercise you will need a bath towel at least a yard long. Lie flat on the floor, face downward, with the towel stretched as far as possible over your head. Now, inhaling deeply, fling the towel backward until it catches around the ankles. This forces the body to form a sort of cradle with the trunk and particularly the abdomen as the single rocker. Then, rock from side to side at least ten times, inhaling and exhaling regularly. The more deeply you draw your breath, the more good the exercise will do you. If possible take this exercise on a bare floor that is absolutely clean, avoiding the dust which accumulates in rugs or carpet.

Give fifteen minutes night and morning to these exercises. Give fifteen more to a bath as hot as you can stand it without feeling a reaction or sense of lassitude and fifteen to sitting quietly night and morning and sipping a cup of boiling hot water, into which has been strained the juice of half a lemon. Sip this very slowly. Do not wait until it cools and then gulp it down.

Every day, if possible, walk several miles outdoors. Do not send your fleet-footed children on errands that for the good of your health you should do yourself. And walk briskly as if you had a definite mission or a destination to reach.

As to diet, stop eating heavy cereals with sugar and cream. Do not touch candy, pies, cakes, rich puddings or peas and beans. Reduce your allowance of potatoes and substitute salads and fruits. When oranges are in season eat two a day. Stewed prunes and apricots are also good in the reduction diet.

Follow these simple directions for three months and the maternal heaviness you dislike will fall from you, and, thanks to an active liver, your skin will lose the thick, coarse look which proclaims advancing years.

ART IN ROOM ARRANGEMENT.

Proportion in Home Decoration Is Not Often Understood.

From Vogue.

Proportion in decoration is not very tangible. We can understand it as regards size, but proportion in color is more difficult to grasp. Most of us know, if we only stop to think about it, that it is a mistake to place a large, heavy chair beside a small, dainty table and vice versa; that a small room should not be crowded with massive pieces of furniture and that the walls of a low-ceilinged room should not be divided or broken several times.

Proportion in ornament is another important point to be considered, and it is not always an easy matter to determine just how much ornamentation and how much plain surface go to make the best sum total. A chest is richer with part of it carved and the rest left plain for contrast than carved all over. This is true of the treatment of walls and ceilings, for costliness and elaboration require a plain setting to appear to the best advantage.

Proportion in color is hardest to determine and requires a trained eye and sensitive feeling. It is difficult to decide just how much of one color goes best with another. We knew there should be only a limited amount of a strong, heavy color in a room, but just how much is that limited amount few can judge correctly. Sometimes a color when put with another detracts from it; others set it off. So it is important to put together shades that are mutually advantageous. Green and blue when in the right proportion are a perfect combination. But if the green is too strong the blue looks weak and insipid, and if the blue is too intense the green looks weak and dirty.

The intensity and conspicuousness of a wall should be governed by the furniture and hangings. If a room is to have heavy furniture, upholstered in plain, dark materials and heavy curtains and portieres, the walls can be somewhat gay. But if the room is to be furnished daintily with light figured materials the walls should be subdued.

Ornaments and lamps must not be placed on small, insecure looking tables, or the room will not possess that delightful feeling of restfulness so necessary to a successful room.

And now as to the arrangement of furniture. In the first place, we should try to have the chairs in just the place where one would wish to sit. For instance, there should be a chair placed where a good light can be had by day for reading, another placed for reading by artificial light, and one by the fire or by the bookcase; and yet they should be so arranged as not to turn their backs on one another. In a long, narrow room the furniture should be arranged so as to break up the room, while in a square one the furniture should be put across the corners to give a feeling of roundness.

If a room is long, with a fireplace at one end, a sofa placed directly in front of the fire, about three feet away, with a large library table placed back of it, with a lamp and books upon it, gives a delightful, cozy effect and breaks up the room in a pleasing way. Pianos are useful for breaking up a room. The upright variety can often be used as a kind of screen if handsome embroidery or brocade is hung on the back.

After the furniture in a room has been arranged, comes the task of arranging the little things, and as much care is required for this as for the furniture. The ornaments should not be spread out at regular intervals, but grouped, all the groups being, if possible, of the same ware. Pottery, if big and bold, should be placed high up on a mantelpiece or the top of a bookcase. Other large pieces may stand upon the floor. Small pieces of interesting design should be placed where they can be easily picked up and examined. Pottery, if highly glazed and brightly colored, should be placed in dark corners as they brighten them in a remarkable way. Pictures add greatly to a room, well chosen and properly hung. They should not be spotted about, but grouped, unless large, and hung low enough to be seen.

A successful room must look lived in; it must therefore have comfortable chairs rightly placed and everything must be and look secure.

HOW I TOOK MY WRINKLES OUT

After Massage, Creams and Beauty Doctors Had Failed.

BY HARRIET META.

Trouble, worry and ill-health brought me deep lines and wrinkles. I realized that they not only greatly marred my appearance and made me look much older, but that they would greatly interfere with my success, because a woman's success, either socially or financially, depends very largely on her appearance. The homely woman with deep lines and furrows in her face must fight an unequal battle with her younger and better looking sister.

I therefore bought various brands of cold cream and skin foods and massaged my face with most constant regularity, hoping to regain my former appearance. But the wrinkles simply would not go. On the contrary, they seemed to get deeper. Next I went to a beauty specialist, who told me she could easily rid me of my wrinkles. I paid her my money and took the treatment. Sometimes I thought they got less, but after spending all the money I could afford for such treatment I found I still had my wrinkles. So I gave up in despair, and concluded I must carry them to my grave. One day a friend of mine who was versed in chemistry made a suggestion, and this gave me a new idea. I immediately went to work making experiments and studying everything I could get hold of on this subject. After several long months of almost numberless trials and discouragements I finally discovered a process which produced most astounding results on my wrinkles in a single night.

I was delighted beyond expression. I tried my treatment again, and lo and behold, my wrinkles were practically gone. A third treatment—three nights in all—and I had no wrinkles and my face was as smooth as ever. I next offered my treatment to some of my immediate friends, who used it with surprising results, and I have now decided to let the public benefit by it.

I will send further particulars in regard to my wrinkle remover to anyone interested, absolutely free of charge. I will also give you, absolutely free, my private formula for restoring a youthful appearance and velvet-like softness to the skin. This wonderful formula marvelously enhances beauty and is great for the complexion. It quickly removes pimples, blotches, etc., and its power for giving youth to the skin is to my mind almost magical.

Any druggist can fill it at small cost. My wrinkle remover is an entirely new discovery of my own and the process is so simple that you can use it without the knowledge of your most intimate friends. You apply the treatment at night and go to bed; in the morning, lo, the wonderful transformation! People often say it sounds too good to be true. Well, the test will tell.

Miss Gladys Desmond of Pittsburg, Pa., writes that it made her wrinkles disappear in one night.

Mrs. M. W. Graves of Bridgeport, Conn., states: "There is not a wrinkle left, my friends say I look twenty years younger. I consider your treatment a godsend to womankind." Mrs. James Barss of Central City, S. D., writes: "The change is so great that it seems more a work of magic."

I positively used no cold creams, massage, face steaming and so-called skin foods. There is nothing to inject and nothing to injure the skin.

If interested in my discovery write me to-day. If convenient inclose stamp for reply, but my wonderful free complexion formula and particulars in regard to my wrinkle remover will be sent you without charge whether you inclose stamp or not. Address Harriett Meta, Suite 831 L., Syracuse, N. Y.

Perfection of Form

NATURE, hygiene and modern chemistry seemed to have formed a mighty triune to preserve intact the beauty and charm of the Twentieth century woman.

A few years ago a maid or matron who was flat chested thought she must remain so, but now all is changed and newspapers and periodicals are recommending Vaucaire tablets to build up the bust and fill out what the French describe as "Salt cellars," those little hollows at the base of the neck near the shoulders. The basis of this tonic is imported Galega, a herb that acts immediately on the mammary glands, stimulating and building them up. It is put up in little tablets by the Willard White company, and certainly in this form it fills a long-felt want. This article has accomplished wonderful results in a number of cases known to the writer.—Editorial in March issue Woman Beautiful.

MISS ISABEL MacKINNON.

ROOSEVELT, TAFT AND THE PARTY.

With President Roosevelt maintaining his policies with unflinching determination; with Secretary Taft, the prospective nominee of the Republican party to succeed the President, standing by those policies and adding to them his own call for tariff revision, and with the rank and file of the party indorsing the administration and Mr. Taft through state and district conventions and by other unmistakable manifestations of approval, the reactionary organization, led by Speaker Cannon, is making a hopeless fight in these closing days of Congress. Already the House leaders have made important concessions. They have agreed to relax their arbitrary rules in order to pass some of the most important measures sought by the people and urged by the President, and it is believed that the Senate will be forced to co-operate with the House in this programme.

But aside from these concessions, the reactionaries in Congress, who represent the Special Interests opposed to the Roosevelt administration and the Taft candidacy, would have been doomed to defeat. If they had resisted the pressure of the people and the President to the end, they would have seriously jeopardized the party in the Congressional elections of next fall, and they could not have checked the current of Taft support. What they are doing now is to save the control of the House. That is all that is left for them, for they can no longer hope to secure the nomination of one of their own number for the Presidency. It may be hoped, therefore, that in the remainder of the session these reactionary leaders, having failed utterly to control the party, will do something to promote harmony before the meeting of the national convention and the beginning of the greater campaign.

And it may be accepted that whatever the House and Senate leaders agree to do in accordance with the administration policies will be done for the party's sake, not for the country's. These especial representatives of the Privileged Interests were forced to submit to the people's policies earlier in the Roosevelt administration. Public pressure is just as strong now as it was then, but a systematic plan was laid to discredit the administration in its last year and to prevent the nomination of Secretary Taft and the consequent assurance that the party would continue those policies through another administration. To this end the men in control of Congress have stopped at nothing. They have adopted more stringent and obstructive rules than were ever brought in before. The Speaker of the House has been defiantly and offensively arbitrary in his rulings. The President's recommendations have been ignored. The popular indorsement of the administration by every state and district Republican convention has been disregarded. This session has witnessed a reckless charge on the policies that elected Mr. Roosevelt by the most overwhelming majority in the history of the country. The anomalous situation is pointedly illustrated in the action of the Illinois convention, which formally, but not spontaneously, indorsed Speaker Cannon of that state for the Presidency and at the same time indorsed the administration of President Roosevelt with enthusiasm. Yet at that very time Cannon was in the attitude of the most implacable and potential opponent of the President.

In the political game now in progress the reactionary organization will soon be counted out. Its allied candidates will retire to relative obscurity and its component parts will adjust themselves to a situation in which nothing will be seen but the splendid administration of President Roosevelt and the hopeful candidacy of Secretary Taft. The time will never come when Predatory Wealth shall regain the hold on the government that it had before the advent of President Roosevelt.

THE OUTCOME OF DEWEY'S VICTORY.

On the day war was declared with Spain ten years ago, in an inconspicuous place in the riot headlines on the first page of The Star appeared the brief statement that the President was discussing taking the Philippines. Doubtless in the excitement of the day few persons noticed the assertion. But it forecasted the most important consequence of the war.

The United States could have assumed the protectorate over Cuba and Porto Rico without greatly straining political traditions or changing the nation's position in the eyes of the world. By taking charge of the Philippines the government was entering upon a momentous experiment and abandoning its policy of isolation. The archipelago made the United States a factor in the march of the allies to Pekin. It has operated to force this country to become interested in the settlement of the Chinese question and in the future movements of Japan.

The parting of the ways did not come with Dewey's victory, the anniversary of which has just been celebrated. Dewey's operations were primarily naval. He was directed to capture or destroy the Spanish fleet at Manila. No further operations were contemplated. Dewey could have remained in the harbor indefinitely, using Cavite as a base. But with the Spanish fleet out of the way it seemed a wise military measure to take possession of the capital. To neglect to press an obvious military advantage would have appeared negligent. Dewey cabled to Washington that he could take Manila at any time, but that he did not have the men to hold it. Consequently the Administration sent an expedition that sailed from San Francisco May 21.

The departure of this expedition meant the acquisition of the Philippines by the United States. Had it not been sent Dewey would have sailed back to Hongkong in the summer or early autumn. But with the city captured and the Spanish power crumbled there was no decent alternative to the course actually pursued.

The islands were evidently not fit for self-government. The people were quite without the necessary training. The American people would not consent to returning them to Spanish misrule nor to giving them to some colonial power to exploit. The altruistic motive prevailed in the final decision.

Spain yielded to superior force and the offer of 20 million dollars. With the aid of Democratic votes the Administration put the peace treaty through the Senate and the United States definitely entered the group of nations with world-wide interests.

AS MR. WATTERSON SEES IT.

Mr. Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, is one of the soundest advisers the Democratic party has had in his time. In the light of retrospect it is clearly seen that in more than one instance grave mistakes might have been avoided if his counsel had been heeded. In others fine opportunities might have been seized if he had been permitted to direct action. Mr. Watterson knows political history. He is a good analyzer of men. He knows popular values. He is an indomitable champion of upright principles in public affairs. Therefore, when Mr. Watterson addresses himself to some subject of public concern, his utterance is important.

In to-day's issue of The Star is a Watterson editorial giving an interesting account of his "discovery" of Governor Johnson as an available man for the Presidency, of the reception his suggestion received, of the failure of this personal boom, of the later and wholly unexpected revival of that boom, and of the contest now on between Mr. Johnson and Mr. Bryan. It is good reading. It reveals the characteristic fatuousness of the Democratic organization in its latter state, both as to inaction and initiative. Mr. Watterson may be wrong in some of his conclusions, for political futures are mighty uncertain; but he is plausible and entertaining. He is wrong as to the revival of the Johnson boom, if he attributes that solely to the sudden purpose of Wall street. That revival was brought about in a way not even hinted at by Mr. Watterson. Wall street may be behind it now. Wall street may prefer Johnson to Bryan, just as Wall street, having failed to make formidable the candidacy of Cannon or Fairbanks or Knox, which it would mightily prefer to the candidacy of Taft, might still prefer Taft to LaFollette, who is an extremist, or even to Hughes, who has never defined himself and might prove to be an extremist. But Wall street would not be responsible for Taft's nomination, and it is not responsible for Johnson's candidacy.

But Mr. Watterson's story of the "dark horse" and its rider is timely. It gives a good deal of incidental light on a situation that is vastly troublesome to the Democratic party.

BARRING THE YOUNG MEN.

While age is no bar to the service of a British Prime Minister, neither does youth disqualify from cabinet office. In both respects the British practice differs strikingly from the American. No American has held the Presidency above the age of 69. The minimum age of a member of the United States cabinet is not on record. The cases below 40, however, must be rare.

The reorganization of the British ministry invites attention to this difference. Five members are in their thirties. Lord Lucas, one of the under secretaries, is 32, Winston Spencer Churchill 33, F. D. Ackland 34, C. F. Masterman 35, and Walter Runciman 38. Gladstone, Salisbury, Rosebery, Peel, Fox, all entered the cabinet before they were 40. Palmerston was secretary of state for war at 25, and William Pitt made a record by being prime minister at 24.

Contrast this with the Roosevelt cabinet, in which the youngest member, Mr. Garfield, was appointed at 42. Mr. Cortelyou took a secretaryship at 41 five years ago. Most of the members are decidedly beyond middle age. Secretary Wilson, the oldest, is nearly 73. In view of the fact that brilliant achievements in other fields than politics are often credited to men in their 30s or even younger, it is a fair inference that the nation is unreasonably depriving itself of services that ought to be at its disposal. Unless it is assumed that there are no competent young men in the country there must be some artificial barrier keeping them out of important national offices.

In at least one great department of politics, the House of Representatives, that barrier is evident. The rules of the House, coupled with the procedure that makes desirable committee assignments go by seniority, must hold down young men. The House is no longer a debating body. It does its work almost exclusively through committees which are in turn subject to the domination of the Speaker and his party colleagues on the committee on rules. If a capable young man is sent to Washington he is assigned to some unimportant committees and he is bound and gagged so effectively that it is almost a miracle if he manages to break away and let anybody know of his existence.

Things are more sensibly managed in the House of Commons. Pitt, to be sure, was received as prime minister with "derisive laughter," and his father had replied to a taunt of Walpole with the famous expression on "the atrocious crime of being a young man." But that was more than a century ago. The Commons is an open field in which a man of ability has a chance to make himself felt and the capable youngster is encouraged there. If he has it in him he may rapidly push himself to the front and secure any post in the government.

There may be dispute as to whether the British Parliamentary system is superior to the American. There can be none as to the advantages of a procedure that gives young men a chance to prove their worth.

ONE NEGLECTED SERVICE OF "OUR DADDIES."

The dollar of our daddies, the butternut jeans of our daddies and the ideas of our daddies have all received an immense amount of veneration. But there has been one service of our furthest removed American daddies that has been pretty well overlooked. Those particular Fathers had precious little reverence for the traditions of their daddies.

That is to say, that the thing which we respect most in our Revolutionary ancestors is the fact that they did get up a Revolution. And the quality in their later creative work which we most admire is the novelty of it. What makes us put on our chiefest airs of Yankee Doodle Dandy except that our institutions are different? We aren't nearly so proud of the points of similarity between Magna Charta and the Constitution as we are of the differences between them.

The American people did not get from the signers of the Declaration of Independence nor from the framers of the Constitution the spirit this denotes—"What was good enough for our daddies is good enough for us."

If the Constitution had been really a static thing then instead of being worthy of reverence it would have merited condemnation. But it was handed down to a supposedly capable people by progenitors who were so enamored of change that they kicked the table over and founded a nation.

Would it not be most acceptable to the daddies to carry forward the great republic in the spirit they conceived it? Would not they continue to adapt its forms to its necessities and contrive its capabilities in accord with the people's faith?

GIFTS.

Give a man a horse he can ride,
  Give a man a boat he can sail;
And his rank and wealth, his strength and health,
  On sea nor shore shall fail.

Give a man a pipe he can smoke,
  Give a man a book he can read:
And his home is bright with a calm delight,
  Though the room be poor indeed.

Give a man a girl he can love,
  As I, O my love, love thee;
And his heart is great with the pulse of Fate,
  At home, on land, on sea.

THE JOY OF GARDENS.

L. Mc. C. in Chicago Evening Post.

To dream and to invite one's soul is a privilege without price and without sin if we invite the gods. To loaf and invite nonsense is another thing in tune with planting thistles for the sake of watching them come up, but who will say us nay when we half shut our eyes and behold Iris trailing her rainbow robes across the sunny slopes of the ravines, awakening the rosy hepaticas to paint beauty over the brown earth, or follow her to the brook where the buttercups and cowslips open their golden coffers at the call of spring?

What punishment more awful than to be "shut away in outer darkness," without fragrance, music or color, and to have eyes that see not and ears that hear not? Gone would be the perfume of opening violets and lilac buds, the blue of rain-washed April skies and the wind harps in the tree tops accompanying the robin's matin song. It is a blessed thing that coin from the mint cannot purchase these things nor earthly painters change the color harmonies that nature plays upon our eyes as strains of music fascinate our ears. The humblest and most sorely distressed needs but invite his soul to the dream picture of azure beds of scillas reflecting the blue of heaven from the fresh green of the young grass on the lawn, or look with rapture upon the gold-woven tapestry of royal crocuses gemmed with the dew at early morning or go in search of the pink clouds of peach and apple bloom in the groves.

In thinking of other worlds beyond, we should have vast comfort in this, if we were certain that we coulfd enjoy our garnered experiences which we have bought so dearly. Last season there was the vision of a tangled flower garden where each sweet thing went its willful way, and surely flowers ought to know what is best and grow in grace if given the opportunity. There are advocates of natural gardens for children as well as for flowers everywhere, and it is probable that the outcome is marked with the same astonishing results since little foxes of mischief and vagrant weeds of ne'er-to-do-well tendencies creep through the palings left unwatched.

"Plant things sure to grow and leave the rest to nature," said a wiseacre disciple of the natural garden, presenting the seeds and later walking by on the other side of the street as scarlet zinnias touched elbows with purple phlox and blue larkspur and tall sunflowers looked disconsolate among weigelias amabilis. The disciple of the natural garden groaned inwardly while confessing that he had not dreamed a color scheme and invited his soul before seed buying. "All chance, direction which we cannot see," he murmured, "even nature plans her color schemes, groups her plants and harmonizes with ribbons of white and green." The superb scarlet zinnias massed by themselves with the green grass all around or a fringe of gentle feverfews, the purple phlox associated with their white kindred in a clump apart, and the larkspurs tangled with Shasta daisies, and order and harmony reigns among these simple folk.

As in life we should choose friends for youth and friends for age, some for the idle hour and many for the everyday of passing years, in a like humor we may assemble our flower companions to keep pace with the moods from January until Christmas. Why haste to plant all the garden at once when it is so important and the working and planning is a delight? Its beauty, after all, is the reflection of the inner taste of the ardent gardener, and when to-morrow you stop to look across a lawn where bloodroot is lifting its cap among the hepaticas under the shrubbery, and where trilliums are lifting the mold under the snowberry bushes, and there are signs of columbine and shooting stars, you may smile to yourself that all that simplicity is like a charming verse of poetry, the fine picture of a divine thought of one who roved the wild flower haunts.

And as you go down the street the tender grass waves about clumps of sunny jonquils and where the sun shines warmest a colony of narcissus poeticus is nodding, and in prim rows the tulip blades have cut stiff ranks across the lawn, and you say to yourself that here is one who has hoped and is now having high festival because of dreams coming true.

Then perchance as you note the ruddy buds of peonies and sharp swords of iris peeping above the ground, you pray your memory to remind you to pass that way again in May to feast your eyes on the purple of the iris and the luxuriant bloom of peonies while the air is heavy with their fragrance and bees are gathering sweets.

Some time in your wandering you may rest under a hedge awaiting the passing of an April shower and look forth into a quiet little garden that brought out a picture of last June when it was flame and mystery with hosts of oriental poppies glowing red, dropping their heavy heads amid cool green foliage. What a wealth of gorgeous color was that tiny garden, and as July came and once more you turned your tseps in its familiar paths, lo! a cloth of gold, Escholtzia of the Golden West, spread splendor all about, and you vexed your heart to know what manner of gardener had sown seeds to blossom so royally.

Nor was the pageant done, for the frosted autumn woods bent above the cardinal of salvia framed in wreaths of star-eyed asters and golden rod, and as winter snows lay deep the mountain ash and bitter sweet and scarlet berry shone above the snow.

A COMING ROYAL MARRIAGE.

A Swedish Prince to Wed a Russian Grand Duchess.

The marriage of the Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna of Russia to Prince William of Sweden is to take place on May 8 at Czarskoe Selo, and it is expected that the bridegroom's father, the king of Sweden, will go to Russia for the ceremony. The young princess and her brother, the Grand Duke Dimitri, have been brought up by their aunt, the Grand Duchess Elizabeth, the czaritza's sister and widow of the murdered Grand Duke Serge. Her mother died when the princess' brother was born and her father, the Grand Duke Paul, usually lives near Paris.

Some years after his wife's death the Grand Duke Paul married Mme. Pistolkors, the divorced wife of a colonel in the Cavalier guards. As the marriage is not recognized by the czar, the lady is not allowed to enter Russia and, indeed, the grand duke himself was exiled by his nephew for some time. Before her marriage Mme. Pistolkors was very popular at the Russian court until the fatal day when she appeared at a court ball wearing the jewels which had formerly belonged to the grand duke's mother and which he had lent her for the occasion. The emperor and empress were furious and the lady's name was promptly removed from the list of those allowed to come to court.

The Grand Duchess Elizabeth has given a very careful education to her niece. She speaks French and German perfectly and is making great progress in Swedish, which is only natural, as her teacher is the young Swedish prince. Most of her life has been spent in Moscow and she is Russian to the backbone, a devout member of the orthodox church and an enthusiastic admirer of Russian art and literature. She is particularly fond of the works of Tolstoi and is proud of having received several letters from the great writer. Her aunt made a home for a number of officers and soldiers who had been wounded in the war with Japan, at her country home in the South, and no visitor was more welcomed by the sufferers than the Grand Duchess Marie. She used to spend hours reading to the patients and would help the nurses to tend them.

Mustn't Sketch Paris Hats.

From the New York Press.

Is there any law on the statute books of New York or any other city which forbids ambitious sketch artists from drawing the angles of a real French hat worn by a woman in a theater, tearoom or other public place of assembly? It appears that private detectives have been instructed to order out all those seen manipulating their pencils in such places. A prominent water colorist recently in New York, who wanted to catch the pose of a pretty woman with a flower laden hat, was ejected from the tearoom of a New York hotel for making a few strokes on the back of an envelope. Do the detectives act in behalf of the importers who wish the second milliners to be barred from copying real Paris born creations? Surely the solemn majesty even of the greatest of New York hostelries is not infringed by a poor artist who wants to get the real thing for his canvas.

SOME COMMENTS UPON "SALT-RISING" BREAD.

There is a bread that is called "salt-rising." According to the standard of the housewives who make it best, it is the queen of breads, the highest achievement of bread making. As to the men folks—well, about this time of year, when the system "sorter hankers" for lighter, more ephemeral food substances, a baking of salt-rising, served fresh with the warmth of the baking still within it, is a certain surcease to yearnings for food that one cannot name, but wants at times just the same. Salt-rising makes him realize that it is just what he has been "honin'" for, but did not know it.

Salt-rising bread is more of a relish than a steady food. There are reasons why this is so. The real desire for it comes only at intervals between long series of meals of hot biscuits, hot batter cakes, waffles, cornbread and muffins, just like one has a taste now and then for a bit of salt mackerel after something akin to a surfeit from many meals of pork, beef, mutton and chicken. Again, the very necessities of the making of salt-rising bread are a bar to the use of it as a steady food. It would be impossible to have a fresh baking of it every meal or even every day—the cook would have no time for anything else. If not fresh, but having stood over, it or any bread could never become popular with country Missourians. We prefer parched corn with salt to any left-over bread, and few Missourians are so henpecked that they will say to the contrary. Bread, fresh, hot or warm every time, is the real Missouri motto and standing by it, the country Missourian lives a long time mighty healthily.

Country women folks attribute to the housewife who never makes a failure of her salt-rising, that super-excellence which few equal and none excel. Her fame spreads and is encoached upon only by the glorification of the good woman who always makes perfect "beat biscuit." However, in common with many male Missourians, heresy it may be to put it down, I incline to believe this feminine, excessive praise of salt-rising bread is much like the ecstasies of musicians over certain music. They rhapsodize because the thing is so difficult and so easily spoiled in the doing. Salt-rising bread beyond a doubt is mighty comforting to a man—now and then. In addition it proves to you that the cook who made it can be surely put down as one who has thoroughly mastered the entire science of cookery, and you need have no apprehension of poor victuals at any time from such a one. Nevertheless, should fate bring it to pass that in Missouri there should be no more bread but salt-rising bread, most Missourians would hasten to other countries and other climes.

There is one thing that salt-rising bread will do, or rather the dough of it set by to rise, that nothing else in this whole world will accomplish. It will fatten a hound dog. In the days of my boyhood I owned a hound puppy that became fat on salt-rising and the memory of that fattening may account for any little sign of prejudice against salt-rising bread evinced in this writing. I loved that puppy with the extreme affection only a boy can feel for such a dog. The puppy's appetite and the desire to gratify it was his supreme, controlling instinct. He swallowed everything he happened upon that was swallowable. He was carnivorous, herbivorous, granmivorous and omnivorous, but I loved him all the same. One warm, sunshiny, summer afternoon the puppy came across a setting of salt-rising dough that our cook, Aunt Maria, had placed on a bench outside the house to rise by the warmth of the sun. The puppy swallowed that dough setting. It straightway rose within his interior and fattened him right there and then. It fattened him so quickly he had no time to catch and hold his breath and it kept on fattening him after his breath was clean gone. It was a case of a rising after death for though my puppy was dead he still rose. I buried him in a shady corner of the orchard where the ground was soft and easy to dig and the hole I had to dig for his grave was big enough for a full grown sheep although my poor puppy had been but a little puppy up to the engulfing of the salt-rising.

Do you wish to make salt-rising bread—such salt-rising bread as will please the country Missourian who happens to be your guest and give you fame as a good housewife? Suppose then you wish to make bread enough for a dozen people. A good time to begin is right after supper, when there is still a fire in the kitchen stove. Take one-half pint of sweet milk and heat it to boiling. Then stir in corn meal until the hot milk and the meal come to a thick batter. While stirring add a pinch of salt. Put this mixture away for the night in some place like a cupboard or pantry, but in no place that acts as a refrigerator. Let it set until morning. During the breakfast hour make a batter with a pint of flour, a quart of warm milk and a teaspoonful of salt. Into this stir the over-night kept mixture until the ingredients of the whole become thoroughly mixed. This done you have your salt-rising dough ready for the rising process. Put this dough in a stone jar or big tin, if you have no stone jar—the jar is better—with plenty of empty space for the swelling up. Half the jar or more should be empty space. Put the jar in water inclosed in some larger receptacle, so the water may surround the jar within two or three inches of its top. Place this whole affair in a warm place, on a stool right back of the stove is as good as any. In from two to three hours, or about 9:30 o'clock in the morning, if your beginning commences in the morning at breakfast time corresponding to ours in the country, the dough in the jar has risen sufficiently for baking. During this rising process give the dough careful attention and when watery fluid gathers on top of it stir it down. When ready to bake work the dough well, adding during the manipulation two tablespoonfuls of pure lard, the very best you can get. Slightly grease your baking pan. Put the dough in it and slightly grease the top of the dough. Put the whole in the oven and let bake for about an hour, or until the top of the baking shows brown. Just before taking out of the oven rub lightly a cloth saturated with melted butter over the top of the bread. A few moments' baking and this last rub has made the crust tender and more beautifully brown. Attention, close attention, to the bread while it is baking will tell you when it is ready to be taken from the oven better than any directions specifying time by the clock. Following the directions as above your salt-rising bread will be ready to be served at the noon dinner. To make rolls, instead of a loaf, roll the dough when it is ready for the baking pan into balls about twice the size of a hen egg. Place these close together in the baking pan and bake as hereinbefore directed. Serve the bread while warm and fresh if you would gain the affections of the Missourians you serve it to.

Salt rising! I like it mighty well, but would like it better if—well, there is the sad memory of a misguided but well beloved hound pup. Rollins Bingham.

A GIRL VISITS CANNIBALS.

Beatrice Grimshaw, the Author, the Guest of Savages.

From a letter received by friends from that adventure-loving girl, Beatrice Grimshaw, whose stories of the South seas have been attracting attention in the United States lately, it appears that she has been enjoying herself in her own peculiar way in and around New Guinea, which is to be the scene of the novel she is now writing to succeed the "Vaiti of the Islands." Her letter, which is dated from the Gulf of Paqua, is, in part, as follows:

"Day before yesterday we called at Goari-Bari, a notorious place, where Chalmers, the famous missionary, was eaten in 1902, and where a terrible fracas with natives occurred in 1904, resulting not long afterwards in the suicide of Governor Robinson. It is an island close to the mainland. Few white people have been there, and no one has ever stopped a night, and no white woman was ever there before myself. The governor, a friend of his, Colonel Antill, two missionaries, the governor's secretary, myself and six armed police from Port Moresby (natives) were the landing party. The natives were extremely excited and jumpy; nervous, one would say. They received us quietly enough and accepted presents of beads.

"We stayed all afternoon and made our boys make afternoon tea for us in the middle of the village. The cannibals crowded around in the wildest excitement. They were all unclothed, with a good deal of paint and feathers, and had bows and spears and stone axes. They seemed frightened at the tea ceremonial, evidently thinking it was a piece of magic, which they believe in greatly. We went back to the ship quite peacefully."

A Man's First Care.

Joseph Addison.

A man's first care should be to avoid the reproaches of his own heart; his next, to escape the censures of the world. If the last interferes with the former, it ought to be entirely neglected; but otherwise there cannot be a greater satisfaction to an honest mind, than to see those approbations which it gives itself seconded by the applauses of the public.

FRONTERA, A MEXICAN PORT, WHE RE THE TOURIST IS SELDOM SEEN.

"To the South lies the future trade of Galveston and the middle western portion of the United States," is a saying that is often heard in business circles of the Texas port. While it long has been generally known that there is a vast territory in far Southeastern Mexico which is great in natural richness and has at all times stood ready to turn the stream of her tropical products into the United States through the Galveston gateway, no attempt ever has been made to bring about this desired result.

Enterprising business men of Galveston came to a realization of the possibilities of the trade of this isolated and remote region not long ago and a trade excursion was sent down there to spy out the land and pave the way for the establishment of a regular steamship service between Frontera, San Juan Bautista and other points in the states of Tabasco and Campeche and the port of Galveston. The states of Tabasco and Campeche occupy a peculiar position in their relation to the other portions of Mexico. They are completely isolated from the highways of trade and traffic of the other parts of the country. They have no railway outlets and the steamship service between Frontera and Vera Cruz and other Mexican ports is of little value so far as tending to stimulate and develop the resources of this region are concerned. It is stated that freight can be laid down in Galveston as cheaply as it can in Vera Cruz from Frontera or San Juan Bautista and much cheaper than it can be carried to the City of Mexico.

"GOD IS LOVE."

At Derby Haven in the sweet Manx land
A little girl had written on the sand
This legend: "God is love." But, when I said:
"What means this writing?" thus she answered:
  "It's father that's at say,
  And I came here to pray,
And * * * God is love." My eyes grew dim—
Blest child! in Heaven above
Your angel sees the face of Him
Whose name is love.

Mark Twain, at a dinner not long ago, said that the recent financial panic had been caused by the removal from the coinage of the motto "In God We Trust." The spendthrift says that money, being round, was made to roll. The miser says that money, being flat, was made to stack up. Both are wrong. Strangely wrong, too, in their ideas about money are the veteran Australian gold diggers. These simple old fellows, though worth perhaps ½ million or more, live in the simple dugouts and shanties of their lean early days. They have no conception of the value for their money they could get in the way of motor cars, diamonds, opera boxes. Their conception of luxury is a trip to town, a silk dress for the wife and maybe a whisky spree. Once, lecturing, I landed at an Australian port. There was no porter in sight to carry my luggage. Seeing a rough looking old fellow leaning against a post with his hands in his pockets I beckoned to him and said: 'See here, if you'll carry these bags up to the hotel I'll give you half a crown.' The man scowled at me. He took three or four gold sovereigns from his pocket, threw them into the sea, scowled at me again and walked away without a word."

KANSAS CITY: A FIGHT FOR SELF GOVERNMENT.

(The street railway situation in Kansas City, particularly in its relation to the spring campaign, affords an interesting study of the forces that interfere with self-government in American cities. Lincoln J. Steffens might properly enough have included Kansas City in one of his series of articles on "Enemies of the Republic." This article is written from the same outside viewpoint adopted by Mr. Steffens. It is hoped that it may help to clear up what must be a somewhat vague situation to out-of-town readers of The Star.)

I

A Stake of Millions.

KANSAS CITY has recently proved by the census that it is the most American of cities.

It is right. It is American in more ways than one. American in nativity, in energy, in enthusiasm, in hope—and in its fight to determine whether the people or the public service corporations shall control the city.

For that, after all, has become one of the greatest and most persistent problems in American political life. In Chicago, in New York, in San Francisco, in Cleveland the same phenomenon has appeared. In city after city one sleepless influence appears. Often it works beneath the surface—this activity of special privilege—controlling both parties and using the party labels for its own purpose. In Kansas City it has been exposed to the view of all men. And here Kansas City has the advantage. Its people are not fighting in the dark.

A peculiar combination of circumstances has forced the Metropolitan Street Railway company out of concealment.

In the first place it was so financed that 20 millions of its bonds fall due in 1913. Its managers for two years have regarded a franchise extension as imperative in order to refinance the company.

In the second place the Missouri legislature in 1907 enacted a law giving councils the right to regulate public service corporations and to create Public Utilities commissions to learn the facts on which to base such regulation.

Either the franchise extension or the regulation of rates was a matter of very great consequence to the street railway company. Together they are of such overwhelming importance that they have brought the company into a desperate fight to control the city administration that is to be elected April 7.

II

A Quarter Century's Contest.

To understand just what these two points mean to the company—and so to explain the vigor of its fight—it is necessary to review briefly the conditions leading up to the contest of 1908.

In Kansas City, as in most other American cities, the street railway company has long been interested in controlling the municipal government in order to get franchises without making an adequate return and to hold down taxes. As far back as 1882 The Star—the town's single uncontrolled newspaper—was declaring the issue in the spring campaign to be whether the people or the street railway monopoly should control the city.

Two years later the horse car street railway monopoly, pursuing the customary tactics of similar corporations everywhere, undertook to railroad through the city council an ordinance granting the company a thirty-year exclusive franchise without compensation to the city, although a committee of citizens hastily offered $150,000 for the same franchise. The grab was blocked through the aggressive publicity of The Star, which denounced the deal under a "scare" headline:

THE CITY SOLD.

The newspaper called a mass meeting of protest and printed a list of the aldermen voting for the grab under the line, "The Shameless Eight."

The situation attracted attention elsewhere and the Chicago News had this to say about it:

> Kansas City is all torn up over the action of the city council in granting a thirty-year street car franchise to the man who has hitherto monopolized the street car business in that town. It seems that a number of Kansas City capitalists offered the city $150,000 for the same privileges which are now given to the street railway owner for no public consideration whatever, and now the indignant populace threatens to lynch the owner. He is not the party with whom the lynchers should commence operations. The city councilmen who granted the franchise under such suspicious circumstances are the ones who should be dealt with.

The people took the hint. A meeting of the council was called for the night of Saturday, September 6, to consider the mayor's veto of the ordinance. An improvised committee of safety called a mass meeting of citizens at the city hall for the same hour. It was understood they were to bring ropes. The council in a fright met surreptitiously at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and sustained the veto. The members dared not risk a lynching.

As a result of this fight competing cable lines were built. Cable lines were in the experimental stage at the time and the city was glad to have them occupy the streets without charge save for an annual license fee of $25 a car.

But trouble soon developed because the traction monopoly, with the usual shortsightedness of similar institutions, refused to pay the license fee. The mayor, H. C. Kumpf, exhausted his patience in negotiations and on August 7, 1886, he ordered the police to stop all cars and arrest the drivers. Traffic was tied up the greater part of the day until an injunction was procured by the company. But two weeks later it capitulated and paid the $25 fee on each of its sixty cars.

Another exhibition of the overreaching propensities of public service corporations came in 1895 when the value of franchises was better appreciated. There was a consolidation of lines and an ordinance was hurried through the council granting a nine-year franchise extension.

This grab was denounced by The Star as "infamous," but a perfunctory veto by the mayor was overriden by the council and the use of the streets was granted to the Metropolitan until June 1, 1925, without compensation to the city.

At that time the Missouri statutes prohibited the consolidation of competing street railway lines, and the validity of this extension was questionable. In 1899 the legislature passed an act legalizing consolidations, and the company waited for its chance to secure a valid extension.

III

The "Peace Agreement."

A truce of a few years followed in which the only developments were the extension of old lines and the building of one cross town road, which was required to pay 2 per cent of the gross receipts to the city in addition to taxes, and a car license.

Then some Democratic politicians, seeking an issue and also a practical means of strengthening their party locally, hit upon the Metropolitan street railway. There were threats of street railway competition which were headed off at considerable expense to the Metropolitan. In one instance a short line was constructed which the company had to purchase at a good price. In another the company paid at least $65,000 to the promoters of the competing line to induce them to give up the project. All attempts by the Metropolitan to extend its lines were blocked and finally the owners of the road sickened of the fight.

A Democratic politician was taken into the management of the company and its employees were turned over to the Democratic machine—or to one faction of it—for political purposes. This was an important asset to the Democratic faction, since there are between 2,000 and 3,000 of these employees and a large share of them have usually feared to incur the company's displeasure by voting against its candidates.

But the advantage was not alone with the party. An ordinance was passed granting the company permission to make the extensions it had long desired, limiting its taxes to 8 per cent of the gross receipts and confirming its right to a five-cent fare for the remaining twenty-three years of its franchises.

Thus the significance of this so-called "peace agreement" was that it took advantage of the law of 1899 to confirm the grab of 1895 that was of questionable validity. Because of this defect in title the company had not been able readily to raise funds. Now it was in a position to get plenty of money—both for improvements and for a rake-off to the insiders.

All these concessions to the company were disguised as city victories. The Metropolitan was "forced" to submit. When it is recalled that other cities were already getting three and four-cent fares—as Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo—that Baltimore was getting 9 per cent of the gross earnings in addition to taxes, that Toronto was getting 3½-cent fares in addition to taxes and 10 per cent of the gross receipts, it is evident that the Metropolitan was getting an excellent bargain for itself.

That the company so regarded it is evident from a circular sent out by the president under date of May 20, 1904, to the banking syndicate that had purchased some of its bonds. He said:

> The topography of the territory and other conditions bearing upon the matter are such that the important item of earnings per car per mile is unusually large.
>
> The electric lighting and power business in the territory is performed exclusively by the electric light companies (consolidated in the Kansas City Railway and Light company) which also own the only system of underground conduits therein. The franchises of the railway lines in Kansas City, Mo., in which city the greater part of the said lines is located, have recently been revised and confirmed and franchises have been granted by the city for extensions and trackage rights in newly populated portions thereof and in its shopping and delivery districts, all of which franchises are operative to the uniform date of June 1, 1925. The railway franchises of Kansas City, Kas., have recently been renewed, and authority has been given to build a number of extensions, all for the minimum period for which the city had power to grant the same, namely, to December 19, 1922. The franchise of the Kansas City Electric Light company is perpetual.
>
> By the terms of the franchises, the rate of fare of the railway lines is definitely fixed at five cents, transfer privileges are provided and the taxes practically limited to 8 per cent of the annual gross receipts.

IV

How Taxes Were Limited.

The significance of this remark about the "limitation" of taxes began to be appreciated later in Kansas City when it was found that the city had to be an energetic lobbyist to keep down the assessment of the company by the state board of equalization. The assessment had been low in previous years, presumably as a reward for the company's liberal contributions to campaign funds. But when Kansas City sat down to figure it discovered that if the street railway property were taxed on the same basis as real estate, the 8 per cent would not pay the taxes.

At the present time of depressed prices the market value of the securities based on street railway property owned by the Kansas City Railway and Light company is 37 million dollars. Last year the street railway company reported gross earnings of nearly 5 million dollars, of which nearly 4 million dollars were derived from the lines in the Missouri Kansas City. To be a little more exact, five-sixths of the earnings were in Missouri. It is fair then to assume that about 31 of the 37 millions of street railway securities represents Missouri property.

Real estate is assessed at 40 per cent of the market value. On that basis the 31 millions should be assessed at 12½ million dollars. Last year the tax rate was $1.25 on the $100 for the city and $1.54 on the $100 for schools, county and state purposes—a total of $2.79. On the 12½ millions the taxes would therefore amount to $349,000.

Now, the company actually paid last year, in lieu of all taxes, $319,000. This was $30,000 less than the taxes would have amounted to on a fair assessment—and it got the use of the streets rent free.

So the city awoke to the fact that the 8 per cent paid it, far from being a generous compensation, was in reality less than it might have received from taxes alone; that if the assessment should be put up to a reasonable figure the city might have to go down into its own pocket to pay the Metropolitan's taxes to the county and state; and that in any event the company had the enormously valuable use of the streets for nothing.

V

The Rake-Off for the Insiders.

Definite evidence was soon at hand that the agreement was valuable to the street railway company. The day after the ordinance passed The Star, which had opposed it, declared that it would be capitalized for 5 or 6 million dollars in watered stock.

It was capitalized at just 12½ millions. The road was at once refinanced. A holding company—the Kansas City Railway and Light company of New Jersey—was organized to own both the street railway and the electric lighting companies.

The electric lighting feature of the business with securities with a face value of 3 millions were replaced with 4½ millions in railway and light securities. The whole property was capitalized at 51 million dollars with 12½ millions preferred stock, 12½ millions common, 21 millions in bonds and 5 millions in notes.

Now there were two curious features to this transaction. The street railway lines were capitalized at 46 million dollars. The company's latest report shows it to have 239 miles of single track. The newly constructed Cleveland lines were built and equipped at a cost of $50,000 a mile, without a power plant. At that rate the Kansas City system could be duplicated for 12 million dollars. The big Grand avenue power plant is valued at 2½ millions. It probably is fair to assume that the physical value of the property does not exceed 20 million dollars—though that is one point on which Kansas City desires definite information.

The second curious feature of the affair was that the 20 millions of bonds were made short term bonds, due May 15, 1913, whereas long term bonds may usually be sold to better advantage.

The natural inference was that the insiders, having tasted the sweets of one reorganization rakeoff, were anxious to force another within ten years. To refinance the system an extension of franchises would be necessary and that extension would have to be obtained before 1913.

Remember this point—that 20 millions in bonds are due in 1913. It helps explain later developments.

VI

The Plot for Franchise Extensions

In 1906 the owners of the railway and light company thought they saw a chance to get an extension—and millions more of rake-off.

On Twelfth street the street railway descends from the bluff by a steep incline to the manufacturing and wholesale district in the bottoms. The company proposed to contribute $400,000 toward a tunnel through the bluff and a viaduct to the bottoms. In return it asked for a ten-year extension of all its franchises.

It was thought the deal would go through and the market price of common stock rose from $39 to $69 a share on the Chicago stock exchange.

The matter was considered at a secret night meeting of a council committee and everything was in readiness when The Star learned what was going on.

It told the people the meaning of the scheme and sent a reporter to Cleveland to see Mayor Tom Johnson. That street railway expert said:

"The company here would give 10 million dollars for ten years' extension of half its franchises that will expire within that time. Your council is made up of either knaves or fools if it extends that franchise with five-cent fare for less than 10 million dollars cash to the city."

The publication of that statement practically spoiled the grab. Since that time Mayor Johnson has been regarded with dislike in street railway circles in Kansas City.

VII

"Nine More Councils."

Kansas City still did not feel easy. Those 20 millions in bonds were due in 1913 and the president of the traction company had said to the city counselor:

"If we can't get the extension from this council we will from another. There will be nine councils before the expiration of the present franchises."

That was a foolish remark from the corporation standpoint, for it helped keep the people alive to the issue. They determined to know the facts regarding their public service corporations. For several years there had been agitation on this question and a Democratic state platform had declared for the regulation of public service corporations. So, under the impetus of the renewed interest in Kansas City a bill was introduced in the legislature by one of the Kansas City senators, A. L. Cooper, granting councils the right to regulate corporation charges. It was fought by the united forces of the corporations. The big men of the companies went to Jefferson City to lobby against it and it was defeated.

Governor Folk called a special session. Public sentiment was focused on the one issue and the people won. The utilities act was passed and became effective August 11, 1907.

The city administration was ready to the day. An ordinance was introduced providing for the creating of an effective utilities commission to learn the facts on which reasonable regulation could be based. It was defeated and Kansas City awoke to the fact that the public service corporations controlled the lower house of the council.

This control it found was exercised—as it always is—in curious and indirect ways. In American cities, except under the coarsest management, aldermen are rarely bought. It is much safer and just as effective for the corporate interests that desire municipal favors to contribute to the campaign funds of "good" men, to throw contracts to them, to provide jobs for their constituents, to bring to bear church affiliations, to promise political help, to get allied corporate interests to pull wires.

The time has passed when men who have things to sell to the city try for election to the council. Instead they get their agents elected and these agents, through the workings of the community of interests, can be depended on by the public service corporations.

It was by using some of the various influences here suggested that the Metropolitan and the other public service corporations held up the utilities ordinance for eight months during the tenure of the lower house members whose term will expire in April.

VIII

A Franchise Grab in the Background

That provided one issue for the spring election that is to be held April 7.

The other issue came from the Metropolitan's constant interference to prevent the settlement of the vexing Twelfth street traffic way problem. On the basis of a report from a commission appointed by Mayor Beardsley a just and satisfactory solution of the problem was worked out. But to solve the problem would be to remove the Metropolitan's most valuable chance to make a dicker for a franchise extension. For the company was always ready to hold out the proposition:

"Give us an extension of twelve years and we will build a traffic way from the bluff to the bottoms without cost to the city."

Therefore it raised all possible obstacles, incited objections and undertook to tie up the proceedings in the courts.

With conditions in this shape the spring campaign came on. The Republicans nominated Mayor Beardsley, who had made an admirable record as an executive. That made it certain that the issue would be whether the people or the Metropolitan should control the city government. For it was known that the corporate interests had given it out that he was to be made an example of because of his fight for corporation publicity and control.

It was currently reported also that the Chicago owners of the Metropolitan Street Railway company had sent word that Beardsley and his Utilities commission must be defeated at any cost since his election would mean the loss to the insiders of the millions that might be made should a franchise extension deal be pulled off.

IX

The Issue To-Day.

The Democrats nominated a business man with no especial familiarity with municipal affairs. Their platform, too, declared for a Utilities commission, as public sentiment was too strong to be ignored. But the fact that the convention was presided over by an attorney for the Metropolitan and that he at once assumed the direction of the campaign aroused suspicion that became certainty when it was discovered that the Metropolitan was actively supporting the Democratic ticket. The two corporation-owned newspapers of the town also came to its aid. The Star put the case in this fashion:

"One of the candidates for Mayor has already proved that he favors an effective Public Utilities commission. The other candidate professes to favor such a commission, and has the enthusiastic support of everyone who is opposed to it."

The street railway orators at the old game of using a party label to cover the real identity of the interests they represent are actively seeking in these closing days of the canvass to blind the public to the real issue of the campaign by dwelling on a race question and by a campaign of personal abuse and villification of the men who are standing for the city against the corporations.

Here, then, is the situation as the campaign nears its end:

A corporation with millions at stake in franchise extensions and in dividends on watered stock, is attempting to get possession of the city government for its own ends.

The game is familiar to American cities. In many the same contest is going on. The outcome in Kansas City will be watched with interest wherever men are struggling for the right to self-government.

HEADLINES FROM ISSUES OF THE STAR IN 1884, 1895, 1902, AND 1906 SHOW WHY KANSAS CITY REGARDS THE METROPOLITAN WITH SUSPICION.

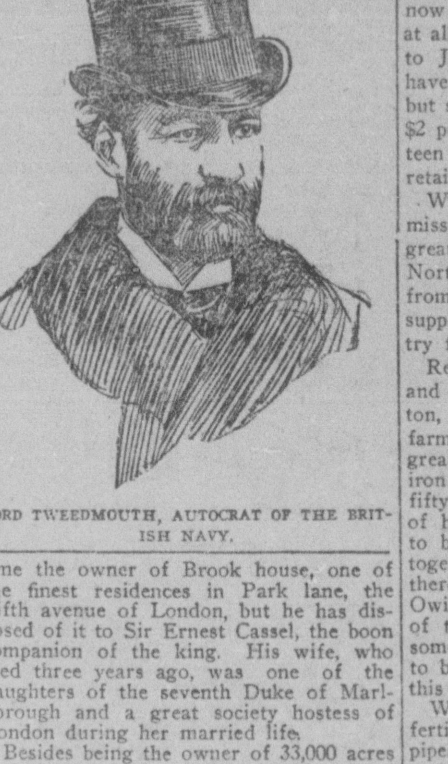
THE "BOSS" OF ENGLAND'S NAVY.

His Principal Duty Is to Suppress Unpleasant Facts.

Lord Tweedmouth, the British cabinet minister who so recently made trouble for himself through his "private correspondence" with the German emperor regarding British naval armament, occupies one of the most difficult billets at the disposal of the prime minister. Placed as he is between the "devil" of the "two-power standard" party and the "deep sea" of the "reduction of naval expenditure" enthusiasts, the first lord of the admiralty resides in a veritable hornets' nest. The position, however, carries with it a substantial consolation in the shape of a salary of $22,500 a year, almost three times that of its counterpart in the American government, the Secretaryship of the Navy, as well as a handsome house and incidentally, although not necessarily, a peerage if the incumbent does not already possess one. Yet few men who have any knowledge of the position envy Lord Tweedmouth his job.

The first lord is the political head of the British navy. He is the gag which the prime minister places on the navy to keep the real facts from the public. It is not considered necessary that he should know enough about the navy to tell the difference between a gunboat and a first class battle ship before he tackles his job, but he rules with autocratic authority. He is the superior of the other members of the commission which rules the navy of Great Britain—the senior, second, third and junior naval lords, the civil lord and the parliamentary and financial secretaries. These eight men are in theory supposed to discharge the office of high admiral of the British navy, but in reality the first lord is the "whole show" and the others simply act as his advisers. As a matter of fact, the only members of this commission who know anything at all about the navy and its needs are the senior, second, third and junior naval lords. They have grown up in the service and are men of the very highest rank. Yet as factors in influencing the naval policy of the country they hardly figure.

In the United States, when the Secretary of the Navy makes his annual report to Congress he embodies in his document the reports and the recommendations of the heads of the several subdepartments under his wing. No such thing happens when the first lord of the admiralty makes his report to Parliament. The mouths of the naval lords, the practical men in the navy who really know what is needed, are closed. They cannot open them except to eat—and talk about the weather. The only mouthpiece of the department is the first lord, who tells Parliament, and incidentally the people, just what he pleases and no more. He can grossly misrepresent the condition of the navy and even ignore or distort the information and opinions furnished to him by his naval advisers. The latter can make no public protest and the first lord, like a certain famous politician, can say with a grin: "What are you going to do about it?" The only recourse for the naval lords is resignation, after which they can wag their tongues and tell what they know. Indeed, such a thing came very near to happening some years ago. Sir William Harcourt once made the public statement "that his naval advisers considered that everything was satisfactory and shipshape in the navy." Next day, to his surprise, these same naval advisers, bluff old sea dogs, waited upon him in a body and gave notice that if he did not make a public retraction of his statement they would resign and thus remove the gag that closed their lips. Sir William retracted.



LORD TWEEDMOUTH, AUTOCRAT OF THE BRITISH NAVY.

Lord Tweedmouth, the present incumbent of this difficult position and the center of that "tempest in a teapot" which so recently threatened to sever the already torn and battered bond of good feeling between Germany and Great Britain, is a man of fifty-eight years. With his black hair and close cropped black beard he does not look his age. He was at one time the owner of Brook house, one of the finest residences in Park lane, the Fifth avenue of London, but he has disposed of it to Sir Ernest Cassel, the boon companion of the king. His wife, who died three years ago, was one of the daughters of the seventh Duke of Marlborough and a great society hostess of London during her married life.

Besides being the owner of 33,000 acres in Invernessshire and Berwickshire, Lord Tweedmouth is a large shareholder in Meux's, one of the largeest breweries in England. He was supposed to have been hard hit about three years ago by the general slump in the brewery trade, when either by compulsion or choice he disposed of not only his town house and country seat, but also of his magnificent collection of paintings. He has, however, retained his extensive collection of Wedgwood china, said to be the finest in the world.

"WHITE," BUT REALLY NEGROES

Persons Prominent in America of Unsuspected African Blood.

Ray Stannard Baker in American Magazine.

There are many supposedly white persons of great prominence in this country who are really negroes. I know of scores of them. A well known white actress, whose name, of course, I cannot give, when she goes to Boston, secretly visits her colored relatives. A New York man who holds a prominent political appointment under the state government and who has become an authority in his line, is a negro. Not long ago he enetred a hotel in Baltimore and the negro porter who ran to take his bag said discreetly:

"Hello, Bob."

As boys they had gone to the same negro school.

"Let me carry your bag," said the poretr, "I won't give you away."

In Philadelphia there lives a colored woman who married a rich white man. Of course, no white people know that she is colored, but the negroes do, and do not tell. Occasionally she drives down to a certain store, dismisses her carriage and walks on foot to the home of her mother and sisters.

Only a few years ago the newspapers were filled for a day or two with the story of a girl who had been at Vassar college, and upon graduation by merest accident it was discovered that she was a negro. A similar case arose only last summer at Chicago university.

Some mulattoes I know of, one a prominent Wall street broker, have "crossed the line" by declaring that they are Mexicans, Brazilians, Spanish or French; one says he is an Armenian. Under a foreign name they are readily accepted among white people where, as negroes, they would be instantly rejected. No one, of course, can estimate the number of men and women with negro blood who have thus "gone over to white," but it must be large.

THIS FARM IS UNDER GLASS

CUCUMBERS THE ONLY CROP OF TWO KANSAS GARDENERS.

The Vegetables Can Be Produced the Year Round by Hothouse Culture—Bees, Kept Prisoners for the Purpose, Pollenate the Blossoms.

The cucumber bids fair to become the distinctively national vegetable. It is now grown and is found in the market at all times of the year and from October to July commands fancy prices. Prices have been low this winter, dealers say, but still cucumbers brought from $1.50 to $2 per dozen at wholesale, and from fifteen cents to twenty-five cents apiece at retail.

Where do they come from? The commission merchants will tell you that the great centers of cucumber farming are Northern Illinois and Boston, and that from these places come the bulk of the supply found in the markets of this country from October to July.

Recently, however, L. G. Mackenzie and his partner, C. A. Willis, from Fulton, Ill., have established a cucumber farm at Olathe, Kas. This farm is a great hothouse constructed entirely of iron and glass and is 200 feet long by fifty feet wide. It is the first of a series of houses which these gardeners intend to build at Olathe. The present house, together with the boiler house connected therewith, cost something over $7,000. Owing to delays in the construction of the building, the first planting was somewhat late, but the owners expect to begin picking and shipping cucumbers this week.

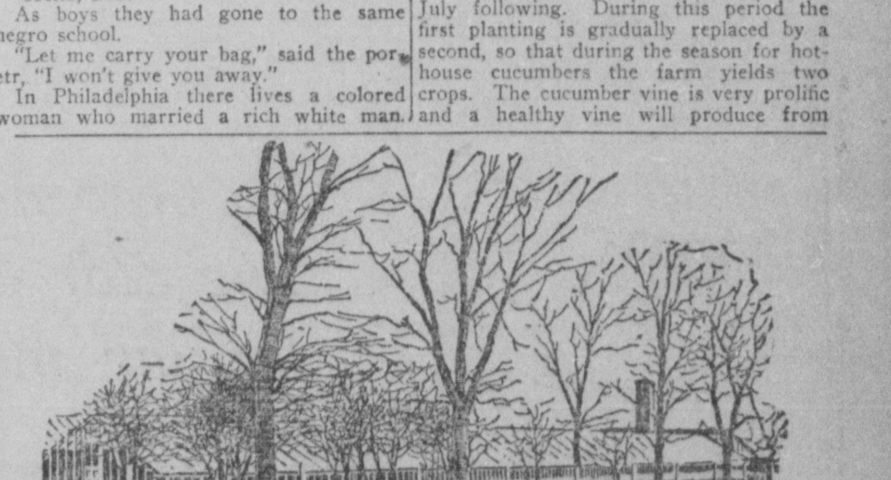
Within the hothouse are great beds of fertilized soil, mazes of steam and water pipes and an elaborate system of wiring and cross wiring. The cucumber seed is first planted in boxes. When the young plants come up they are transferred to small pots, one plant to a pot. When the plants thus potted reach a certain size they are transplanted to the bed. The plants are not allowed to spread over the bed as in the open air garden, but are "trained" over wires above. To these wires the plants are tied with "raffia" grass. The runners are carefully clipped off from day to day and the tying up process repeated as the vines grow, until they reach and cover the roof of the great glass house in which a temperature of 70 degrees or over is maintained.

THE INTERIOR OF THE CUCUMBER "FARM" AT OLATHE, KAS.

Among the vines are several hives of bees and one sees the bees flitting from bloom to bloom doing the work of fertilization. The flower of the cucumber, however, is not particularly rich in nectar and the bees have to be furnished with artificial food.

In this house there are growing at present 1,600 healthy plants and many of them are already bearing fruit of large size.

The cucumber farmer plans to plant his first crop in September. He expects to begin shipping cucumbers by the middle or latter part of October, and continue to harvest and ship until the middle of July following. During this period the first planting is gradually replaced by a second, so that during the season for hothouse cucumbers the farm yields two crops. The cucumber vine is very prolific and a healthy vine will produce from four to six dozen cucumbers. The growers are somewhat reticent concerning the quantity of vegetables produced and their profits, but when it is realized that the yield of this farm of 10,000 square feet will not fall far short of 200,000 cucumbers a year, it would seem that even at an average of seventy-five cents a dozen, cucumber farming is not a losing business.



A FARM UNDER GLASS.

Of course, misfortune sometimes comes to the cucumber farmer. A heavy hail storm may wreck his glass house and destroy his plants. And there is an insect that attacks the vines of careless growers and destroys the plants before maturity. Under ordinary conditions, however, the cucumber farmer has almost a "sure thing."

ONE OF THE PIECES OF GREEK SCULPTURE IN THE WESTERN GALLERY OF ART.
(See Article on This Page.)

KANSAS CITY'S GALLERY OF SCULPTURE.

AFTER three months of planning and hard work, places have been found in the crowded quarters of the Kansas City public library for the sixty-three pieces of sculpture and architectural reliefs presented to the Western Gallery of Art last year by W. R. Nelson. The task of placing the marbles, bronzes and terra cotta casts fell to Mrs. Helen Parsons, curator of the Western Gallery, and W. E. Benson, secretary of the board of education, and involved the making of many pedetals, as well as the exercise of much ingenuity in displaying the pieces to advantage in a very limited space.

The collection is a valuable and interesting addition to Kansas City's art works and affords an opportunity for intelligent study, not only of the best of ancient art in statuary, but of the purest decorative architectural types. While the pieces are all copies, they are accurate and faithful reproductions, both in form and substance, of the famous originals from which they were taken. The series of marbles and bronzes is complete enough to illustrate the development of Greek art, which has been the standard of sculptors of all time since 600 B. C. The collection's most ancient work is a figure of Artemis (or Diana) of Pompeii, in archiac style, and includes examples of period down to the dawn of the Roman art era, 100 B. C.

CROUCHING VENUS, VATICAN, ROME.

A hand book on Greek art calls the Diana of Pompeii "one of the most beautiful specimens of the temple image." The Greeks always painted the eyes, mouth, hair and some garments of their statues. The original of this Diana had golden hair, a white band with gilt rosettes about her head, a red band across her breast and red sandals. The "carping critic" has found fault with the dimple in her chin, declaring that it is out of character.

MERCURY, MUSEUM, NAPLES.

To what is called the "transition period"—from the archaic to the great age of Pericles—belongs the figure, a Charioteer of Delphi, in terra cotta. While the statue has something of the severity and stiffness of the earliest work, the pose and finish clearly indicate the progress of the Greeks in the plastic arts.

"In the transitional period," Mrs. Parsons explains, "the Greeks learned to master their materials. The conventional way of showing drapery was replaced by a photographic way. A grin called the archaic smile went out of fashion for use in statues, and a period of realism began. The most representative sculptor in this transition period was Myron. The Diskobolis or discus thrower, is a good example of the change."

The Diskobolis stands in the upper hall of the library building—a large figure of an athlete, photographed in bronze just as he was about to cast the discus through the air.

Another example of the art of transitional period is the group in three terra cotta bas reliefs, called the Birth of Aphrodite, attributed to Kalamis. Aphrodite (or Venus) is shown rising from the sea with the aid of two figures who represent seasons. In smaller terra cotta slabs set on either side of the large one, are, on the left, a courtezan playing a flute, and on the right a vestal virgin offering incense. They represent sacred love and profane love, a favorite theme of many artists. This group is often called the Ludovisi throne, because it is part of the Ludovisi family's art collection.

Three terra cotta slabs are reproductions of three slabs from the Parthenon, representing another century in Greek art. They show a part of a procession of figures, and are supposed to be by Phidias, the greatest sculptor of his age, an age that is considered the greatest in Greek art.

Three slabs exhibited in the library gallery are examples of three stages—one of a marshal of the parade walking, another of a man preparing to mount and the third of a rider in motion. The skill shown in the work is particularly remarkable when the depth of the relief is found to be only 1¼ to 2 inches.

One handbook on Greek art says of the sculpture of the procession that "in style it is the most perfect example of Attic grace and refinement." Another asserts that "the sculpture of the Parthenon stands in a connected series as the most perfect example of the art of Greece."

In the modeling of the figures, in the handling of drapery and in what one critic calls "the combination of restraint and sublimity," the art of Phidias is still an ideal.

After Phidias Greek art gradually began to decline. Famous works were still to follow—the "Psyche of Capua," Apollo of the Belvedere, Venus di Milo and the Nike of Samothrace—but the "Golden age" was passed.

The history of Greek art is practically closed when the Roman period, 100 B. C., to 300 A. D., arrives. To represent this period there is a bishop's chair from the church of St. Gregory, in Etruscan style.

THE LAW DIDN'T STOP THEM.

How a Trading Company Sold Whisky to the Indians.

On the north bluff of Greystone heights, south of the Turkey creek pumping station and commanding a view of the adjoining country for miles around, is a level square surrounded by mounds two feet high and 100 feet long. Honey locust trees that formed a part of what once was a stockade are still standing.

These are all that remains of a fort established by the American Fur Traders company, shortly after Misouri was admitted to the Union. It was one of the principal trading posts in this part of the country.

The traders were not allowed to sell or trade whisky to the Indians in the territory that is now the state of Kansas.

They had a unique way of evading this law, however. At what is now Twenty-sixth street and the state line they fixed a post. A long pole was placed on top of the post, on a pivot. The traders on one side of the line, tied the whisky in bottles made of skin, on the end of the pole and the Indians tied skins enough to pay for the "firewater" on the other end. The pole was turned on the pivot and the trade was completed.

The land on which the fort was built is now owned by the Phelps Stone and Supply company. Rock for the crusher is being taken from the hill. There is an old legend that much treasure lies buried there.

"We have found a great many Indian relics, while excavating," Frank N. Phelps, treasurer of the company, said. "I have heard the story of the buried treasure and more than likely it is true."

Large holes ten feet across and as deep as fifteen feet have been dug on the hill at different times by parties in search of hidden riches.

Anniversary of Porcelain.

From a Dresden Letter.

The 200th anniversary of the discovery of the secret for making hard or kaolinic porcelain—the "Dresden" and "Meissen" all the world admires—will be celebrated here in January next by a grand exhibition showing the historic development of porcelain making in Saxony, as well as France, England, Prussia and Denmark.

A Hope.

The players step in view;
The crowd, in answer to the call,
Exclaims, "We hope they do!"

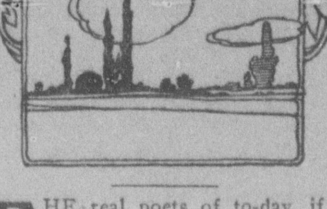
SPRING AND THE POET.



THE real poets of to-day, if any there be, do not smite their harps and warble of "gentle spring." Either the disconcerting antics of that fickle season or the gibes of the cynical jester, has caused the modern Order of Bards to sidestep three months on the calendar and to pass resolutions boycotting Spring and all her allurements. With its chest anointed with goosegrease and its poetic feet in a tub of hot water, the muse nowadays pays its respects to March, April and May in terse prose.

Time was, however, when no poet who cared anything for his reputation as a ready rhymster could afford to let Spring approach without riding Pegasus out to meet her. The first storm of the season was a heavy downpour of written rhapsodies. Spring poems were everywhere. Poor persons, who had used their winter's fuel, started fires with bulky rhymes; the good wife, while housecleaning, put frenzied lyrics instead of newspapers under the carpets, and the butcher's boy brought the steak nicely wrapped in an ode to Flora. A few hundred years ago a journeyman poet who, upon stubbing his toe upon the first tender violet of the wood, couldn't reel off nineteen feet of ecstatic song, was immediately adjudged mentally insolvent and thrown into the hands of a receiver. Messrs Herrick, Chaucer, Shakespeare and many other licensed troubadours, while perhaps somewhat spasmodic and uncertain in their attentions to other ladies, were ever true to Spring. When one considers the annual crush to greet her, which must have resulted in a painful trampling of metrical feet, it is easy to imagine that she must have been somewhat bored and her disposition, perhaps once amaiable, permanently spoiled. This may account for her pettish temperament these days. Consider, for instance, this by Thomas Nash, a contemporary of Shakespeare:

Spring, the sweet spring, is the year's pleasant king;
Then blooms each thing, then maids dance in a ring,
Cold doth not sting, the pretty birds do sing,
Cuckoo, jug-jug, pu-wee, to-witta-woo!

The palm and may make country houses gay,
Lambs frisk and play, the shepherds pipe all day,
And we hear aye birds tune this merry lay,
Cuckoo, jug-jug, pu-wee, to-witta-woo!

The fields breathe sweet, the daisies kiss our feet,
Young lovers meet, old wives a-sunning sit,
In every street these tunes our ears do greet,
Cuckoo, jug-jug, pu-wee, to-witta-woo!
Spring! the sweet Spring!

Shakespeare, not to be outdone, came back with:

When daisies pied, and violets blue,
And lady-smocks all silver white,
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue,
Do paint the meadows with delight.

After that, he administered the knockout, proving that Nash knew nothing whatever of the noises made by birds:

It was a lover and his lass
With a hey and a ho, and a hey nonōnio!
That o'er the green cornfield did pass
In the spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing hey ding a ding:
Sweet lovers love the Spring.

James Thompson, born in 1700, simply couldn't restrain himself when spring was about. He hails her with:

Come, gentle Spring, ethereal mildness, come!

There's truth, as well as poetry, in Pope's remarks on spring:

In that soft season, when descending show'rs
Call forth the greens, and wake the rising flow'rs.

The reference to "greens" indicates that his muse was inspired by the sight of a stout colored "mammy" ambling o'er the greening hill, armed with a butcher knife and a market basket, in quest of the first shy dandelions.

It was some time ago that the poets discovered that spring was a gay deceiver. Even in the work of such a back number as Albert Pike there is a hidden note of sarcasm:

Alas! bright Spring! not long
Shall I enjoy thy pleasant influence.

Thomas Hood, who must have been pretty "wise" for his time, made it plain that spring couldn't coquette with him, and doesn't hesitate to take James Thompson to task for being an "easy mark."

"Come, gentle Spring! Ethereal mildness come!"
Oh, Thompson, void of rhyme as well as reason,
How could'st thou thus poor human nature hum?
There's no such season.

Nowadays, practically everyone is "on to" spring and her tricksy whims. About the only person who has any faith in her is the government's weather man.

HE'S A REAL "TEDDY DOUBLE."

This Powder Maker Is Often Accosted as "Mr. President."

By some it might be a cause for pride to resemble the head of the nation so closely as to be constantly mistaken for the President. But L. M. Garfield of Xenia, O., who is a "Teddy Double," does not look at it in that light. On the contrary, Mr. Garfield finds it very inconvenient at times, as well as embarrassing.

Not long ago, being in Cincinnati, he took a cab at the Union square to ride up to the Gibson house. When he reached the hotel he asked the cabman what he owed him.

Cabby took his question as an insult to his patriotism. "I guess there won't be no charge," he said. "I'm willing to haul you any day, just for the honor."

Mr. Garfield insisted that there was no honor in carrying him, but the cabman as earnestly persisted that the President was entitled to whatever favor he was pleased to confer upon him, so Mr. Garfield had fairly to force the fare into the man's hand.

Mr. Garfield rarely makes a trip away from home that he isn't mistaken for the President. Hotel clerks, newspaper men and persons along the street stare at him until the attention he attracts becomes a source of great annoyance.

So far as the "Rough Rider" hat and the glasses are concerned, Mr. Garfield wore both long before Roosevelt was famous. And while the hat and thick "specs" may accentuate the resemblance of Garfield to the President, they were not put on for that purpose.

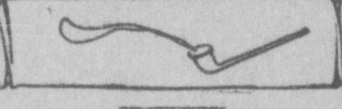
Mr. Garfield is a manufacturer, and his time is occupied as superintendent of the Miami powder mills, about six miles from Xenia. Although never particularly active in politics, Mr. Garfield may be justly termed a public-spirited man, having served as president of the city council in Xenia, and as member of the board of public service, to which place he was elected on a reform ticket. He always has been a Republican.

L. M. GARFIELD, WHO FREQUENTLY IS MISTAKEN FOR PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Mr. Garfield, who was born in Concord, Mass., in close proximity to "Wayside," Hawthorne's old home, is a few years older than Mr. Roosevelt. In one way, when it comes to hunting, he is no longer a double.

"I could not hit a bear," he says, "even if the bear were a blind paralytic."

GRANDFATHER'S PIPE

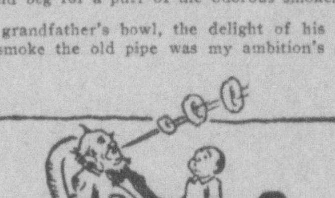


IT hung by the chimney, beneath the wide mantel,
With long cherry stem and a meerschaum-hued bowl,
Antique in its carvings and quaint in its fashion,
My grandfather's pipe, the delight of his soul.

My grandfather's pipe, of medieval type,
With tassel of silk and a narrow gold stripe.

How often with boyhood's bold spirit I clambered
On grandfather's knee for a story or joke,
To watch him blow circles and ring them with others,
And beg for a puff of the odorous smoke.

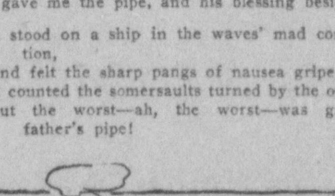
My grandfather's bowl, the delight of his soul,
To smoke the old pipe was my ambition's goal.



Ah, the stories he told, they thrilled my young fancy,
And crowded my mind with the visions of old;
But the amulet wielding a deep necromancy
Was grandfather's pipe with its trimmings of gold.

'Twas grandfather's pride, and the day that he died,
He gave me the pipe, and his blessing beside.

I've stood on a ship in the waves' mad commotion,
And felt the sharp pangs of nausea gripe,
And counted the somersaults turned by the ocean,
But the worst—ah, the worst—was grandfather's pipe!

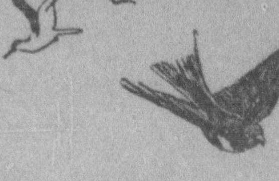


It rocked me to sleep, like the waves of the deep;
Ah, never again—let it be—it'll keep.

It hangs by the chimney, beneath the wide mantel,
And audibly swings itself backward and fro:
My grandfather lived to be seven and ninety—
He was good for a twenty-five longer, I know.

O grandfather's bowl, it troubles my soul
As feelings mysterious over me roll.

The BIRD LIFE ABOUT OUR DOORS.



FEW, even among bird lovers, realize that there is hardly another district in the United States so favorable for the study of bird life as that within a radius of twenty miles of Kansas City. The thirty-ninth parallel is, approximately, the line of demarkation between typically Northern and Southern species, while the western boundary of Missouri practically separates the inhabitants of the great plains from the denizens of the Atlantic and prairie provinces. In our city parks and on the outlying farms may be found, at some season of the year, representatives of almost every species that flies between the crest of the Alleghenies and the eastern base of the Rocky mountains, and between the Rio Grande and Lake Superior.

A visitor from an Iowa prairie farm, noticing the number of birds along Kansas City's Cliff drive on one of the warm days last week, remarked:

"Why, you must have thirty or forty varieties here!" And was surprised to learn that in 1907, before June 1, 167 species had been identified. Of course these were not all to be registered as permanent residents. Probably 60 per cent of them were migrants on their way to Northern nesting grounds.

Our common winter birds are the English sparrow, snow bird, chickadee, two species of woodpecker, fox sparrow, slate-colored junco, crows, jays, hawks and owls. The red bird, or cardinal, seldom leaves, and its cheerful call may be heard on dark, lowering days as well as in the bright sunshine. The robin, too, stays with us excepting during the coldest weather, when it makes but a short southward flight, being absent not more than a month. Yet the American robin is not afraid to venture upon a long flight at the beginning of an unusually severe and protracted winter. He has been observed in January on the slope of Popocatapetl, and in February at the summit of the Guatemalan cordillera, at an altitude of more than 11,000 feet. The towhee, or ground robin, is as reluctant to leave as is the cardinal, and on the most bitter days will sit hunched up under the protection of some bush, unwilling to move until almost brushed by the hand of the observer. The black of the throat and breast, in abrupt contrast with the white of the lower parts, is a distinguishing feature. Geese may be found on the Missouri river sandbars at any time during January and February.

Of these winter birds the fox sparrow and slate-colored junco belong to the far North. The former usually reaches this vicinity in December (this season not until January) and leaves with the first intimation of warmer weather. It is known by its generally rusty appearance and by its thrush-like spots or blotches on its whitish breast. No lover of society, it haunts the remote woods and dense plum brush. The junco is more friendly; comes earlier, stays longer, and is not afraid to pick up crumbs in the back yard. Its plumage is a dull slate color, with darker head. The two outer tail feathers are pure white, and by this characteristic the juncos are recognized. In severe weather we sometimes are visited by the Lapland longspur, whose summer home lies within the Arctic circle.

Long before the first tint of spring comes to the willow twigs the geese and brant along the river bars grow restless. Day after day they fly higher and wander further to their feeding grounds. But before they have given their final honks and sailed away for the breeding grounds of Minnesota and Canada the ducks have begun to arrive, with the sprig tails in the van, and with the ducks come wrens, bluebirds and the first installment of blackbirds, sparrows and flycatchers. Ducks fly far and swiftly. Some winter on the rivers of Arkansas and Oklahoma. More go to Texas. The great majority, however, spend their Christmas holidays on the waters of the Mexican plateau, in Chihuahua and Sonora, and a cold storm will drive them in great clouds to the large lakes adjacent to the City of Mexico—the southern limit of their migration. They prefer cool, upland regions and have little use for the warm coast streams within the tropics.

The most careful observers have come to the conclusion that ducks do not return south along the same route by which they travel north. Their path of annual migration is an immense triangle. When they reach their northern limit they move slowly in a westerly direction until the approach of autumn and then they seek the most direct course to their winter feeding grounds. Their summer and winter ranges remain unchanged year after year.

Nor are ducks alone in their preference for the Mexican table land as a winter home. Here may be found bluebirds, blackbirds, orioles, thrushes, warblers, the many species of sparrows and flycatchers and the larks. On the other hand tanagers, shrikes, mocking birds and humming birds seem to prefer the tierra caliente. Indeed, the winter tourist in traveling from the coast to the interior of Northern Mexico will be surprised to note the number of birds that were common in Missouri in the hot midsummer days.

Of the sparrows, the tree sparrow first reaches this latitude, followed in rapid succession by the song sparrow, Harris sparrow, the black-throated sparrow, the vesper sparrow and half a dozen more of the same group. Next come the warblers, meadow larks, goldfinches; later the catbird, brown thrasher, mocking bird, oriole, mourning dove, indigo bird and shirke; while cuckoo, scarlet tanager, kingfisher, whippoorwill, nighthawk and humming bird are among the latest permanent arrivals. The scarlet tanager and the cardinal bird are often mistaken for each other, but the latter may be readily distinguished by its note and by its conspicuous black moustache. These birds remain all summer. Others, such as the cedar waxwing, appear at irregular intervals during the season.

As soon as the regular residents arrive they begin mating, and nest building is now well under way. It is during these courting days and times of honeymoon that the sweetest songs are sung and the greatest variety of notes produced. From the first pale dawn until the sun is an hour high, every patch of forest, every clump of plum, haw or crabapple that retains a vestige of its primitive rusticity is vocal with bird music, and it is in just these places to look for nests—redbird, thrushes, robins, warblers, vireos—building side by side. Later the humming birds choose the same location. Orioles, mocking birds and catbirds prefer larger trees. Many of the sparrows, the meadow larks and the towhees nest on the ground, as do the quail and the plover if only we can get sufficiently distant from the hum of the trolley to find them. Even the sandbars are not neglected, for kildeer, snipe and sandpipers deposit their eggs in defiance of approaching high water.

Many of our most common birds rear two broods each season. This is the rule with the mourning dove, although it arrives late and leaves early. Its favorite location for a nest in which to lay its two white eggs is on a willow branch overhanging some retired stream—a spot where it can escape prying eyes, and its worst enemy, the blacksnake. As soon as this second brood is ready to fly the doves prepare to migrate southward.

The ruby-throated humming bird is a most interesting study. It follows the full bloom of early summer from Mexico to the Canada line, and we wonder how so fragile a body can make such tremendous flights. Its nest, of lichens, feathers, horsehair and moss, is as delicate as the bird itself, and is so carefully concealed, so blended with its surroundings, that only the sharpest scrutiny can discover it. When alarmed the mother bird does not seek to hide, but flutters frantically about her nest or young, often disclosing that which her instinct prompts her to protect.

One must be alert early in the morning or in the evening twilight to observe the number of species that pass by us on their way to northern or sub-alpine breeding grounds. These birds travel at night. In the heat of the day they keep themselves so well concealed that they are found only by chance. And yet, with all of our bird life, some species are becoming more rare with each succeeding year. This is due not so much to the encroachment of the city as to the promiscuous bird nesting and bird shooting that is the sport of so many thoughtless boys.

The Summons of Spring.

Edwin L. Sabin in May Lippincott's.

Some day it comes—the subtle announcement of the spring. We may not have responded to the first bluebird, the first robin, the first rain; none of these has appealed. But suddenly spring is thrilling within our soul. We want to go barefoot.

Children are going barefoot. Their feet and legs singularly while after the months of confinement, they are gleefully scampering upon the smooth, hard asphalt of the city's pave, and, peeling shoes and stockings, are braving the policeman in the parks. And in the country—ah, in the country!

Here exists the real luxuriousness of barefoot state. Once discarded, shoes and stockings are not resumed again until frost. Small and soft are the feet exposed, say, along in April; small and soft and white and exceedingly tender. Every little pebble hurts, and one must tread gingerly, with sundry screwings of the features and many an "Ouch!"

There can be no offense more egregious than at this time to step with shod foot upon somebody's naked toes. "Look out! Get, off, darn you!"

Oh, the sensation of lightness and buoyancy which upbears one in accord with the summons of the season! And (in the country) the sensation of the lush, cool soil against the sole, when the sappy moisture is drunk in by all those pores, long denied, and ascends to vivify the entire being, and when the mud "squshes" up between the wriggling, happy toes; and the bliss of the June road, where the warm dust lies like a velvet pad, so comforting!

How a kid—lad or lass—can run barefoot! How he, or she, wants to run. How he, or she, must run! Bless my heart! This zest to "go barefoot" typifies spring universal, when it is in nature to burst bonds, to revel in youth, and to be thankful for life.

THEY F GHT OVER LOBSTERS

A WAR AMONG FISHERMEN ON THE COAST OF MAINE.

Government Wardens and Union Lobstermen Are Seeking to Stop the Traffic in "Short" Crustaceans—Rough on the Summer Visitor.

Will the visitors to the Maine seacoast resorts this summer be able to purchase for a nominal sum the succulent little lobster of illegal size, or must they pay the prevailing high prices for the full grown crustacean?

Not such a terribly vital matter, perhaps, but more important than it appears on its face.

For years and years seven-eighths of the Maine lobster fishermen have done a thriving business during the summer months by supply short lobsters to the cottagers on the hundreds of islands and along the coast. The price has varied from fifty cents to $1.00 a dozen. While these lobsters are small the meat is deliciously tender and sweet.

A NON-UNION LOBSTER FISHERMAN ISSUING A "DEFI."

And some of these so-called "shorts" are very nearly of legal size, measuring all the way from six to eight, nine and even ten inches in length. Although the wardens now have a new way of measuring the bodies of the lobsters, it is practically the same as the old law, which required that the lobster must measure not less than ten and one-half inches from tip to tip.

So, while some of these illegal length lobsters contain nearly as much meat as the lobster of legal length it is apparent that the only market for them is through some such channel as the summer visitor, who is not "fussy" about the law.

When the vacationist goes to the Maine coast the first thing he wants is lobster, and he wants his fill of it. If he is obliged to buy the legal length crustacean at the current quotation per pound, two fairly good sized ones will probably spoil a dollar bill for him. Therefore, it is going to make quite a difference to him whether he is to do this, or whether he is to "stand in" with some native lobsterman and get a dozen nearly as large for seventy-five cents.

The lobster wardens have fought the short lobster men almost from time immemorial with but indifferent success. The Maine fisherman is crafty when it comes to handling short lobsters, and there is a good leal of truth in the remark of one warden who recently resigned in disgust, declaring that to successfully enforce the lobster law there would have to be an officer to every fisherman.

THE LOBSTER FISHERMAN'S HONOR.

But this spring the situation assumed a new phase. Last fall it was decided to adopt different tactics with the fishermen. Emissaries were sent along the coast appealing to the fishermen's sense of honor. So successful were these workers that the Lobster Fishermen's union was formed, and has grown until to-day it numbers in the neighborhood of 1,500 members. These men have agreed to obey the law and to use every effort in aiding the wardens to bring to justice those who persist in handling short lobsters.

Gratifying as this showing is to the wardens the movement is by no means general. Beginning at Eastport and working westward along the coast the union grew rapidly. When it struck Casco bay it ran against a snag. There are a good many hundred men located west of Cape Small point who make a good living during the summer months in handling lobsters legally, and—well, they can generally furnish whatever size one prefers to pay for. Casco bay is the tourists' mecca, and there is a market for every lobster and as many again as can be caught in its blue waters.

THE UNITED STATES LOBSTER HATCHERY AT BOOTHBAY HARBOR, MAINE.

Therefore, while a few small branches of the union have been established at different points in the bay, the average fisherman shrugs his shoulders in disdain and sarcastically remarks that what God put into the sea was for man to take out regardless of its size, color or family history.

And this means war. Perhaps not just the brand that General Sherman referred to in his notable remark, but a bitter struggle is surely ahead between the wardens and the fishermen that is likely to end in bloodshed, as feeling is very bitter among the nonunion men.

James Donohue, commissioner of sea and shore fisheries, against the nonunion lobster fishermen. That's what it will be. With the aid of the union members the commissioner believes he can stamp out the short lobster traffic. The nonunion fishermen, on the other hand, say that cottagers will be supplied as usual with the coveted undersized crustaceans.

LOBSTER DINNERS TO COST MORE.

One of the biggest resorts on the New Meadows river which has always made a specialty of its shore dinners with broiled live or boiled lobsters, using an immense number each week of the summer, hereafter will handle only legal length lobsters. But it raises the price of the dinner.

Already the fishermen are being compelled to use their ingenuity in conducting the traffic. As every union man is to all intents and purposes a warden, it is, as one fisherman put it, "hard to tell who's with ye or agin ye."

In some sections of the bay the wardens and fishermen go about armed, and while law enforcers and law breakers have threatened to blow each others' heads off, so far there has been no bloodshed. But the feeling is growing.

The "pots" or traps of union men have been cut loose, skiffs have been mysteriously smashed, motor boats used by the fishermen sunk at their moorings and other unpleasantries perpetrated that grow more and more serious in character as the fight progresses.

The fishermen invent all sorts of schemes for getting the short lobsters to their customers. A favorite way is to place a bag containing a dozen or so lobsters in some cool crevice between big rocks along the shore known only to fisherman and customer. The latter can happen along a little later, put the lobsters into an old valise or some such receptacle and carry them away without attracting attention.

ELECTRICITY FOR DESSERT.

Oranges and Apples as Storage Batteries—Rind as Insulator.

From the Herald of the Golden Age, London.

Mr. A. E. Baines has discovered by means of patient research and a galvanometer of a sensitiveness which had not been attained hitherto, that all fruits, nuts and vegetables are, while alive, storage batteries of vital electricity. When they die or are killed by cooking, the insulation between the negative and positive systems is destroyed, and from this Mr. Baines argues that nature intended them to be eaten raw.

One learns that each alternate divided section of an orange is a charged cell which will cause the galvanometer to record a current. These cells are insulated by their skins, and collectively they constitute a battery which is insulated by the rind of the fruit.

The eating of an orange is not therefore the simple thing it appears to be. It is the absorption of a small charge of electrovital force.

Mr. Baines takes the apple tree as an instance, and gives the following description of the action of the earth and air on it:

"The earth supplies negative electricity to the roots. The degree of conductivity depends upon the amount of moisture present in the soil. The sap of the tree conveys and circulates that electricity through the system of the tree.

"When the leaves begin to bud they are negatively charged by the sap by means of the central vein or stalk, and the rest of the leaf is inductively positively charged by the air.

"When the flowers come they are charged by the air, but when the fruit forms, a central negative storage cell is charged through the stalk by the sap conducting current from the earth.

"Cut open an apple, a pear, or a quince, and the central system can be easily seen, all the surrounding pulp is positive, and the rind, skin, or jacket is a perfect insulator."

The fact that the portions of fruit and vegetables which are eaten are positively charged with electricity, while the parts which are rejected are either negatively charged or are merely insulating material, is taken to prove that nature guides us to choose food which is positively potential, and thus proves the need of the electric reinforcement which she provides for us.

Considerate.

From the Washington Evening Star.

"Do you want to see your wife permitted to vote?"

"Not right away," answered Mr. Meekton. "Henrietta gets so much enjoyment out of lecturing about it that it would be a pity to stop it."

Lady Mary's London Letter.

London, April 23.—The promotion of Winston Churchill to cabinet rank and the consequent by-election in Northwest Manchester recalls to mind the fact that this precocious son of a famous American woman ascribes his political success to the genius of his mother. "Lady Randy," as her friends still like to call Mrs. George Cornwallis West, is the best political canvasser of her age. Some women in English public life have wielded far more influence, but when it comes to getting down to the plain people and winning their support she is without an equal. When Winston Churchill first stood for the great northern city she made old campaigners sit up and take notice and helped to roll up a record majority in a city traditionally hostile to Liberalism.

"Lady Randy" has what the Irish would call "a wonderful way with her." When she gets at an elector he simply has no escape. Before he realizezs it she has got him "to turn his coat and sell his soul," as one of her victims forcibly put it. Mrs. West cannot be called an elaborate dresser. On such occasions, however, she puts on her war paint and, as she expresses it, "gets herself up to kill." Though persistent and determined her manner never suggests anything but geniality and cordiality. That is why she is so successful.

Mrs. Lulu Harcourt, another American woman, is a clever canvasser and she has what Burne Jones used to call "the damned pleasing smile" which is so useful to a woman working in the political arena. At the same time she lacks the serenity and imperturbability of "Lady Rand." If electors are rude she feels it and, worse still, shows that she does by taking to her heels. The explosion of a bomb would not incommode Mrs. West. She would still smile and in all likelihood say to the perpetrator of the outrage, "How sweet of you," or words to that effect.

"Lady Randy" is now abroad and it is doubtful at this writing whether she will return to lend a hand to her strenuous son. She is still a remarkably young-looking woman—even her dearest enemy would would not accuse her of looking more than 35—and Winston is so ridiculously aged in appearance that she might very well pass for his younger sister among those who did not know either.

The king again is enjoying his expensive hobby of pulling his mansions to pieces. It is Sandringham which is being demolished and rebuilt this time to the tune of $100,000. This is a piece of wild and most unnecessary extravagance. His Majesty's Norfolk seat is one of the most luxurious modern houses in England. When he came to the throne he had a new wing added to it and after Queen Alexandra's private apartments were damaged by fire he had a number of improvements made. The most fastidious who have visited Sandringham will assure you that the house is sumptuous and luxurious in every detail.

The new landscape garden, which is nearing completion, is a copy of the one at Hever castle, William Waldorf Astor's place near Tunbridge Wells, but on a smaller scale. It is to have an artificial running brook around which will cluster gorse and furze bushes, while on its banks will be purple and golden irises.

At present Edward is extraordinarily popular among the vast bulk of his subjects—a fact which is undoubtedly in a great measure due to the press. One of these days there will, however, be a reckoning. Socialistic and democratic feeling is stronger than most people realize and there is beginning to be a good deal of grumbling about the sovereign's extravagances, which take more forms than one. Taxes are high, there are thousands of unemployed in every phase of London life, and all the royal gush over the hospitals which does not cost either the king or queen a penny won't blind the common people much longer. Not once in a year does the king or queen or anyone of the royalties give a generous subscription to anything. People are beginning to awaken to this fact. Certainly His Majesty's forethought, tact and diplomacy have done much to shut the eyes of his subjects to the real state of affairs.

The promptitude with which he and the queen send an empty telegram after a mine disaster is regarded as magnanimous, and how little it costs does not occur to the recipients and the public, they being overcome by the favor of the royal recognition.

It is pretty definitely known that the dowager duchess of Devonshire, one time leader of English society and even more powerful in that respect than the queen herself, will never again take her place as a hostess on a large scale. She undoubtedly is the most historic figure of the end of the Victorian reign and the brief part of the present century which has just passed. Her knowledge of state and great political secrets is tremendous. Were she induced to write her memoirs they would beat anything of the kind ever published in our day. Although she was twenty odd years younger than the late queen they had a great deal in common, and Victoria used to say that the duchess was a pillar of strength to her in time of trial, so great was her common sense and her sympathy. It is no doubt these two admirable virtues which accounted for the fact that two dukes in succession saw fit to make her their duchess.

She is at present very ill and is only able to get about in a bath chair. Her relations are extremely concerned about her, and the king and the queen, whose great chum she is, are kept daily informed of her progress.

English society is ever keen on something novel. The latest craze occupying the attention and spare time of the smart woman is a novel guessing contest. A society journal has been offering $25 to the individual who names correctly every face in a series of portraits of fashionable folk. Crowds of the most swagger women in society have been competing for this prize, among others Lady Leila Egerton, daughter of Lord and Lady Ellesmere of Bridgewater house; Lady Evelyn Ward, Lord Dudley's sister-in-law; Lady Noreen Bass and Lady Paget, wife of Sir Arthur Paget.

On two occasions Lady Paget came off second best, guessing correctly fifty-three names out of the total of fifty-six. When she received her prize, I am told, she danced more spiritedly than she had ever done in her life before and was far more pleased than when King Edward himself told her that he had made a knight of her husband.

The competition, which is called "Who's Who in Society," will be continued for several months, and I am told several duchesses are now engaged in trying to "name" the greatest number of the photographs appearing in the series.

HOUSE CLEANING COST $750.

This Woman Lost Her Savings While Beating a Mattress.

Although some savings banks have their drawbacks, it is also true that they have advantages over some hiding places favored by frugal wives. This truth has been rather rudely brought home within the past few weeks to Mme. Marguerite Schenk, who resides in a modest apartment in the Rue Leibnitz, Paris, France.

Like the majority of French women, Mme. Schenk is the economist of her household. Her husband is all very well when it comes to earning the money, but it was his wife who held the purse strings and, out of his small salary had managed to accumulate a surprisingly large bag of savings. Not having an over great belief in the honesty of others, and having a very satisfactory faith in her own care and watchfulness, she kept her savings during all the years of her married life in a constantly growing pouch, hidden away in the fold of a mattress.

A couple of weeks ago Mme. Schenk had an attack of the spring cleaning fever. Every husband knows what that means. Mme. Schenk had it in its most violent form. Everything in the little apartment was literally pulled up by the roots and submitted to no end of dusting, beating, wiping and washing. Among the articles thus treated was the mattress in which lay the family hoard, amounting to $12,000 in Russian bonds and $750 in French banknotes. Now, Mme. Schenk had no court below in which to beat it so, forgetting for the moment the bonds and banknotes, she hung the mattress out of her window and belabored it with all the vigor and enthusiasm which the spring cleaning fever always develops in a healthy woman.

Next door to the Schenks lived a stone cutter, August Hommet by name, and his pretty young wife. Now it so happened that while Mme. Schenk was walloping her mattress, Hommet was standing directly beneath, day-dreaming of the time when he would be rich and live in fashionable apartments. Suddenly there dropped down in front of him, seemingly from the heavens, a fat bag. When he stooped to pick it up, opened it and gazed upon its contents, he was sure it came from heaven. For his eyes fell upon French banknotes to the value of $750 and a pile of Russian bonds. The latter were much the richer prize, but to Hommet, who knew nothing of foreign investments, they were merely paper covered with printed hieroglyphics. Of the value of the banknotes, however, he was fully aware and wasted no time in tracing their source to any place nearer terra firma. He hurriedly returned with his find to his own apartments and told his wife of the miraculous gift he had received. They immediately packed up their few belongings and moved to better quarters in the Rue Championnet.

In the next few days Hommet gave evidence that poverty has robbed the world of a prince of spenders. He spent the $750 in banknotes with a hand so lavish that it would have made Monte Cristo himself turn green. A stock of fine wines was ordered and the stone-cutter and his wife did not give it an apporunity of accumulating the cobwebs of old age in the cellar, but drank it all as soon as it arrived. Furniture, new clothes and jewelry speedily followed, and as a final effort the couple invited all their relatives who lived near enough to a grand feast.

Meanwhile, in the Rue Leibnitz, consternation had had its reign, and remorse and regret had followed. After completing her cleaning, Mme. Schenck had bethought herself of her bonds and her banknotes. With the pale face of fear the good wife repaired in a hurry to the mattress which now reposed once more on the bed. Search as she might in its folds she could not find the precious bag. A trip to the street below was equally fruitless. So she returned to her rooms in despair to await the home-coming of her husband. When that worthy arrived he had a whole lot to say that is not printable and then decided to call in a lawyer. Accordingly, M. Hamard, a well known Parisian attorney, was sent for and the situation explained to him.

Among his other undoubted talents M. Hamard seems to possess a keen scent for a trail that would make him a serious rival of Sherlock Holmes. At any rate, after a few preliminary inquiries in the neighborhood, he made straight for the swagger new apartments of the departed stonecutter and his charming wife. With an eye for the dramatic he timed his arrival at the apartment in the Rue Championnet well, for he reached there just when the feast to the relatives was at its height. With the delicacy and politeness which makes arrest one of the pleasures of French life, he interrupted the gayeties and took Hommet and his weeping wife off to the nearest police station. There they both confessed and the former handed over to his captor a fifty centimes (ten cents) piece, the surviving portion of the $750. Not considering them of any value, Hommet and his guests had amused thmselves by lighting their cigarettes with the Russian bonds.

Hommet has gone to be a guest of the French government for a considerable term of years, while his wife, whose youth and comeliness appealed to the susceptible heart of the French judge, has been set at liberty. Mme. Schenck has the consolation of knowing that being prudent enough to keep the numbers of her Russian bonds, she will be able to procure duplicates in five years. Thus it is that her spring cleaning cost her only $750.

A Russian Court Ball.

From Tit-Bits.

So strong is the spirit of gayety this season in St. Petersburg that there is much talk of reviving that dream of sumptuous glory, the boyard fete of 1903, declared to be the most magnificent court spectacle of modern times. The boyards were the old Russian nobles of the time of Ivan the Terrible, and for the fete of 1903 costumes and jewels were worn that were worth millions. A dozen women spent a fortnight in sewing jewels on the costume of the czarina, who represented the first wife of Czar Alexis Michaelovitch. The dress weighed over sixty pounds, and has never been worn since.

THE NEW YORK THEATER LETTER

FRANKLYN FYLES CHATS ABOUT PLAYS & THE PEOPLE APPEARING IN THEM

NEW YORK, May 1.—The season dramatic may have an end every spring, but not the season theatric; as the quantity of stage amusement increases for the summer, and the quality, I think, becomes extra readable from oddity; so that a play of fudge and guff, like "The Merry-Go-Round," is more interesting in description than many a work of dignity. Last Sunday an account was given of such a show that had cost $30,000 before its first performance; and now this one has required quite as large an outlay; for the costumes of its throngs of girls are changed a dozen times and the silks and satins are not cottton, nor the furs and feathers taken from cats and hens. This is an exhibition of human beauty artificially enhanced, and when its selection of tall sylphs are lined up as smart belles, their toilets are fit to be seen at an Astor function. In one scene, though, the gowns introduce a fashion that won't be adopted in the best circles of society. The typical ladies go midnight slumming to a Bohemian resort from an evening at the opera; so they wear trailing gowns and enwrapping cloaks, as they saunter and sing in toplofty disdain of the common assemblage. Suddenly the enormous diamonds in their hair, which the spectator has quickly appraised as rhinestones, become electric bulbs. That trick of outshining Kohi-noors with Edisons is applauded, as any ingenious new thing always is in a Broadway theater. But why is there an ensuing hush? What is it that silences the house as with the awe of benumbing amazement? The lights are dimmed, and the music gets mystic. Then Asmodeus doesn't lift the roof of a house to let us look in on the privacy of its occupants. Still more intimate than that are the revelations. The skirts of the belles become transparent with electric light within, and we see that they wear no lingerie at all; so sixteen legs come full length into sharp, clear and startling silhouette. Indelicate? Indecent. Even hardened rounders in the front seats don't dare to clap their hands in approval.

The one other deplorable display of girls keeps another lot in sight throughout an act clad, so far as appearance goes, in nothing else than overalls. They are billed as "shrimps." They are guised as bumpkin boys at a country fair, and, except hats and shoes, they look as if clad only in jean trousers held up by single galluses, for their shirts are skin tight and hued to match exactly the skin of their bare arms and shoulders. And they are childish enough in age and size to either lessen or increase the impropriety, according to one's personal point of view.

That all the rest of "The Merry-Go-Round" is wholesome, though nonsensical, although its appeal is to the frivolous only, speaks well for the taste of people with money to burn on the altar of sensuality. This show has been, not written, but put together, to open a music hall sort of theater at Columbus Circle, further up Broadway than any top grade playhouse has been located hitherto. Edgar Smith, Gus Edwards, Paul West and George Marion are named in the programme as its makers. It had a week in Philadelphia, and there a fifth man was billed as a librettist, I believe; but the show didn't go very well, his portions of the play were eliminated, the four others spent an ensuing week in elisions, interpolations and revisions, and the stuff as New York gets it is to the liking of our various fast sets; which is to say that "The Merry-Go-Round" is a play for merry rounders, and for appreciation requires a training in the ways and means of fast living in this town.

The method of making this kind of a show is to first hire some specialists in laughter, and next to give them things to do that they can render laughable. The central comedian, James J. Morton, is the 300-pound lump of a chump whose utter idiocy of manner and matter have kept him a headliner in vaudeville these many years. By putting him into the role of a rural villager who, as he sings it, is "a two-horse fellow in a one-horse town," but finds himself overtasked as the manager of a country fair, his peculiar humor is utilized valuably. The opening night was an ordeal for him, however, and those who were in scenes with him. I suppose this was his first acting part. He had no clear notion of the utility of cues, or the need of adhering to the prescribed business; so he didn't wait for tips to begin speaking, or give them to others; his disposition to turn the wrong way in crosses brought on frequent collisions, and his nervousness culminated in the drenching an exquisitely gowned show girl with an overcharged bottle of sham champagne; but folks unacquainted with vaudeville discovered him with gleeful satisfaction, and lengths from his old monologues were accepted hilariously as new and mighty good. The swapping of talent between drama and vaudeville is just about at a balance. Some of the crackerjacks of the variety shows have been legitimate artists. Some of the merriest Momuses in musical farce have been stunters in vaudeville.

Mabel Hite is another person utilized. Mabel advanced herself from the chorus several years ago as a fluffy sort of soubrette, but now she finds her value as a caricaturist of herself—as the same type of theatrical creature that Rose Stahl depicts in "The Chorus Lady." Have you ever thought of it that most of the professions are maligned in stage representations? The lawyer is a shyster, the journalist is a cad, the actor is a tramp, even the clergyman is a hypocrite usually, and only the physician is treated with respect. So the chorus girl in stage delineation is never the siren of grammatical speech, polite manners and feminine charm who lures American millionaires and European noblemen. But as a rude, crude creature who doesn't talk slang for expressive slang's sake, but because she has no dictionary English in her vocabulary. Yet the theatrical public never tires of the misrepresentative chorus lady, and Mabel Hite's is a factor in this entertainment.

I wonder if Ignacio Martinetti knows how old he is? He comes of the once famous Martinetti family of pantomimists, but whether he is son, grandson, or a still further removed descendant, I can't tell you. Anyway, he isn't more than 25 in looks while pirouetting in front of a stageful of girls, and singing, with the accent of a titled French heiress hunter, "I Like 'Em Just Like You, Little Girl," and "You Dear Tailor-Made." The object lesson to be learned from "The Merry-Go-Round" by workers in that line is to employ humoristic players and then give them all to do that they can force across the footlights. Beyond a travestying of Gladys Vanderbilt's and Anna Gould's matrimonial misadventures, there is no coherency. The first half is filled with incidents at the country fair and the second with hilarities at a bohemian restaurant in town. Each of six comedians has an entrance song to himself, with a full chorus ballet costumed and drilled to give distinction to him.

Serious drama, very serious and full of puzzle if not of problem, is not yet displaced by the rush of shows to be seen rather than heard. "The Governor and the Boss" does not belie its name. It is indeed political. As an exposure of municipal corruption it should make Broadhurst ashamed of "The Man of the Hour;" while for raking in the mud of money it should impel Klein to disown "The Lion and the Mouse;" but whether it will bulge the purses of Bragdlon and Postance, its asserted authors, like Broadhurst's and Klein's—well, if I were a trustworthy theatrical forecaster I would be a millionaire, too. This I write, though, and write it boldly, that neither Klein by putting John D. Rockefeller and Ida Tarbell into a play, nor Broadhurst by dramatizing our Mayor McClellan and some Tammany bosses, is worthy of mention in the same newspaper with Bragdlon and Postance, who have—I can't so much as hint at their exploit in one sentence, but must dot a period, dip a pen and start afresh.

There are two candidates in "The Governor and the Boss" for the governorship of the state of New York. One is billed as David Graham, but plainly, explicitly, he is meant for the sure enough Governor Hughes, and maybe President, as he lives in Hughes's street, is Hughes's sort of a lawyer and his gubernatorial campaign is independent like Hughes's. Still, while the real Hughes is long married and settled, Graham in the play loves and wooes, wins and weds that rare being, a girl private secretary with brain behind her beauty. This Hughes and his amanuensis are played by the leading actor and actress of the Spooner Stock company, so they're all right morally, emotionally, politically, every other way with a doting audience. The opposed candidate, though dubbed George Vincent, is William Randolph Hearst, with a booming newspaper and a hurrahing party of his own, also he is George B. McClellan, holding the mayoralty of New York city while reaching for the governoralty of New York state, yet although both Hearst and McClellan are married felicitously off stage, their composite on stage in Vincent is a bachelor libertine, besides several other kinds of a scoundrel. I suggest that John Doe procedure be taken to firstly identify Bragdlon and Postance, and to secondly, in case they are proven to be Charles E. Blaney, the play's producer, force him to tell which, the editor or the mayor, is its villain. And such a graft smirched, murder dyed villain! Why—but bye and bye for that.

Timothy McCormick, the political boss in "The Governor and the Boss," is for awhile a puzzle, because he is a Tammany boss, and so who else than Charlie Murphy? Pretty soon, though, the evidence is conclusive that he is Big Tim Sullivan, the Tammany Boss absolute of Manhattan borough south of Fourteenth street, which includes the Bowery. The play reveals, too, a Sullivan domestic and paternal past never suspected by his East Side constituency. It seems Boss Big Tim hasn't lived all his life in New York, but has taken time enough away from here to marry, in some mid-West city, a woman whom Editor Hearst, or Mayor McClellan—one, t'ther or amalgamatedly both—lured away from him. Thereupon Tim the Big Boss shot Hearst, or was it McClellan? and ran away. Here, now, in New York he finds the daughter of that long ago wedlock in Governor Hughes's combined secretary and fiancee. An involved campaign, this, with Hughes, Hearst, McClellan and Sullivan fighting sentimentally as well as politically.

And Boss Tim Sullivan the Big is the hero paramount for the populace in "The Governor and the Boss." Oh, my, yes. Hughes's probity as shown is too prim to find full favor with New Yorkers promiscuously. Hearst's and McClellan's duplicity, as libelled against them, passes beyond permissable craft of the polls into despicable criminality when they jimmy into Hughes's house on election night to assassinate him. Big Sullivan, the Tim Boss of Tammany, is different. He is a square dealer according to his moral lights; he rates Hughes politically as a duffer, but presumably as fit to be a Tammany boss's son-in-law; so he goes in cahoots with Hughes in a canvass which lands him in Albany. Incidentally he carries a gun loaded to kill the libertine who led his wife astray, and on finding him in McClellan, or is it Hearst? his vengeful vim captivated the audience.

All this space is not given to a dollar parquet and dime gallery play merely to be facetious, but partly to show the change which next winter will bring in stagecraft for the populace. The melodrama of gunpop and knife prick has slumped. Time and again have I described even the crudest of audiences as getting diversion from such pieces by derision. They roared with laughter at episodes meant to thrill. A puncture by a bullet, or a slit by a blade, became a joke. The authors, coerced by deserved ridicule of their heroes and heroines, retired their romantic lovers up stage at acts' ends, and sent their obtrusive comedians and impertinent soubrettes to the front for the climaxes. I noted often that, while hilarity greeted situations too absurd to get sober attention, any reasonably tense or plausibly exciting incident hushed the guyers while it was being presented, and evoked hearty applause after the curtain went down. The decline and fall of melodrama—of plays with no real newness apart from the titles—rendered the winter of 1907-8 unprofitable to many managers who had prospered in 1906-7. The losers are throwing down this spring the stuff that was rejected by the people, and I think that next autumn they will take up better matter generally. But of the thirteen theaters in New York which, a year ago, were given over to plays titled like "The Hundredth Death Notch or Shoot-'Em-Quick's Gunstock," all save one are occupied this week by musical farces, starred players in coherent plays and other entertainments not crazy nor very foolish.

It should be taken gladly that "The Governor and the Boss" is a sign of the time when melodrama so bad as to be burlesque is past, and that better kinds of low cost yet not low brow plays are coming along. This new one is a reckless misrepresentation of New York politics, of course, but it is a distinct gain for originality nevertheless. Take its last act as illustrative. It is the night of the election day when Hughes was voted governor and Hearst almost. Hughes's household is alert at ticker and phones in his library for figures from upstate.

LOUISIANA'S FUTURE WEALTH.

Seven Millions of Acres of Swamp Land, the Most Fertile in the World.

From the Southern Farm Magazine.

Louisiana to-day embraces within its boundaries an area which is, in its present condition, as useless to its people as a corresponding area on the high seas. Yet this now worthless area, something over 7 million acres, is the greatest body of fertility in the world except probably in the Amazon flood plain. The cultivated portion of the alluvial district south of Red river is to-day supporting the densest agricultural population in the United States—a population of 330 to the square mile of cultivated land, omitting entirely the urban population of New Orleans.

Based upon what the alluvial lands are now doing, the undrained lands of Louisiana—lands to-day wholly unoccupied—are capable of supporting, not counting the cities which would exist there, over 3½ million, a population exceeding any one of forty states of the American Union. Holland, on an alluvial area (2¾ million acres), considerably less than one-half of Louisiana's undrained area, and with a fertility not up to the Louisiana standard, supports about 5 million people, and up to the highest standard of Europe. Holland is almost a synonym for wealth.

Beyond question the drainage of the remaining marshes and swamps of the United States is the most important natural development awaiting us, and is sure to be done by the present generation. Scores of drainage projects are now actively under way, and thousands of acres have already been brought under cultivation with most satisfactory results. The production of these new lands far exceeds that of the older cultivated lands of this famously productive delta, and, except where reclaimed by companies for the purpose of sale, they are rarely offered at any price. Here the drainage movement is getting momentum, and it will not stop until Southern Louisiana has become the richest agricultural community of its size in the world.

The Hotels of Manila.

From the New York Press.

W. C. Garland, proprietor of the Bay hotel at Manila, is visiting New York, accompanied by his wife, whom he married just before leaving the Philippines for America, where they had decided to spend their honeymoon. Mr. Garland is an Australian by birth and this is his first visit to these shores. His wife is a Bostonian. Mr. Garland is not much impressed by our big hotels. He says there is far too much fuss and tinsel surrounding them to suit him, and their tariffs he considers outrageously high.

"I have made a tour of the large hotels here during my two weeks' stay in the city," he said at the Herald Square hotel, "and the only thing I like about them is their excellent grub and cooking. But the pleasure of eating is greatly marred by the fearful amount of gaudy tinsel and fuss that surrounds one, the exorbitant charges for everything and the abominable tipping custom. The traveling public here, however, seem to rather like that sort of thing.

"Our best hotels in Manila, while by no means perfect, are mighty comfortable and homelike, and our charges are a mere bagatelle compared with the tariffs of even the cheaper hotels here. Out there one can live in any first class hostelry for $11 a week. On the menu you will find everything that is to be had in the best establishments here, and a great deal more in the line of fruit. And last, but not least, you'll have a clean swallow tailed waiter to serve you who doesn't keep sniffing around your table looking for a tip."

Indian Art in Calcutta.

From Harper's Weekly.

An exhibition of modern and ancient Oriental paintings has just been held at the Indian Government School of Art in Calcutta, and attracted considerable attention. The pictures were in both oil and water colors, and the greater part of them were loaned for the purposes of the exhibit by Indian residents of Calcutta. The Indian Society of Oriental Art is making a strong effort to revive the interest in genuine Oriental art, which in India is rapidly disappearing. A prominent leader in the movement says that he is hopeful of success, and believes that art in India will again become a potential influence in lifting the masses to a higher level.

The ancient Indian pictures in oil were of unusual interest, and attracted the attention of the lovers of old pictures and students of local color. There was an interesting exhibit of Chinese and Japanese paintings, some of them quite old, which were owned by Indian families of wealth and culture. The exhibition was the first of its kind to be held in Calcutta.

THIS WEEK AT The THEATERS.

VESTA VICTORIA, the English singing comedienne, about whom so much has been said during the last ten years, will occupy the place of honor in the bill at the Orpheum this week, beginning this afternoon. Miss Victoria is an English music hall singer possessed of personal beauty and charm of manner. She it was who started two nations to singing "Daddy Wouldn't Buy Me a Bow-Wow" and "Waiting at the Church," songs she still sings. Among the novelties in Miss Victoria's repertoire is "Queen of the Jujah Islands," in which she appears in a costume made entirely of leaves. Among the other numbers in the Orpheum bill are "The Awakening of Toys," a unique pantomimic act; George A. Beane and company in a domestic sketch, entitled, "A Woman's Way;" Charles Marvelle, contortionist and equilibrist; Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Colby, introducing electrical black art; James A. McDonald, monologist and singer, and Brown and Nevarro, a team of colored comedians.

George H. Broadhurst's merry farce, "What Happened to Jones," will be the Barker Stock company's bill at the Shubert. The comedy is known here, and when well played offers a delightful evening of wholesome fun. Henry Kolker will have the role of Jones, Frances Neilson will be the mischievous Vassar girl, Cissy by name; Aileeen Flaven will be Helma, the Swede servant girl; Reginald Barker will impersonate the Bishop of Ballarat and Ida Lewis will have a fine part in the old maid sister of the professor of anatomy.

The Yiddish players from the Kalich theater, in New York city, will present three musical plays in the Willis Wood theater the second half of the week, as follows: Thursday night, "The Widow;" Friday night, "Be a Man;" Saturday night, "The Apostate." Rosa Karp, Bernard Bernstein, Elias Rothstein and Leon Blank are the leading members of the company, which is from the theater named after Bertha Kalich and the theater in which this famous actress won her New York success.

"More Than Queen," a drama of Napoleon and the Empress Josephine, introduced to America by Julia Arthur and subsequently used two seasons by Blanche Walsh, will be the attraction for the week at the Auditorium. William Humphrey, who has played the role of Napoleon more than 700 times with Miss Arthur and Miss Walsh, is in charge of the production and will appear as Napoleon. Eva Lang will impersonate the empress.

"Tempest and Sunshine," an adaptation of Mary J. Holmes's novel of the same name, will be at the Gilliss during the seven days beginning this afternoon.

The Tiger Lilies, with George Murphy as principal comedian, will be the visitors at the Century. Daily matinees.

The Boston Belles, with Edgar Bixley, one time with "Buster Brown," for leader, will present a diversified programme at the Majestic.

The Anemone of Nebraska Woodlands.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

The sweet anemone—Ranunculus—is the poetic wind-flower, and belongs to the crow-foot family. It is very common in Nebraska woodlands and is one of the dearest of all our early vernal blossoms. It is tender and fragile, and in its little crypts in the woodsy dells and along the fox squirrel paths, catches the motion of every breath of wind, however soft, and from this fact comes its pretty name, anemone, or wind-flower. The fronds of the anemone are early to burst, and while each little stem bears but a single flower, it is prolific in roots, and all about peep fragile sentinels with their lily-like cups, all radiating from one parent stalk. There is also a lesser anemone indigenous with us, but not so general as the genus just spoken of. It has several flowers to a stem and is called anemonelia. It is found quite plentiful in the thick woods down round about the old Parkins sand pits on the Missouri.

MARKETS & MONEY

ABNORMAL GRAIN MARKETS

MANIPULATION HAS THROWN WHEAT PRICES OUT OF LINE.

Some Indications That the Scarcity of Supplies Has Been Exaggerated—Some Crop Complaints—New High Records for Corn Prices.

Congestion in the Chicago May wheat, producing unnatural conditions in that pivotal market, has made it difficult to properly judge the normal developments in the wheat trade during the past week. The Chicago May price yesterday was 6 cents higher than a week ago, while the July price was only ¼c higher. May wheat in Kansas City yesterday was only ⅛c higher than a week ago, the Minneapolis May price was up 1⅜c and the Liverpool May price was nearly 2½c lower yesterday than a week ago. These comparisons show unmistakably the unnatural character of the advance in Chicago May wheat. Practically all the cash wheat in Chicago—about 6½ million bushels—is owned by the Armour Grain company, and that concern is the chief holder, also, of May contracts. The expectation is that there will be a milling demand for this wheat at high prices between now and the movement of the new crop. But outside of Chicago cash prices are barely holding steady. Millers are not showing any alarm over prospective supplies for the next two or three months. The large premiums for cash wheat over the July price will have the effect of curtailing milling operations everywhere.

The movement of wheat last week at primary markets was less than half that of the corresponding week a year ago, but compared with two years ago the deficiency was slight, and the week's receipts were larger than three years ago and larger than four years ago so that current supplies in market channels are not abnormally small and with cash prices actually higher in this country (at seaboard markets) than in Liverpool, it seems clear that American millers will have no competition from abroad for the remnant of the old crop.

ARE CASH PRICES HIGH ENOUGH?

The fact that outside markets were almost entirely unaffected by the artificial advance in the Chicago May price last week seems to indicate that millers are not disposed to buy wheat much above present prices. That the surplus of the old crop will be nearly exhausted before new wheat is available seems evident, but if the new crop turns out as large as it now promises, everybody who has any old wheat will be glad to get rid of it at present prices, rather than to carry it into a new crop year.

For the next few weeks the visible supply figures will be affected by the large movement of wheat on the lakes. Navigation is open and several million bushels of wheat will move out of Chicago, Duluth and the Canadian ports. There should be a decrease of about 2 million bushels in to-morrow's visible supply. On the corresponding date last year the decrease was ¾ million bushels.

FOREIGN MARKETS LOWER.

Relative weakness in foreign markets seems to indicate that buyers in importing countries are not disturbed over the question of supplies for the remainder of the crop year notwithstanding the wide disparity between the weekly world's shipments now and in the corresponding season last year. The liberal stocks in Europe and afloat can be drawn on liberally to make up the deficiency. The shipments from Argentina last week were 3,704,000 bushels—an increase of 1½ million bushels over those of the preceding week and ¼ million bushels larger than a year ago. American exports were 1,620,000 bushels and about 1½ million bushels are expected from other sources. Last year in the corresponding week Russia and the Danubian ports put out 5½ million bushels.

Yet, in the face of these comparisons, Liverpool prices were nearly 2½c lower for May wheat and 1¾c lower for July wheat yesterday than a week ago.

FEW CROP COMPLAINTS.

There was some modification of the favorable tenor of the crop news last week. A considerable area of Kansas and Nebraska needs rain and there was some complaint of damage by Hessian flies in Southern Kansas and Northern Oklahoma. Unfavorable crop news may be expected to have more than the usual influence on speculative sentiment, owing to the small remnant of the old crop remaining. But the general crop situation is favorable and the government crop report for May, which will be published next Friday, probably will show little change from the winter wheat condition reported a month ago. It will show a condition around 90, which has been equaled only four times in May in the past fifteen years.

ACTUAL SCARCITY OF CORN.

In the corn market, as in the wheat, an unnatural condition exists owing to the fact that the Patten interests in Chicago own practically all the corn at that center. Over 3 million bushels were delivered to it on May contracts last week and more will be delivered before the end of the month. The congestion in the May contracts sent the May price up to 69½c yesterday—the highest price, with three exceptions, in twenty years. Outside markets followed the Chicago advance in corn as they did not in wheat. Corn is worth almost as much in Kansas City as in Chicago, and there is a shipping margin between Chicago and Eastern prices of corn, which cannot be said of wheat.

Receipts of corn at each of the principal markets were smaller last week than in the week before or a year ago. At the three Western markest the carlots were only 1,450, against 2,163 in the preceding week and 2,120 a year ago. Cash corn in Kansas City is selling 3c to 4c over the May price, though the demand is said not to be urgent. Export business is slow. The clearances last week were only 407,000 bushels, while Argentina sent out 2,471,000 bushels last week.

High prices for corn have failed to attract the amount of grain from the farms that was to be expected. It remains to be seen whether in the interim between the completion of seeding and the beginning of cultivating, there will be the increase in the movement to the central markets that usually occurs.

The range of prices for the active grain futures last week and the close Saturday, with comparisons, are here shown:

Few Changes in Prices Last Week—Lucky Tiger Annual Statement.

An improvement of about $2 a share is quoted in the price of Lucky Tiger mining stock owing to the showing made in the annual report which was distributed to stockholders last week. It shows net operating profits of about $400,000 in 1907, or more than 70 per cent on the par value of the stock, after paying interest on the bonds. The net value of the year's output was $526,321, and the net value of the production since the company started is $1,308,421. The company is still putting most of its profits back in development work. It has paid off $92,800 in bonds since December 31, 1907. The total development work amounts to 16,368 feet of drifting, crosscutting and raising—over three miles—more than one-third of which was done last year. The litigation over the title to the property ended last December with complete victory for the company, though it was expensive, costing in all over $181,000, besides delaying the development of the property. The balance sheet shows capital stock $650,000; 6 per cent bonds, $400,000 (of which $92,800 have been paid off since December 31); undivided profits, $548,964; total value of the property, $1,753,395. Nothing is said in the report as to when the payment of dividends will begin.

Railway and Light common stock is quoted down about a point, probably on account of the success of the 3-cent fare movement in Cleveland, as an indication of what may ultimately come in Kansas City. There were few trades in the stock. The bonds and five-year notes of the company have met with good demand.

Some sales of Central Coal and Coke, and of National Bank of Commerce and Commerce Trust stocks were made at about the prices prevailing in the preceding week.

The Wonders of Phlox.

From the Outing Magazine.

Of all the beautiful plants with which America has enriched the garden of the world phlox is the most prolific of new varieties. A Scotch nurseryman offers more than 600 of them.

Next to the peony in desirability I would place the perennial phlox. It is to the border what the geranium is to the window garden. It will grow in any soil and under almost any conditions. It is as hardy as a plant can possibly be. I know of no flower that equals it in profusion of bloom. Every stalk—and there will be dozens from each clump of strong root—will be crowned with a panicle of flowers a foot long and nearly as wide. The colors range from purest milk white to rose, scarlet, crimson, violet, lilac and magenta, and in many varieties there are combinations of these colors strikingly beautiful in their harmonious contrast. Some varieties are of dwarf habit, often not growing much over a foot in height, while others grow to a height of five and six feet.

If the old or first blooms are cut off as soon as they have passed their prime smaller flower stalks will be sent out along the main stalk below, and thus a succession of flowers can be kept up until the cold weather comes. Of course these later flowers will lack the size of the earlier ones, so far as panicle is concerned, but they will help to make the garden gay long after most other flowers are in the "sere and yellow leaf."

Before ordering phlox study up the sizes as given in your catalogue that you may be sure to get the tall growing kinds where they belong—at the back of the row. A little study will enable you to so group your plants, according to height of growth, that you can have a solid bank of flowers to within a foot of the ground.

Do not make the mistake of putting the rose, scarlet and crimson varieties near the lilac and magenta sorts. The two colors will not harmonize with anything but the white sorts.

RISING PRICES FOR STOCKS

AN INCREASE OF 2 BILLIONS IN VALUES FROM THE LOW LEVEL OF 1907.

Wall Street Operators Are Showing Faith in the Future Rather Than Being Influenced by Present Conditions—Various Adverse Factors.

NEW YORK, May 2.—The stock ticker has told a more cheerful tale than the statistics of trade this week. A buoyant stock market with advances averaging over 3 points in railroad stocks, and a larger volume of dealings than for several months previously, reflects growing confidence in the future, even while some factors of the business situation are increasingly discouraging.

Rich and aggressive operators have been trading on a large scale, and have found it comparatively easy to mark prices up, though most commission men agree that there has been little increase in what is commonly called "public buying." On the contrary the scattered small traders seem more inclined to take the short side of the market.

RAILROADS CUTTING EXPENSES.

Reports of railroad earnings have been more reassuring to security holders this week than for some time previously—not in the total volume of business, but in the evidence afforded that the managers have finally succeeded in cutting down operating expenses to conform with the diminished gross revenue, so that net earnings are showing a fair margin for stockholders. Here is a list of important railroads, showing the decrease in gross and net earnings for March as compared with the figures of a year ago:

	Decrease in Earnings. Gross.	Net.
Atchison	$1,032,185	$ 287,585
Union Pacific	854,788	205,107
Southern Pacific	808,506	*125,882
Northwestern	770,484	94,995
Rock Island (all roads)	873,825	384,043
Southern Railway	692,015	*265,770
Pennsylvania	2,169,800	544,500

*Increase.

These seven important representative systems show an aggregate shrinkage in March of over 7 millions in the gross income, while the decrease in net revenue is cut down to $1,124,608. This is certainly an encouraging showing to stockholders who have watched with solicitude the previous records of shrinkages in net earnings, great enough if continued, to endanger their dividends.

THE OTHER SIDE OF RAILROAD ECONOMY.

But cutting down operating expenses means throwing men out of employment, buying the least possible quantity of new material, and sacrificing efficiency and the maintenance of the properties to a greater or less extent—a condition which is not conducive to a revival of general business.

The control which the big operators possess over the market and their determination to be guided by future prospects rather than by present conditions, were evidenced this week when the report of the American Railway association on the number of idle freight cars was made public. It showed 375,770 cars not in use April 15 compared with 306,507 on April 1 and 297,000 on March 18. It is said that never before have so many cars been idle. But the figures made no impression on the stock market. It had a temporary setback and turned up again the next day.

Later information does not indicate any improvement in railroad traffic. For the third week of April twenty-five railroads report an average decrease of 18 per cent in gross earnings—the largest decrease that has been reported since the decline in business set in last fall.

ADVERSE FACTORS DISCOUNTED.

But the influential powers in the stock market look on all these adverse factors as having been discounted by the long decline in stocks and they are acting now on what they expect the future to bring forth, not on past or present conditions. Good crop prospects, cheap money, a steady accumulation of capital available for investment—these are the things that are expected ultimately to give a substantial basis for the upward movement in the market.

The disposition to look to the future rather than the present is shown by the reception accorded the reduction in the Pennsylvania railroad's dividend rate from 7 per cent to 6 per cent. The price of the stock advanced instead of declining following the announcement.

A RECOVERY OF TWO BILLIONS.

From the low quotations of 1907 to the present values there has been an increase of nearly 2 billion dollars in the aggregate market value of the stocks listed on the leading exchanges. The depreciation from the high to the low points in 1907 was nearly 5 billions so that there has been a recovery of about 40 per cent of the decline.

There has been very large profit-taking this week by operators who had previously been on the buying side. The failure of another "bear house"—the second in two weeks—helped to furnish a demand for stocks. It made the short sellers nervous and induced an extensive covering of short sales.

INDUSTRIAL STOCKS HANG BACK.

The industrial stocks have not kept pace with the advance in railroad securities. The average quotations of the industrials is about the same to-day as a week ago. The continual dullness in the steel trade, and in other manufacturing industries, is the sufficient explanation of the lagging tendency of these stocks. The quarterly statement of the United States Steel company was slightly better than expected, but it was able to show dividends earned only by making a big reduction in the charges for depreciation and reserve. The unfilled orders on hand March 31, amounting to 3,765,000 tons, were less than half those of the corresponding date last year, and the smallest since September 30, 1904.

Continued sagging in the price of raw copper is another evidence of the industrial dullness, which serves to keep prices of this class of securities down.

EXCESS BANK RESERVES.

The glut of money in the banks remains unrelieved. The Secretary of the Treasury has called for the return of 45 millions of the government money now in the banks—10 millions by May 9 and 15 millions by May 25—but rates of interest have not been stiffened appreciably. Though several millions have been turned into the national treasury this week, and 2½ millions in gold were exported, still the bank statement to-day showed an increase of over 5 millions in cash and the surplus above legal requirements is more than 62 million dollars. The loans of the clearing house banks showed a slight decrease notwithstanding the activity of the stock market and the placing of 20 millions of Pennsylvania bonds and 25 millions of Interboro securities. The financing of these transactions appears to have been done through the banks and trust companies not members of the clearing house, for their loans increased nearly 14½ million dollars.

The exportation of gold thus far amounts to 14 million dollars. The recession in sterling exchange rates in the past few days seems to indicate that the movement is at an end for the present.

KANSAS AVERAGE RAINFALL.

Less Than Half as Much in the West as in the East Parts.

An interesting chart has been prepared by T. B. Jennings, section director of the United States weather bureau at Topeka, Kas., and published in the Kansas Farmer, showing the rainfall in Kansas for a series of years. The diminishing rainfall from east to west is shown in the following record of annual average precipitation:

	Annual Average Inches.
Kansas City-Leavenworth, 72 years	35.10
Lawrence, 40 years	34.32
Manhattan, 50 years	30.45
Hays City, 40 years	23.48
Dodge City, 40 years	20.51
Wallace, 38 years	16.88

The Leavenworth records show a maximum of 60 inches of rain in 1858, and almost as much in 1865, following a year of drought with a total precipitation of less than 15 inches.

At Dodge City the minimum annual rainfall in the 40-year record was 7 inches in 1868, and the minimum was 33 inches in 1881. In 1906 Dodge City received 32 inches of precipitation—9 inches more than normal—and in the same year the precipitation at Kansas City was 33 inches—2 inches below the normal amount. Two years before Kansas City's precipitation was nearly 50 inches, or 15 inches above normal, while at Dodge City it was 18 inches, or 5 inches below normal.

The rainfall varies greatly in the same year in different parts of the state. Last year, for example, Dodge City had 20½ inches—just normal—while Wallace had less than 10 inches, or about half the normal amount. In 1903 the precipitation was nearly 33 inches at Hays and only 15 inches at Dodge City.

The average annual precipitation at Dodge City in the past ten years has been 22.8 inches, or nearly 3 inches above the average of the thirty-one preceding years. At Wallace the average of the past ten years is about half an inch over the average of the previous twenty-eight years. At Hays City the average for the last ten years is nearly 3 inches above the average for thirty previous years. At Manhattan the latest 10-year average is 3 inches over the average of the previous forty years.

These comparisons might seem to indicate a permanent increase in the average annual rainfall. But previous 10-year periods can be picked out in which the rainfall was still greater. For example, in the 10-year period from 1876 to 1887, inclusive, the Manhattan average was 35 inches, or 2 inches more than in the past ten years. In the period from 1873 to 1882, inclusive, the rainfall at Dodge City was almost the same as in the latest 10-year period.

The records, therefore, do not justify the assumption that there has been a permanent increase in the rainfall.

Neosho Valley Flood Statistics.

From U. S. Agricultural Dept. Bulletin.

The floods which occasionally cause great injury in the Neosho valley of Kansas have led to an investigation of that region by the drainage engineers of the United States office of experiment stations, with the object of ascertaining the best method to be adopted for the prevention of this injury, and the probable cost of carrying out the work. This bulletin contains the results of this investigation, including a description of the present condition of the valley and river channel, a history of recent injurious floods, together with an account of previous attempts at protection, and an estimate of the increased value of the land when properly protected by the levees and other improvements which are recommended.

Requests for this bulletin should be made to the director of the office of experiment stations, United States Department of Agriculture.

Codfish Balls.

From the Boston Post.

Use one-third dry salt cod and two-thirds potatoes. The fish, merely washed, is laid in the pot over the potatoes and enough boiling water poured over both to just cover them. Cook for one-half hour, then the water is drained off and they are shaken until dry and mashed with a potato masher. Stir in a well-beaten egg and form into round smooth balls, roll in flour and fry in boiling hot fat until a delicate brown.

APRIL LIVE STOCK MOVEMENT.

A Shrinkage of 33 Per Cent in the Receipts of Cattle.

An extraordinary falling off in the movement of cattle is shown by the live stock statistics for April. In Kansas City there was a shrinkage of 33 per cent in the receipts, and the five Western markets show a similar loss. The only reasonable explanation is that there is a shortage of cattle on feed owing to the high price of corn, while at the same time good pastures enable stockmen to carry their cattle over, instead of flooding the market with them. Prices are about a dollar a hundred pounds higher than a year ago for fat steers, $1 to $1.50 higher for cows, and 50c higher for stockers and feeders.

The receipts of hogs were almost as large last month as a year ago in Kansas City, but there was a decrease of 16 per cent in Chicago and of 12 per cent at the five principal markets. Present prices of hogs are 75c to $1 lower than a year ago, though they are $1.50 higher than the low level reached last November owing to the financial disturbance. The average weight of hogs in Kansas City last month was 213 pounds, compared with 219 pounds a year ago.

In four months, since January 1, the Kansas City receipts of hogs were nearly 40 per cent larger than in the same time last year, and the increase at five markets for the same period was 23 per cent.

The movement of sheep was larger last month than a year ago at Kansas City, but smaller elsewhere about 20 per cent.

The following table shows the receipts of cattle (calves included), hogs and sheep, at Kansas City, Chicago and the five Western markets for the month of April and four months this year, and last:

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

Slight Deterioration in the General Condition of Winter Wheat.

No rain of any consequence fell in Kansas and Nebraska last week. More complete information regarding the extent of previous rains indicates that about 1½ million acres of wheat in Kansas and a million acres in Nebraska need moisture and the plants will suffer continuous impairment of vitality on this acreage until it gets rain. Increasing complaints of damage by Hessian flies come from the important south central portions of the Kansas wheat belt and also from Northern Oklahoma. The latter state received additional rains. The April precipitation in Oklahoma was the largest on record. Good rains fell in Missouri, except the northwest quarter, and in Iowa and the central states. Showers fell in the Dakotas and good rains in the southern half of Minnesota.

Abnormally cool weather prevailed with freezing temperatures in portions of the grain area west of the Mississippi river as far south as Southern Missouri and Southeast Kansas. No damage to wheat from this cause was reported.

The May government crop report which will be issued next Friday at noon (Eastern time) will show some decline in the winter wheat conditions in Kansas and Nebraska owing to the deficient moisture in portions of those states. In other states of the country conditions have not changed materially. The May report will probably show a winter wheat condition of about 90, compared with 91.3 a month ago, and 82.9 a year ago. In the comparisons with last year it is to be remembered that the area that probably will be harvested this year is fully 2 millions acres greater, or over 6 per cent greater than the area harvested in 1907. In May last year 3,533,000 acres of wheat were reported as having been abandoned. This month's report will show less than a million acres abandoned—probably not over ½ million acres. The area sown last fall was 31 million acres. The area harvested in 1907 was 28,132,000 acres.

The government report probably will show the largest proportion of spring seeding finished on May 1 that was ever reported on that date. Nearly all the spring wheat is now planted, whereas a year ago on May 1 probably not half of it was planted. The government report on the proportion of spring planting includes all crops. Last year on May 1 the percentage for the whole country was 47. In Minnesota a 50 per cent of the spring planting was done on May 1, 1907; in North Dakota 20 per cent and in South Dakota 60 per cent.

SURETY BONDS
No one should allow himself to be guilty of the folly of believing that the signing of a bond as surety is simply a matter of form. Personal surety never knows when his liability is ended, for the reason that judicial bonds are retained by the courts, and years afterward the case may be brought up and the surety of his estate made to pay.
We issue Surety Bonds for persons holding positions of trust; for city, county and state officials; for notaries public; for contractors; and in all judicial proceedings.

WHO WILL SUCCEED DIAZ?

A SUCCESSOR TO MEXICO'S PRESIDENT MUST BE CHOSEN SOON.

For the First Time in the Country's History the People Are to Select Their Chief—Three Active Candidates in the Field.

The announcement made several weeks ago by President Porfirio Diaz that he would retire from office of President of Mexico when his present term expires in October, 1910, was the signal for the beginning of activity on the part of men who aspire to become his successor as chief executive. It is only a litttle more than two years until a new man must be chosen president of the republic. President Diaz's determination not to accept another term is irrevocable. He will have reached the age of 80 years when his present term expires. He says that he desires to spend the few years that he hopes will be left him of life in quiet rest. He long has had a desire to visit Europe and to spend some time in France, but he is said to have given up this long-contemplated pleasure. It is barely possible that he may visit the United States after his retirement from office. Above all things he desires to see a continuation of the peace and prosperity of Mexico, and it is said by men who know him best that he will remain close to the seat of government for a time after a change of administration is made, in order to lend a helping hand to those in power if trouble of any kind might threaten to imperil the smooth sailing of the ship of state.

JOSE IVES LIMANTOUR, MEXICO'S MINISTER OF FINANCE, WHO IS A CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY OF THE REPUBLIC.

A FAIR FIGHT FOR SUCCESSION.

The indications now point to a fair and open fight between the different political elements of Mexico for the control of the federal machinery of the government upon the retirement of President Diaz. By this it is meant that it is likely that there will be no arbitrary or perfunctory choice made of the man who is to occupy the chair of chief executive, but that the free exercise of the ballot to determine who the masses want will be allowed, for the first time in the history of Mexico. There have been many published reports during the last several years to the effect that President Diaz would name his own successor; that he had this man and that man in training for the high office. That he is in position to exercise such a dictatorship hardly can be questioned. It is said, however, on reliable authority that he does not intend doing so. He may have his preference, but, if so, no one knows who the man is. At the time the office of vice president was created a few years ago and Ramon Corral was brought from the distant state of Sonora and installed in that position, it was said by many that President Diaz wanted to make Corral his successor. It developed as time passed that Mr. Corral was no more the favorite of the President than any other of men who surrounded him. It is well known that he has the very highest regard for his minister of finance, Jose Ives Limantour, in whom he intrusted some of the greatest and most momentous government problems, of which the acquiring and merging of the principal railroads of the country may be cited. Another man in whom President Diaz has the greatest confidence is General Bernardo Reyes, former secretary of war and who for maany years has occupied the position of constitutional governor of the state of Nuevo Leon. It has been reported from time to time in the foreign press that General Reyes was not in sympathy with President Diaz's administration and that he was at the head of an opposition party, whhich proposed to stir up all sorts of trouble when a favorable opportunity occurred. It is known that there was no foundation for these reports. General Reyes not only stated over his own signature that he was an ardent supporter of Diaz's governmental policy, but other circumstances plainly refuted the charge that was made against him. General Reyes's retirement from the secretary of war portfoilo was wholly voluntary on his part. As governor of the state of Nuevo Leon and commander of the military zone which borders on the Rio Grande, he occupies positions of the greatest importance to the government.

RAMON CORRAL, VICE PRESIDENT OF MEXICO, WHO WOULD SUCCEED PRESIDENT DIAZ AS CHIEF EXECUTIVE.

An analysis of the existing political situation in Mexico shows that there are three aspirants to the presidency to succeed President Diaz. They are Ramon Corral, Jose Ives Limantour and General Bernardo Reyes. These men are each avowed candidates for the high office to the extent that they now are permitting their respective friends to inaugurate campaigns in their behalf throughout the republic. Mr. Corral has been the most active of the three candidates in promoting his political interests among the people. He began his active campaign immediately upon the public announcement that President Diaz would not accept another term of office. Mr. Corral is said to be forming a political organization that is to extend to all parts of the country. Among the men who are giving him their active support are Attorney Rafael Reyes Spindola, editor of El Imparcial of this city; Lorenzo Elizaga, member of congress; Colonel Felix Diaz, chief of police of Mexico City; Rosendo Pineda and Jesus Z. Moreno, who conducts a new Spanish daily called El Piloto in Monterey. It is said that in addition to the newspapers, El Imparcial and El Piloto, other daily and weekly publications favorable to Mr. Corral's candidacy recently have been established in the cities of Chihuahua, Hermosillo, Torreon, Guadalajara and other places. A noticeable thing about all these papers is that they are rabidly anti-American in their editorial and news policy. El Imparcial long has been noted for its opposition to all things American. It is considered surprising that American interests in Mexico should be made the subject of constant attack by the very newspapers which are promoting the candidacy of Mr. Corral for president. One of the chief objects of these newspapers seems to be to arouse the enmity of the Mexicans against the Americans. This course by the chief supporters of Mr. Corral is causing speculation among the Americans of the country as to whether the same liberality towards American investments and interests that always has been shown by President Diaz would be continued should Mr. Corral be advanced to the presidency.

TWO FAVOR AMERICAN INVESTORS.

Both Mr. Limantour and General Reyes are known to be strongly pro-American in their sentiments. They have no fear of American industrial aggression; on the contrary, they welcome foreign capital and immigration. In view of the fact that there is not less than 800 millions of American capital already invested in Mexico, and that the golden stream is pouring into the country at the rate of many thousands of dollars a month, the question of the probable attitude of the succeeding administration towards investments already made and those that might be offered in the future is of deep concern to Americans. It is not surmised that whoever might succeed President Diaz in power would paralyze American interests at one stroke, but there are many ways in which it could be shown that foreign capital is not wanted to develop the country's resources. Under the wise administration of President Diaz and through the selection of governors of his own choice for the several different states the policy of encouraging the investment of capital from the United States and other foreign countries has been widespread. General Bernardo Reyes through his administration of the affairs of the state of Neuvo Leon has been the direct means of bringing many millions of dollars of American capital into the city of Monterey and the mining districts of that state. Monterey has grown from a listless, idle town of 20,000 to a busy industrial city of 90,000, during the last fifteen or eighteen years. This wonderful change in the aspect of the city and state is due almost wholly to the great smelters and other industrial enterprises which American and European money has placed there. The same thing is true of the state of Chihuahua, where Enrique Creel is governor, of Jalisco, where Miguel Ahumada is governor, and many other states.

If President Diaz keeps hands off and holds aloof in the contest that has now been opened by the friends of the three rival candidates for the presidency the campaign, as it progresses, will awaken intense interest on the part of the people of the country. Doubt is expressed whether the masses of the Mexican people have yet reached the stage of advancement when they can be left to settle at the polls who shall be their ruler. It never before has been attempted. War or dictatorship heretofore has determined the question of who shall be at the head of the nation. But Mexico has made wonderful progress in education during the last thirty years. Dictatorship may be called in to settle the contest that is now on, but it is conceded by all who are in close touch with the existing sentiment of the people that no attempt will be made to place any man in as chief executive by recourse to arms.

A Window Box for the Kitchen.

From Harper's Bazar.

Window boxes may be put to a practical use, and at the same time give a bit of color to kitchen windows, by planting them with parsley and cress and enlivening by two or three brilliant geraniums. Neither the parsley nor cress is difficult to grow, and with the inspiring color of the geraniums before the cook would not feel it an additional burden to have to see to the necessary watering and trimming. The cress is the common garden cress (Lipedium salivum), and one authority states that three weeks from seed the leaves are ready to eat.

SOME PEOPLE OF THE STAGE

FRANCIS WILSON, the first of the Charles Frohman stars to reach San Francisco this season, has cabled Mr. Frohman favorably in reply to the suggestion of an Australian tour in "When Knights Were Bold."

The success of Ethel Barrymore in her new play, "Her Sister," has been so unexpectedly emphatic, everywhere the play is given, that at Miss Barrymore's urgent request Charles Frohman has added eight weeks to her season, bringing it up to the last of July.

The Scot, J. M. Barrie holds, is an eternal surprise to the Englishman and the Englishman to the Scot, and the new Barrie play will be a "hopeless attempt" to make them understand each other. Mr. Barrie's latest piece deals with the greatest of all the "social problems," "which is the right woman to marry?" Should a man know her well before marriage, or wait to know her afterwards? But is there a case on record of his ever knowing her well at all, and if there is one such case—namely, the gentleman of the Barrie play—would he not have been more comfortable had he, like the usual mortal, remained in ignorance?

When he gets to the task, William H. Crane will record for the opening lines of his personal memoirs that his first public appearance on any stage was at Mechanics' hall on the evening of July 13, 1863. He was cast as the notary in "The Child of the Regiment," appearing with the Holman Opera company, an organization then in great vogue. A disastrous failure marked Mr. Crane's debut. But the budding comedian and man of many parts laughed at the attempt, although retreating to the wings amid groans and hisses, for the name of the town was Utica, N. Y.

At the Atlantic Garden, in the Bowery, New York, the management will, on the evening of May 8, hold a celebration in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the resort.

Time was when the Atlantic Garden boasted of many players on its bills who ranked high in their profession, and there are on Broadway to-day several actors and comediennes who have served sentences at that house. An effort is being made to induce the well known vaudeville artists who have appeared at the Garden in the old days to be present at the semi-centennial.

The dramatization of Thomas Dixon, jr.'s novel, "The Traitor," made by Channing Pollock and Mr. Dixon, will be produced by George Brennan. The first performance of the piece will be given in Norfolk, Va., next September, and a long tour through the South will follow.

The play deals with the final dissolution of the Ku Klux Klan, which appeared conspicuously in "The Clansman," another of the Dixon novels that reached the stage via Brennan. Two companies have been presenting "The Clansman" for three seasons, and according to Brennan one organization will be sent to London in the near future.

"The Traitor" is the last of Dixon's trilogy of novels dealing with conditions in the South. The completed manuscript of the dramatization was delivered by Pollock April 1, and the same was pounced upon eagerly by Brennan at its first reading.

A play by Lee Arthur, the Sardou of Shrevesport, entitled "Undesirable Citizens," will be produced early next season by a corporation of which Paul Liebler is the active head.

"Undesirable Citizens" deals with political graft and modern society in a vigorous fashion. It was produced a few weeks ago at Payton's Lee Avenue theater, Brooklyn, and the result of the trial performances was a clamor for the rights from numerous Broadway managers.

Paul Liebler is associated with Liebler & Co. The production of "Undesirable Citizens," however, is his individual enterprise.

At Paterson, N. J., last week the company that is to present "Paid in Full" at the Grand Opera house, Chicago, gave its first regular performance. The play was presented under the auspices of the Paterson lodge of Elks.

The event was rather a distressing one for Guy Bates Post, who plays the role assumed by Tully Marshall in the New York company. Post's father died Sunday afternoon. In order that the actor might be present the funeral was held yesterday. Immediately after the services Post joined the company for its final dress rehearsal.

Helen Ware is the leading woman of the Chicago organization.

A new comer in the dramatic field is William Trowbridge Larned, whose adaptation of the Hungarian comedy, "The Devil," has been accepted by George Arliss for production in the fall. Mr. Arliss, for several years leading man with Mrs. Fiske, and one of the foremost portrayers of character parts, is to head his own company next season. He has been anxious to find a play which would exploit his abilities, and he is entirely satisfied that Mr. Larned's adaptation of "The Devil" meets his peculiar requirements. This play by Molnar Feranc was first put on in Austria, where its success was so pronounced that it is now on view in Berlin, Rome and Paris. Mr. Larned, who contributes the "Literary Zoo" to Life, made his adaptation from a translation direct from the Hungarian by Alex. Konta, now a stock broker and capitalist of New York. The character of the "The Devil" is semi-supernatural and the cynicism and ironic malevolence of the part are exactly suited to Mr. Arliss's powers of expression. The play itself is uncommonly original in theme and development.

ART CRAFTS UNION CELEBRATES.

Kunst Gewerbe Verein's Exhibition Marks Its Fifty Years of Usefulness.

From the New York Herald.

Sincerity of purpose and high ideals pervade an exhibition which is being given in its clubrooms at 194 Third avenue by the Kunst Gewerbe Verein (Art Crafts union), which is celebrating its semi-centennary.

The society was founded in 1858 by Germans, many of whom were carvers, decorators and skillful artificers, to develop the artistic sense among those who wrought with their hands. It was the forerunner of Cooper union and similar schools and of the arts and crafts movement, which in recent years has been wielding an important influence.

Edward Plassman, one of its founders, was in a place of honor in the show, where are displayed some of his carvings and a time worn wax model. His son, Joseph Plassman, is now head of the society. Scores of men who in the last half century have contributed to the beautifying of American homes drew their inspiration from instruction obtained at the Kunst Gewerbe Verein. The organization, which has been working in an unobtrusive way, has one of the best libraries on art in New York. Whenever a member hears of a work which he thinks would be useful to him he says so and the union buys it without discussion on the theory that a book for which one member hungers will certainly be of use to all the others. It also has life classes in charge of well known instructors. Artists, illustrators, carvers, designers, decorators, cabinet makers, silversmiths and weavers belong to the organization.

The present exhibition is as heterogeneous as it is interesting. Alphonse Mucha, a noted poster painter, and L. Killian, who designed a gilt Louis XVI sofa which his fellow craftsmen, Messrs. Uphoff and Estergomy, carved, are fellow contributors, and Karl Bitter has sent his remarkable bust of the late Carl Schurz, and near it are models for mirror backs made by the foreman in a silversmith's establishment. There are several excellent sculptures, including a head by Carl Beil and bears Gustave Manz. E. V. Nadherney shows the original of some notable newspaper and magazine illustrations and also a poetic water color. W. B. Cox shows several oil paintings, the most important of which "The Haystack," is pleasing in tone and has many of the qualities seen in the works of the best American landscape painters.

Members of the union are responsible for the tasteful decorations which cause their rooms to resemble the interior of a Pompeiian villa. The frieze is painted on transparent material and is illuminated from behind with electric lights. Some members of the guild made the classic pillars with their own hands while others did the painting and decorating or fashioned special furniture.

The Daytime Boy.

No, Sir! It ain't that I ain't brave!
Why, all day long, I just behave
Like some of those there heroes—like
"Slick Sam" or "Gentlemanly Mike!"—
I shoot, and scrap, and sometimes, too,
I kiss that next door girl, I do!
And how I laugh at other boys
What just sets 'round and fools with toys!
They're all a-scared to death of me!
Oh! life's a cinch all day! But, gee!
When night time comes, and lights are low,
And phantom shadows come and go—
No—'tain't that I'm a-scared—and say!
That ain't the point, Sir, anyway.

But just you go upstairs alone
And listen to them Spookses moan!
A sorter kinder holler sound
What roots you firmly to the ground,
(The bed, that is)—and just you wait!
Some day I'll sure be some one great!
You bet. And when I'm President
I'll have a Procklimation sent
To Parents—and especially mine—
What puts lights out at half past nine;
And if they dare to disobey
My orders, to keep night like day,
I'll have 'em sent up stairs to bed
To set alone in fear and dread,
And make no sound, and have no light,
And hear the watches of the night
A-tickin' all around, until
Their hair stands up agin their will!
And when they hear them spookses whoo-oo-oo-oo!
They'll weep to think what I'VE went thru!

How to Eat Pineapples.

From the New York Tribune.

Americans as a rule do not know how to eat pineapples. They should never be sliced. That treatment releases the juice from the pulp, and leaves the meat dry and woody and tasteless. Down in Cuba, and in the lower part of Florida, where they know how to eat the fruit, they never peal a pineapple. They take a ripe fruit—for pineapples should never be eaten unless they are ripe—and cut off the top and bottom; then they split the fruit lengthwise, then quarter it, and split the quarters. This gives eight slices, which are then eaten from the hand as one would eat a piece of watermelon. By following this method you get all the juice and can make a tidy job of it. You eat it right down to the skin, and after trying it that way I do not think you would voluntarily go back to the old way of chopping the fruit into chunks and eating the juiceless pieces.

HERE IS A CLAIMANT FOR THE TITLE OF "YOUNGEST MOTORIST."

Probably the youngest of motorist is little Bessie Coulson, daughter of Councilman E. E. Coulson of Abilene, Kas. She is not yet 6 years old, her birthday being in June, but she drives her father's big two-cylinder Buick touring car capably and with as much skill as is shown my many older persons. Frequently she has run the car from her parents' home on North Olive street down through town, dodging teams and pedestrians, and brought it back home without anyone but herself touching the wheel. Usually her father sits in the seat beside her, but the other day he took the rear seat and she ran the car from the business part of town home, a half mile, bringing it to a stop at the curb with the skill of a chauffeur. She went through town the other day with the car filled with little children, her father riding on the running board to see that no accident occurred. Almost every day she runs the car from the curb at home around a corner and into the garage alone, backing and turning it, then entering a narrow door. She has run the car around the track at the fair grounds with no one in it but herself. She starts and stops it, although her feet scarcely reach the floor and her strength is barely enough to move the levers.

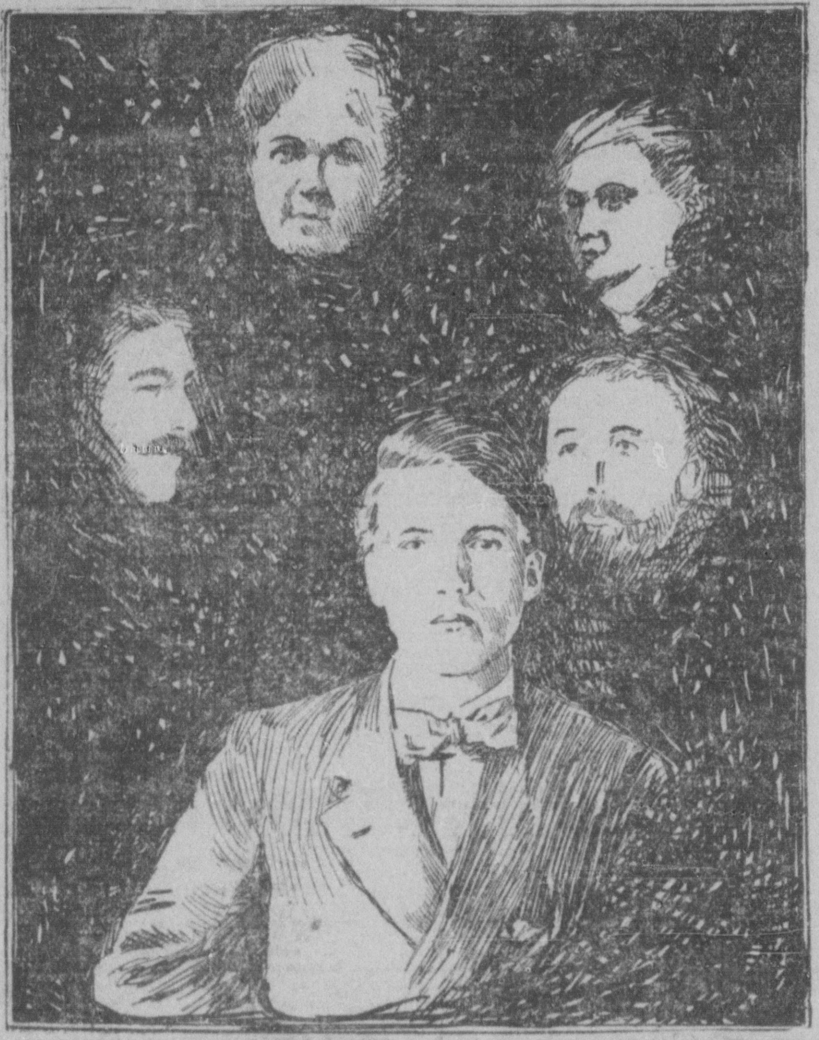
THE ADVENTURES OF A SKEPTIC IN A MECCA FOR GHOSTS.

WHAT AN OFFICER OF THE AMERICAN PSYCHICAL RESEARCH SOCIETY SAW AND HEARD AT "LILY DALE."

LIKE Diogenes, looking for an honest man, Hereward Carrington, scientist, author and councilor of the American Society for Psychical Research, recently journeyed to Lily Dale, the great mecca of the Spiritualists, seeking an honest medium. This enterprising native of the Isle of Jersey ran nearly the whole gamut of psychical phenomena of spiritualism. The other day he recounted his interesting experiences in the spook's rendezvous.

"Lily Dale, the best and most aristocratic Spritualist camp in the states, is about sixty miles below Buffalo," he said. "It consists of a railway station, a couple of hotels, a few farmhouses and the Spiritualists' 'assembly grounds,' of some ten acres, containing the 'Hotel of the Assembly,' a library, several small halls and a number of cottages rented by the season to visitors and mediums. In those of the mediums one room is converted into a seance chamber, the windows being boarded up, so that all sunshine and fresh air are effectually shut out. Spiritualists annually visit the camp to exchange views about 'the cause' and to personally test the numerous mediums, who charge from $1 to $2 for sittings, which are given by the more popular at the rate of from twelve to eighteen a day, not counting their 'seances' held in the evenings. Prof. James H. Hyslop, the active head and founder of our society, sent me to the camp because he wanted to learn the average level of its scientific spirit, which I gauged at the end of a strenuous fortnight.



HEREWARD CARRINGTON, AN OFFICER OF THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF PSYCHICAL RESEARCH, IN A "SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPH."

"Arriving at Lily Dale I found everything in full blast. I registered at the hotel as 'Charles Henderson' and that evening took a stroll past the mediums' dark and shadowy cottages, whence issued anything but melodious sounds.

SAT FOR SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPH.

"Sunday I sat for my 'spirit photograph' at the cottage of one 'A. Norman.' First he 'took' me on his veranda, then invited me indoors that he might photograph on the same plate any spirits which might be hovering about me. However, I noticed that the plateholder was reversed before the second exposure and I don't believe he wasted a second plate. The room was darkened because, as he explained, 'the spirits would materialize their own light,' which required about a minute's exposure. After refusing to let me see the negatives developed or bring my own plates next time he bowed me out, and after much delay I obtained the photograph. One of the 'spirit' faces surrounding me is that of a woman; the other three are men—one wearing a turban."

"Do you recognize any of them?" was asked.

"None at all. If you examine the print closely you will see unmistakable signs of fraudulent manipulation. The woman's face—that at the top—although faint, is the worst 'give away' of them all. It shows plainly the 'screen' of the photo-engraver. Yes, it is undoubtedly the copy of part of a half tone cut from a magazine or newspaper.

"Perhaps my most interesting experience was with Pierre L. O. A. Keeler of Washington, the most celebrated slate-writing medium of this country. For twenty-eight years he has been holding sittings in Washington, and for twenty-three seasons has held forth at Lily Dale, taking away about $3,000 on each occasion. I let him run things to suit himself at the first sitting, where, while obtaining clews to his modus operandi, I played the part of a green, unobservant spectator.

"I disguised myself with smoked glasses, insinuating defective sight, and signed my question slips with my assumed name, 'Charles Henderson.' We sat at opposite sides of a table, whose cloth hung down a foot on his side and about half as far on mine. At this first sitting I discovered Keeler's methods to my satisfaction, and at the second obtained conclusive proof of them. So I will describe only the latter, which was largely a repetition of the first.

"On paper that cracked a great deal I brought four messages to purely fictitious persons. I folded them into small squares, numbered them one, two, three and four, and placed them in the center of the table between Keeler and me. Keeler asked me to clean five slates that lay on the table, and while I was doing so he handled the folded message slips. I distinctly saw him take one, then another, substituting two of his own, folded to the same size and palmed in his right hand. A few seconds later I heard the crackle of my slips and, glancing up, saw his eyes riveted upon something in his lap. After stacking the cleaned slates I waited and again heard the crackling, then the faint sound of a soft pencil scratching upon a slate.

"He then feigned a sort of trance state for about fifteen minutes, during most of which both his hands were below the table top, where I could not see them, for he had placed me in a low rocker. Several times, while he rocked to and fro in this pretended state of 'control,' I heard the slates, which I knew to be in his lap, knock against the table. In the course of this procedure he, with pretended abstraction, again caressed my folded messages with his fingers and deftly palmed the two which he had not yet seen, substituting, of course, two others in their stead. Then I again heard my messages being opened and refolded and heard the scratching of the slate pencil upon one of the duplicate slates in his lap.

CARELESS NUMBERING PROVED FRAUD.

"All this time, while apparently playing idly with a pencil and rubber band, I had managed to turn over the folded messages upon the table. I discovered that, whereas I had numbered mine one, two, three and four, those before me were, respectively, one, one, three and four. So there were two ones and no two. Keeler had wrongly numbered one of his counterfeit slips—the extra No. 1—and this slip clinched my proof of his fraud. But after my slips had been skillfully returned to the table—except one, which Keeler tore up, saying 'That doesn't belong here'—he wrote this note, to his 'spirit guide: 'George Christy! Bring these people! K.' Christy was a popular minstrel in his day, and since his death has been claimed by Keeler as the latter's 'control.' Announcing that a spirit wanted to write, Keeler now took from the table two of the slates which I had cleaned and offered them to me to examine. I noted their peculiarities and deeply pressed my thumb nail into the soft frame of each. The medium then broke off a bit of slate pencil, placed it between them and bound them with a rubber band. Then, to distract my attention, he told me to read a certain slip upon the table, and while I feigned to be so engaged I distinctly saw him make a lightning flash movement that dipped the slates beneath the table top. A second later, when brought again into full view, his hands still apparently held the slates which I had given him. But in that second he had cleverly substituted two duplicate slates upon which he had been writing on his lap, and which he had fastened together with a duplicate rubber band.

"The two slates on which the spirit writing was to appear—in reality, upon which it already was—were now held by us over the table, and the sound of writing was clearly audible. I now watched Keeler's wrists and saw the tendons working, so I knew that he was producing this sound, probably with his finger nail, as scratches on the blank side of one of the slates afterward indicated. Next the slates were separated and found covered with writing. I took care to appropriate the bit of pencil between them, and later when Prof. Hyslop and I examined, under the microscope, its sharp, broken edges at both ends we found them quite unworn in the slightest degree. The writing on the slate was in red and yellow as well as white, although only this one bit of ordinary slate pencil had been placed between."

"Was anything interesting revealed by the messages?"

"I had addressed my messages to fictitious persons, whose names, besides my own pseudonym, were written on the respective slips. One of these fictitious friends misspelled his own name. Answers to my first two questions were studiously avoided. My third, addressed to my fictitious 'Sister Victoria,' had asked about a fictitious Miss 'Young,' whom in her answer she erroneously called 'Brown'—'I remember Zilda Brown,' her message said. The only sister I ever had died when a few days old, long before my birth, and there is no one living who ever saw her.

"The most conclusive proof that these phenomena were fraudulent was the absence of the thumb nail marks from the slates bearing the messages. I found them in other ways entirely different from those I had handed Keeler. The frame of one had a defect in the joining and a portion of the binding wire was visible. A third sitting was refused me by Keeler, who at this second sitting evidently 'smelled a rat.'"

A TELLTALE PUFF OF WIND.

"Did you see any 'materializations' at the camp?"

"Yes, I attended three such seances. At one, given by 'Joseph Johnson,' the cabinet was a light framework on three sides of which a black material was held by brass tacks with heads on the outside.

"This arrangement fit in the doorway between two rooms and the side facing the sitters was hung with a curtain. The doors of both rooms were previously locked, and the light, regulated from the cabinet, was lowered. The keys to the doors were then placed in the hands of a sitter, but the keyholes were not sealed and there was nothing to prevent confederates from using duplicate keys to enter the room back of the cabinet.

"That this was undoubtedly done was indicated by a light which I once saw in the back room when the curtains were parted, and by a strong draught of air which several times, after the rooms were darkened, caused the cabinet curtain to sway uniformly. Indeed, the draught through these rooms where all doors and windows were supposed to be shut was once so noticeable that one sitter complained about it. The 'spirits' which issued from the cabinet after being admitted into the rear room, evidently entered the cabinet by simply pulling out several loose tacks in the back and lifting the black covering. A girl about 17, alleging to be my sister, who, as I said, died when a few days' old, came to me and the manager held my hands while I talked to her.

"At another 'materializing seance' held by 'Mrs. Moss of Chicago' the cabinet was an inclosed corner of the wall; but there was a door practically touching the curtain on the right. After the lamp was extinguished there was a hunt for a table on which to stand it. The door was then opened while we were still in darkness and I am convinced that a young girl slipped through into the cabinet while the medium and manager screened her from our view. The medium finally entered the cabinet and we were asked to examine the door to see that it could not be opened during the seance—this after the confederate had stepped in. The medium, using cockney English, explained that it was 'himpossible' to build a cabinet that wasn't near some door or window and hoped that she wouldn't be 'haccused of wishin' to deceive.' The spirits appearing between the curtains gave no information beyond that supplied by the sittters. These forms, all clothed alike, in a long, white robe, were either the smuggled confederate or the medium herself, wearing different masks. The mature spirits, one and all, left off their h's where they were wanted aand put them on where they didn't belong.

"A girl wearing a prosphorescent belt danced around the room. This was the girl smuggled in through the door. I suggeested that my 'sister Eva' appear, and although I never had a sister Eva she came with a hooked nose, bright black eyes and a fringe of false hair over her forehead.

"As 'Starlight,' the spook of the phosphorescent belt, pranced about the room some one remarked that her spirit toes never tripped over any one's feet. 'No, if you all kept your feet flat, as you were told, I never would,' she replied, and I remembered that we had been so instructed by the manager. I recognized this little girl, who also played the part of the junior spooks, as one whom I had seen at a previous seance given by another medium."

SHORT STORIES FROM KANSAS.

IN 1860 John Speer, one of Jim Lane's most loyal supporters, purchased the Lawrence Republican. Five hundred dollars was needed to keep the paper going until after the coming senatorial election and neither Lane nor Speer had a dollar. Lane went to Leavenworth to raise the money. It was Christmas night at 12 o'clock when Lane rapped on Judge Delahay's door in Leavenworth. Delahay put his head out the window, but the wind blew so hard and the snow flew so thickly that he could see nothing. So he said, "Who's there and what do you want such a night as this?"

"Lane; come down," was the answer. Delahay came down and let Lane in with the inquiry, "Are you crazy, Lane?"

"No," said Lane. "Speer has bought the Lawrence Republican."

"That is good. But what of it?"

"He wants $500 to keep the hands from striking till the paper can earn something."

"Now, I know you're crazy. Neither of us has a dollar," replied Delahay.

"But I have a plan, Mark," said Lane. "You know these Fort Leavenworth officers never bought a bushel of corn from a Free State man. You go to the fort and tell them that your cousin, Abraham Lincoln, wants you to go to Springfield, and you may have to go to Washington, and you want to sell them $500 worth of corn. Ham Johnson has the corn. Tell them that, Mark, and you will think that every mule around the fort is braying for corn."

Delahay went to the fort, told the story, and got a check for $500 before he told them where to find the corn. Delahay was in fact a distant cousin of Lincoln's by marriage and Lincoln was entertained by him when he visited Kansas.

During the troublesome times of the Kansas-Missouri war a whole souled Irishman, E. C. K. Garvey, ran a hotel in Topeka. Lane got in debt to him and Garvey, being hard pressed for means, came down to Lawrence determined that Lane should pay him. The two met on Massachusetts street. Garvey was angry and roughly demanded his money. It was a cold, shivery day and just then Lane's little boy appeared in his bare feet. Lane replied to Garvey good naturedly, saying, "Mr. Garvey, do you suppose that if I had $2 in the world, I would pay it to you before I bought that boy a pair of shoes?" Garvey put his hand into his pocket, handed Lane $2 and demanded that he take it, saying, "If I get worse off than you are, pay me when you can."

Soon after Lane became prominent in the territorial affairs of Kansas he began to be challenged by pro-slavery champions to fight them, either alone or with picked bodies of men. At Nebraska City in 1856 he received a challenge from two aged citizens to name two or ten of his followers who would meet the two champions of slavery alone, or those two with eight men whom they would choose, and fight a duel at short range with muskets, rifles, shotguns or revolvers. Lane refused, but issued a challenge himself directed at bigger game. Lane's challenge was addressed to Colonel A. W. Doniphan and A. G. Boone, a son of Daniel Boone, but was really intended for David R. Atchison, acting Vice President of the United States, to decide by wager of battle the great contest in Kansas. There were to be 100 men on each side, Lane and Atchison to be of the number and the fight was to be in the presence of twelve members of each house of Congress. The challenge was not accepted, but Lane was not bothered with any more challenges.

"'STABLISHIN' THE INSTITUTION."

In the territorial days of Kansas a Virginian by the name of Bourne brought a half dozen slaves and located on Washington creek in Douglas county. Among the negroes was one called Tom, in whom the master confided as an overseer. Bourne began to see the destiny of slavery in Kansas and consulted Tom about "going back to Old Virvinia." Bourne had come Kansas to help establish slavery and Tom took him at his teaching and replied: "No, Massa Bourne. I come to Kansas to 'stablish de institution, an' Ise gwain to see it fro." And he did. In a couple of weeks Tom and the rest of the slaves took the underground route.

"Old Kickapoo" is a "busted" cannon. It stands in one of the corridors of the state capitol at Topeka among other relics of Kansas history. "Old Kickapoo" was a maker of history. The old gun was in the Mexican war, and it has been asserted that it was one of the ten pieces captured by Colonel A. W. Doniphan at the battle of Sacramento, fifteen miles from Chihuahua, February 28, 1847. But that "Old Kickapoo" was one of the trophies of the battle of Sacramento probably is a fiction. In 1848 the cannon was given by the military authorities at Santa Fe, N. M., to a party in charge of a train returning from New Mexico to the Missouri river. It was intended to serve as a protection against the Comanche Indians. No fight with the Comanches occurred, but by the time the train reached the Arkansas river so many of the animals had been stampeded by the Indians that it became necessary to abandon the gun together with a portion of the outfit. Later that year another train, in charge of one John Brown of Weston, Mo., brought the cannon to Fort Leavenworth and offered it to the military authorities there. But no officer would give Brown a satisfactory receipt for it, so he took it to Weston. Brown donated it to the city, and for years it was used in saluting steamboats on their arrival in celebrating Independence day and the anniversary of the battle of New Orleans.

In the spring of 1856 the gun was stolen from the city of Weston as a part of the programme of preparation which resulted in the sack of Lawrence. It was taken across the river and put in possession of the Kickapoo Rangers, a military organization of pro-slavery men, whose rendezvous was the little town of Kickapoo, on the Kansas side of the Missouri river a few miles above Fort Leavenworth. The Kickapoo Rangers brought the gun with them on the expedition against Lawrence and on May 21, 1856, it was sighted on the Free State hotel in the city of Lawrence, by David R. Atchison, then a senator of the United States from Missouri and the acting Vice President. The cannon thenceforth was known as "Old Kickapoo." After the sacking of Lawrence the gun was taken back to Kickapoo and remained there until 1858, when the Free State men of Leavenworth marched up and seized it. They kept it concealed for a time, but later exhibited it openly at Leavenworth as a trophy. In celebrating the sinking of the shaft of the first coal mine at Leavenworth the gun burst and soon afterwards was given into the care of the State Historical society.

Another famous old gun is "Old Sacramento," preserved at Lawrence. After Colonel Doniphan, with his trophies of the conquest of Northern Mexico, joined the army of General Wool, the latter presented to Colonel Doniphan the ten cannon he had captured. Returning after the war, Colonel Doniphan brought the guns home to Missouri by the way of the Gulf of Mexico, New Orleans and the Missouri river and presented them to the state of Missouri. One or more of these pieces was kept at an arsenal established at Liberty, Mo., the home of Colonel Doniphan. When the Kansas-Missouri war broke out over the question of slavery zealous Missourians pillaged the arsenal and amongst other munitions of war for the subjugation of Kansas brought the cannon. One was captured by the Free State men from the Missourians and ever since has been known as "Old Sacramento."

HIS BUSINESS AT HOME.

This Arkansas Soldier's Vacation a Surprise to "Jim" Lane.

"Jim" Lane was one of those bluff, frank spirits who had a way of lecturing people on their shortcomings in an effort to make 'em be good," said Major A. W. Mullins, a Civil war veteran and a lawyer, of Linn county, Missouri. "He was sort of an aide to Curtis and Blunt in the campaign against Price, and was pretty much in evidence all the time. I was in General Pleasanton's brigade, which was assigned to the advance when Price turned back and fought to save his army. Across the Blue river we ran across an old Arkansas soldier, a man of about 70, who was fagged out and had been left behind by his retreating comrades. But he still held to his gun and scowled at the enemy. Jim Lane spied him and rode up.

"'Old man, you had better be at home,' he said. 'What's the good working like a nigger, tramping in the hot sun, getting nothing much to eat and getting shot at? Wouldn't you rather be at home with your old wife, sitting quietly down to tea? Then you'd lie down at night in a warm, comfortable bed, with no drums making you get up before you want to; nobody standing over you with a sword and telling you to charge the enemy. Come, now, don't you think it would be better for you and the government and all your friends if you were back home at your business?'

"He paused as a dry grin spread across the scarred face of the old soldier of the South.

"'Guess you're right, Yank,' he said. 'My business has gone to the devil since I been soljerin'.'

"'Of course it has,' returned Lane, 'and you've been foolishly throwing away a good time and the fruits of honest toil. At what are you engaged down home?'

"Again the dry grin flittered across the butternut's features.

"'I runs a moonshine still,' said the honest toiler."

The Little Things.

From the Chicago Record-Herald.

"You shouldn't," the doctor advised, "permit yourself to be worried by little things."

"Good heavens," replied the patient, "I wouldn't if I could help it, but how is a man who has married a widow with six children going to get around it?"

It Isn't Worth Much.

WHEN A SLIPPER WON A HEART.

A KANSAS CITY ROMANCE OF THE '50'S

DANCING was the most popular of diversions in Kansas City in that early day. The music for these gatherings was furnished by negro fiddlers. One named Ryle had a great reputation for "calling off" the quadrille, which was the favorite dance. The schottishe held second place in favor, and occasionally a waltz was danced. Not exactly the three-step waltz, and yet not the two-step of to-day, but much like the latter.

Supper at a party meant all the word implies—a good, hot meal. The dances lasted nearly all night, and after taking the young ladies home the beaux spent the remaining small hours going from house to house serenading them.

In the '50s the town had begun to spread a little—to move back a little way from the river bluff, and there were a few scattering houses on Wyandotte street and Broadway. Father Donnelly had built his log cabin church at Eleventh street and Broadway, and some of his followers settled near. When these visited their friends on the river they went through a path made in "gimson" weeds higher than their heads—diagonally across what to-day would be Baltimore avenue, Delaware, Main and Walnut streets to the bluff.

A DANCE OF THE EARLY '50s.

DANCES ON A STEAMBOAT.

The Chambers, a fine boat plying between Kansas City and St. Louis, was owned by Captain Gillham, and always was tied up here for the winter. Its saloon was a favorite place for dances, taking the place of a large hall which the town lacked. The first church fair ever held in Kansas City was held on this boat.

A livery stable was owned and run by a man named Hedges, who had only one large moving van or picnic wagon, and as this did not nearly accommodate all the young people, every time a dance was given the young men had to interview a Mr. Dofflemeyer, who had a large private conveyance. He was most obliging, but as he never trusted his horses to be driven by other than himself, he imposed the rule on the young people that they must be ready to return home at 12 o'clock sharp.

LIZZIE FERGUSON'S DANCING SLIPPER, CAPTURED BY H. S. MILLET, WHO AFTERWARD CAPTURED THE WEARER.

A dainty little slipper worn in Kansas City in 1853 is treasured by its owner, Mrs. H. S. Millet, then Miss Lizzie Ferguson, for it played an all-important part in her girlhood romance. This slipper was worn for a season to all the events of the young people who constituted the society of the place at that early day.

The slipper's first appearance was at a party given in Kansas City, Kas., and attended by practically all the young people on the Missouri side of the river. Those recalled who were at that party were the Lyons girls, "Syp," Rose and Laura, Helen Bolt, Jennie Woods, Maria McCartney, Mary Jewell, Mary Gilham, Charlie Vincent, H. S. Millett, "Sans" Bouton, D. K. Abell, Jem Kennedy, Dr. George Tindall, Will Gilham, George Ferguson, Arthur Harrison, Frank Foster, the Jarboe brothers and Captain and Mrs. R. T. Van Horn.

The party drove to the Kaw, where the ferry waited to take them across. The ferry was for foot passengers only and they stood while crossing. It was a large flatboat, pulled from side to side of the river by ropes manipulated by strong negroes. The dance was given in the hotel in Wyandotte. Little thought was given to the flight of time and it was 1 o'clock before anyone thought of the passing hours. Too late for the ferry and too late for Mr. Dofflemeyer, the driver of the "carry-all," so the guests remained all night, returning in the morning, a sorry sight in their party clothes.

WHEN A SLIPPER WON A HEART.

But the night on which this dainty little slipper—it is a No. 13, ye modern belle take note—became famous was in the winter of '53, when Colonel E. M. McGee gave his celebrated party. It was the grandest event which had been given in Kansas City up to that time and the invitations were extended to families for miles around.

Supper was served on the long porch, which was canvased in, an unheard of thing then. A supper of quail, hot biscuit, potatoes, steaming coffee and a substantial dessert were served by colored boys.

On this night, after the dance, Miss Lizzie Ferguson and her young sister Laura were awakened by serenaders. They were up instantly, for the serenaders always demanded that some token be thrown to them from the window. A hurried search of the room revealed nothing appropriate to offer, until Laura espied her sister's gloves lying on a table. She proposed that she toss one of them out. Great was the protest; gloves were rare treasures in those days and not to be treated so lightly even in such a cause.

After further search Laura seized the slipper—set with its mate and peeping from under the bed—and not waiting to be denied, she threw it into the eager, waiting crowd of young men below. A scramble ensued—good nights were sung, and the serenaders departed.

Much questioning upon its owner's part failed to locate the lost slipper. Shortly after this, young Millet went to Colorado on a business enterprise. Frequent letters passed between him and Miss Lizzie, and in 1861 he returned to Kansas City to embark in business and to claim his bride. One day, a short time after the wedding, with wifely care, Mrs. Millet was unpacking her husband's trunk and came upon a tiny bundle securely and neatly tied. With natural curiosity she untied the bundle and out fell the little slipper.

THE KINGDOM RAN ITSELF

FOR FIVE DAYS ENGLAND WAS WITHOUT A GOVERNMENT.

Following the Recent Resignation of a Prime Minister, the King Ruled Alone, and He Was Out of the Country.

During the five or six days that elapsed between the resignation of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman as prime minister of England and the appointment of Mr. Asquith as his successor, Great Britain was practically without a government. The king ruled alone without a ministry, and he was out of the country enjoying himself at Biarritz. To him Mr. Asquith journeyed, to "kiss hands" and receive the appointment to the highest office in the land, under the crown, leaving the country, meanwhile, to run itself, which, by the way, it did very comfortably.

KING EDWARD AS A BUSINESS MAN, PERFORMING HIS DAILY LABOR OF SIGNING 150 OR MORE DOCUMENTS.

Many experts in that mighty mystery, the British constitution, maintain that the king should have gone home at once, and that Mr. Asquith should not have been required to go to him. They contend that he has violated the constitution. The fact that there is no means of determining that question has called attention to the strange lack of any hard and fast agreement between the king and his subjects as to what are his duties. Nowhere is it sent down in black and white just what British sovereigns may and may not do. Such momentous things are left to work out themselves, and somehow they do work out all right.

WHAT A KING MAY NOT DO.

Stupendous as are the powers of the crown—at least in theory—they are subject to some curious limitations and restrictions. None is more striking than that which forbids the king openly to dabble in politics. He is about the only man in the kingdom who is denied the privilege of expressing an opinion on legislative questions. It might add something to the enjoyment which the average American visitor derives from witnessing a debate in the House of Commons did he know that the permission which is granted him would be denied to the king. His Majesty is not allowed, even as a spectator merely, to be present at the discussions of his "faithful commons." Although the law assumes his presence at every session to sanction legislation, he cannot appear in Parliament except when he comes in state to the House of Lords for the exercise of his prerogative of opening or proroguing Parliament. His presence on any other occasion would be regarded as an unconstitutional attempt to influence legislation by overawing the assembly. As Prince of Wales, the king, from a seat in the peers' gallery, often listened to debates in the lower house, but something awful would happen should he venture even to put his head inside the door now.

The king is popularly supposed to have a great deal to do with international politics and undoubtedly he wields a deal of influence in that field, especially when it comes to fixing up entente cordiales and that sort of thing, but all the same he has to play the game as his masters in such matters—the ministry—may direct. He may write as freely as he pleases to foreign sovereigns on family matters, the condition of the weather or any of the ordinary topics of epistolary correspondence, but if he ventures to discuss affairs of state with them he must submit his letters to the prime minister or the foreign secretary and they edit them to suit their own ideas. As a matter of fact, nearly all letters of this kind are written for the king at the foreign office and he merely signs them.

Whatever influence the king exercises in politics must be sub rosa. He must not participate openly in the game. He must not be found out. It is a breach of order in both houses of Parliament to even mention the name of the sovereign with a view to affecting the course of legislation. In 1783 a resolution was adopted by the House of Commons declaring it to be a "high crime and misdemeanor" and various other evil things to report any "Opinion or pretended opinion of His Majesty on any matter before Parliament for the purpose of influencing votes. There is no record of anybody ever having been punished for it, though. Nowadays the worst that befalls the offender is a snubbing administered by Lord Knollys.

MUST REMAIN A PROTESTANT.

Under penalty of forfeiting the crown the king is expressly prohibited from doing two things in which freedom of choice is permitted the meanest of his subjects. He must not marry a "papist" or turn Roman Catholic himself. The bill of rights, passed in 1689 by the first Parliament after the revolution, was explicit on these points. According to its provisions the sovereign who should offend in either particular thereby deprives himself of all "regal power, authority or jurisdiction," and all of his subjects are "absolved of their allegiance." The crown passes to his nearest legal and Protestant heir just "as though he were naturally dead."

Nowadays the king reigns, but he must not govern. Nor, though the constitution confers on him almost unlimited powers would the slightest interference with the business of governing be tolerated. Occasionally exceeding the legal speed limit when in a hurry to get somewhere on his motor car is about the only one of his prerogatives which Edward VII avails himself. His chief business as a king consists in signing a lot of documents the vast majority of which he never even reads. He signs on an average 150 a day—considerably over 60,000 a year. It must be a source of great satisfaction to him that he has to sign only one of the long string of names that have been conferred on him. If he had to put them all down his job would be a hard one.

"Crown Princes" Were Decent About It.

From the New York Morning Telegraph.

Major Burke tells a very amusing story of Buffalo Bill's first visit to London in 1887. London—as all Londoners will remember—went wild over the Wild West show. Royal visits were of frequent occurrence, and a deal of etiquette was mastered by the Americans who were brought into contact with the Royal Highnesses and the rest of the paraphernalia.

There was a royal box, of course. The Duke and Duchess of Teck came to the Wild West show one day, and the manager assigned them to the royal box. No sooner had that majestic lady seated herself than the manager rushed up to Burke and said:

"Major, here's a nice to do. A bunch of crown princes has just got off at Earl's court. They have social precedence of all duchesses. So you, Burke, had better go and chase the duchess out of that box and put the royal princes in."

"I'm darned if I do," said the major.

"But etiquette, the etiquette of European courts," screamed the manager.

At this moment the "bunch of crown princes," several handsome and good-humored young fellows, came along. They were shown to a box next the Duchess of Teck's. They went in and were enjoying the show.

Enter Major Burke.

He bowed. They bowed.

"Gentlemen," said he, "it would appear that to put you into a box not the royal box is a breach of etiquette. Well, it may be in your countries, but it isn't in ours. The etiquette in our country is ladies first of all. I've done the best I can for you."

The crown princes just shook hands warmly with the major. They saw the force of his logic.

THE AGE OF ACHIEVEMENT.

When the Effective, Moving, Vitalizing Work of the World Is Done.

From W. A. N. Dorland's "What the World Might Have Missed" in the May Century.

A distinguished citizen of the world, a man of extreme culture and erudition, whose achievements and literary contributions have incalculably enriched the storehouse of knowledge, not long ago remarked in a notable address: "Take the sum of human achievement, in action, in science, in art, in literature; subtract the work of the men above forty, and while we should miss great treasures, even priceless treasures, we would practically be where we are to-day. It is difficult to name a great and far-reaching conquest of the mind which has not been given to the world by a man on whose back the sun was still shining. The effective, moving, vitalizing work of the world is done between the ages of 25 and 40."

No more genial and kindly disposed person exists than Prof. Osler, the originator of these views. Love for his fellow-man and intense sympathy are his striking characteristics. Only the most honest belief prompts every utterance of his pen. Statements from such a source, however startling or distasteful to the average reader, command an earnest perusal, a close and searching investigation—but not a blind acceptance.

The sweeping and iconoclastic statement of the brilliant savant at first sight would seem to discount temperament, experience, accumulated learning, judgment, discretion, maturity—all that go to make the intellectual granite and marble of the impressive and commanding man of middle age. Impulse, initiative, adventure, rise to the acme of desirability, and are the golden virtues to be cultivated and apotheosized. Only fifteen years of mental effort, and the climax is reached! Then begins the inevitable descent to oblivion and decay. Again, it would seem to indicate that all these virtues, desirable enough in their place and time, are strictly and irrevocably limited to a certain period of the human development. Beyond this epochal dead line they cannot be found, save in monumental exceptions which are the wonder and perplexity of the hidebound scientist.

Does history warrant or corroborate such a conclusion? Most assuredly not, and doubtless it was far from the intention of the writer of the opening paragraph even to intimate as much. The record book of the world is replete with the opportunities and successes of age and experience. As some one has said: "The golden thread of youth is carried to a much later period of life now than it was in former years." An Indian, chided for being 60, replied that the sixties contain all the wisdom and experience of the twenties, thirties, forties and fifties. Yes, and some of the initiative, also. The patriarch of the Exodus, when an impulsive and immature man of 40, deeming the hour had struck, took the initiative in his own hands, blundered, through a misconception of the times, and, because of his rash and inopportune murder of the Egyptian brawler, was compelled to flee the land. For forty years he was immured in the wilderness of Midian, buffeted by wind and tempest, exiled from human companionship, gnawed at by conflicting mental emotions, there to learn the secret of self-control, and through protracted communion with nature to acquire the massiveness and robustness of character that were essential for his true work at 80.

Earnings of English Lawyers.

From the London Globe.

In the Law List are the names of 10,000 barristers. How many are practicing members of the profession? Sir Robert Finlay once put the number as low as 2,000, and nobody has ever placed it higher than 3,000. It is tolerably safe, then, to say that there are 2,500 members of the bar who, to quote Sir Robert Finlay, "either get work, or are putting themselves in the way of getting it." Sir William Robson, in his speech at the meeting of the Barristers' Benevolent association, recalled, with apparent approval, a calculation made by a magazine writer, that the total income of the bar is $3,900,000 a year. If this calculation be correct, the average earnings of the 2,500 practicing members of the bar amount to $1,575. The calculation is not very comforting to forensic fledglings when the huge incomes earned by such advocates as Mr. Rufus Isaacs and Mr. Balfour Browne are allowed for.

Mathematical.

"Are you going to make an example of that grafter?" said one statesman.

"He's worse than an example now," answered the other. "He's a problem."

Motor Cars and Motorists

ARRANGEMENTS have been completed for the annual endurance run of the Automobile club, to be held May 16. The runs and tours committee, headed by Carl J. Simons, mapped out the route last week, making a personal trip over the course. There are to be two classes of entries. The first class will be composed of cars which are expected to cover this route:

Leave Kansas City by way of Southwest boulevard, thence to Merriam, Shawnee, Zarah, Monticello, Eudora, Lawrence; thence south past Vinland, through Baldwin to Ottawa; return to Kansas City by way of Wellsville, Gardner, Olathe and Martin City.

The second class cars are to run to Lawrence, returning by the same route.

The speedometer on the car used by the committee in covering the longer course registered 145 miles for the round trip. Notes were made of road conditions, landmarks, railway crossings, etc., so that each contestant may know just how to travel. The committee covered the route in an Oldsmobile in exactly seven ane one-half hours running time. Those in the party were: W. G. Whitcomb, W. G. Coumbe, Don Q. Cole and Carl J. Simons.

A copy of the rules to govern the run will be mailed to each member of the club within a few days. It is expected that a large number of cars will be entered. The entrance fee is set at $2. The committee is preparing a map of the route, which will be supplied to all contestants. A pilot car will scatter confetti along the way and especially at all turns.

The men members of the Automobile club are trying to interest the women members in a contest for electric cars. About twelve women have memberships in the club.

Grading work on the Hickman Mills-Lee's Summit road is proceeding rapidly. This road should be completed by midsummer. The road to Hickman Mills by way of Swope park has been resurfaced. Swope parkway from Forty-seventh street to Swope park is nearly completed. This new and picturesque drive will be opened within a few days.

These motorists were elected to membership in the Automobile club last week: T. J. Templer, F. E. Faulk, C. H. Barber, L. C. Shellabarger, E. O. Bragg, W. F. Langley, A. L. Davis, H. Holzhauer, Frank F. Brumback, G. W. Cunningham, Lloyd Weber, C. L. Taylor, M. C. Nolan, Dr. T. S. Blakesley.

The Automobile club has not yet determined upon a site for its country clubhouse. The committee having the matter in charge has several sites under consideration. A plan has been proposed but not decided upon to form a holding company to buy the property and lease it at a fair rate of interest to the club. It is the opinion of the directors of the club—the site being well chosen—that the property will prove to be a safe and profitable investment. The membership of the club now is 196 and the patronage of the clubhouse should be sufficient to make the proposition at least self-sustaining.

Members of the Automobile club are to spend to-day at the W. A. Rule farm, south of Dodson, by invitation of Mr. Rule. Arrangements have been made by Mr. Rule to entertain all the motorists who make the trip.

E. R. Thomas, jr., of the Thomas Motor Car company of Detroit, was in the city last Thursday.

L. R. Bolles bought a Moon touring car of Reichter brothers last week.

"The accounts of accidents resulting from collisions where trolley cars and other vehicles have crashed into motor cars that have unexpectedly changed their course, have become so frequent and the fatalities so numerous that the mere assumption of carelessness on the part of the chauffeur does not appear to be a satisfactory explanation. It is not always possible for drivers of motor cars to be aware of the approach of rapidly moving vehicles coming from behind, in time to avoid accidents," Motor World says, "and anything that will help in giving them the opportunity of knowing exact traffic conditions at all times is of extreme importance to those who are interested in the development of motor cars.

"An arrangement of the control which will permit the placing of the chauffeur's seat on the left side of the car, instead of on the right, as is now the almost universal practice, should be given the serious consideration of designers, especially those who are interested in the development of the type known as town cars. That the control should be at either the left or right hand is a matter of little moment, but that the chauffeur's seat should be in a position where he would have every advantage for driving is of prime importance.

"When the chauffeur is seated on the right side he is at a great disadvantage in learning if a vehicle is overtaking him on his left—as required by the traffic regulations—at the moment when he is about to turn to the left, looking behind him on the right a large section of the street is hidden from him by his car. To have a clear view he must stand up and look over the back, or if the design of his car prevents that, he must leave his seat and look behind from the left. A turn to the right does not require any of these precautions. Vehicles are not supposed to pass him on that side, and there is no occasion for extreme caution when changing his course in that direction.

"The convenience of the passenger in a runabout, or in the front seat of a touring car, is another reason for the left drive. It obviates the necessity of walking around the car, frequently through mud and slush. The argument that is sometimes advanced that shifting of levers would be unhandy to a driver, possesses little merit. A very little experience will suffice to make such an arrangement entirely practical.

"It is fair to assume that chauffeurs realize that eternal vigilance is the price of safety, and that, generally speaking, all reasonable precautions are used to avoid collisions. The careful chauffeur is, and the careless one should be, constantly on the alert, and any arrangement that tends to assist in the avoidance of accidents and the convenience of owners, is a long step in a right direction. Control from the left seat is a step of the sort."

By unscrewing the valve which is provided in front end of muffler in some cars, the exhaust opening will be increased, thus decreasing the back pressure and also heat, increasing the speed of the car noticeably, which will be convenient in case of long runs, but should be closed again when used around the city.

The satisfactory outcome of the Briarcliff race, with eighteen cars out of twenty-two running at the finish, has done a great deal to open up the spring markets. Sales of cars in all the Eastern territory are reported to have increased since the race and inquiries are numerous. Recent announcement of special time trials at a mile and kilometer on Long Island June 5, probably under the auspices of the Long Island club, have given a stimulus to racing in and about New York. Other track meets and hill-climbs are scheduled for early dates. There are also rumors of twenty-four hour races to be held in the near future. No settlement of the Vanderbilt race question has yet been arrived at. Harvey Granger and A. W. Solomon, both of Savannah club, have been in New York in conference with W. K. Vanderbilt and the A. A. A. officials, but the outcome of the deliberations has not yet been announced. That there will be a decision within a week as to the location of the race seems probable.

Dr. Jabez Jackson purchased a Knox touring car last week. The Studebaker company delivered an electric car to Mrs. Bessie McMurry.

The Woodward Auto company is planning a public demonstration to be held at the garage of the company next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Iced Coffee.

Make two quarts of strong, black coffee, sweeten to taste. Put this liquid into a pitcher that can be literally packed in ice so that the coffee will be ice cold when ready to serve. Serve in small glasses with a heaping tablespoon of vanilla ice cream on top. If ice cream cannot be procured, then use a heaping spoon of ice cold whipped cream. Ice cream is preferable, however.

Priscilla asked of her beau;
And Alden blushed to either ear
And said, so fair Priscilla could hear,
"I thought I'd wait for you, my dear,
It's leap year, don't you know?"

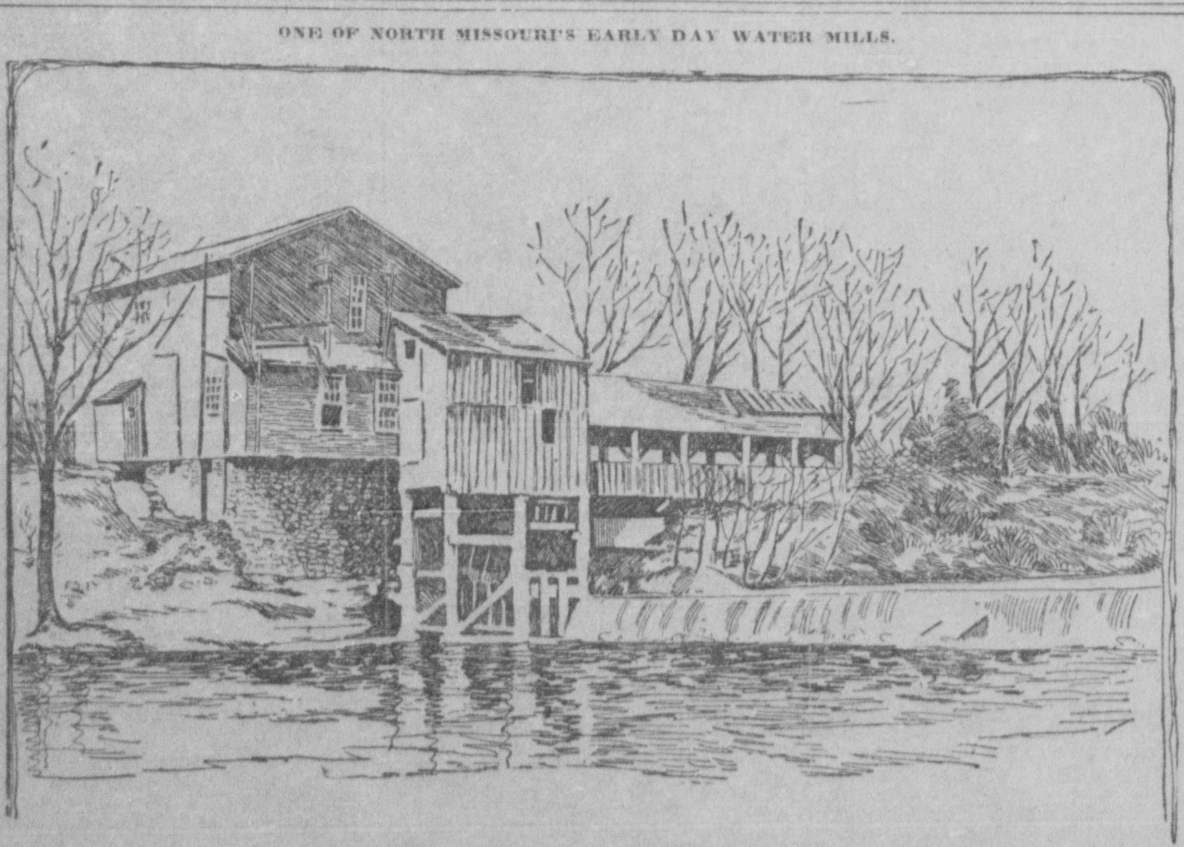
ONE OF NORTH MISSOURI'S EARLY DAY WATER MILLS.



A civil engineer remarked recently that one of Missouri's lesser rivers, the Chariton, could be made, by means of turbines, to furnish power for the transmission of electricity to the towns of all the counties through which it passes. There would be no danger of "straining" the river, no matter how many plants were constructed; the lower wheels could "grind with the water that had passed" as easily as the initial one, way up in Iowa.

The old Frenchman's stream isn't much of a river to those who live on the Missouri or the Mississippi, but there is water in it the year round and it is generally moving with considerable force. The pioneer millers found ample power to keep their big overshot wheels moving. That the output of ground meal was ridiculously small as compared with what the great mills of to-day do, was not so much the fault of the power as of the primitive machinery for grinding.

The era of the water mill in Missouri followed close upon the moccasined heels of the retreating red man. The mills were not very numerous at first, and each one had to serve a wide territory.

In the boom days of old Florida, Monroe county, in the earlyy '30s, there were five water mills on the north and south fork of Salt river. Florida, which is situated on a hill almost large enough to be called a mountain, was known as the "head waters of navigation." These streams are not larger than the Chariton river, yet it was the hopeful dream of the settlers that they could easily be made navigable for steamboats down to St. Louis, and Florida was to be the great distributing point for Northern Missouri.

In describing the old village, which is referred to as "Napoleon," in "Gilded Age," Colonel Sellers uses this language to Jeff Thompson's surveying corps:

"You haven't looked about any yet, gentlemen? It's in the rough yet, in the rough. Those buildings will have to come down. That's the place for the public square, courthouse, hotels, churches, jails—all that sort of thing. About where we stand, the depot. Down yonder the business streets running to the wharves. The university up there, on rising ground; sightly place—see the river for miles. Only forty-nine miles to the Missouri. You see what it is, placid, steady, no current to interfere with navigation; wants widening in places and dredging; dredge out the harbor and raise a levee in front of the town. Look at all this country! Not another building within ten miles! No other navigable stream! Lay of the land points right here. Napoleon won't know itself in a year!"

The water mills referred to were busy places in Florida's active infancy. People came from a radius within seventy-five miles to have their grain ground there, and took back home stores purchased from the merchants. For years the Hickman flour, made at two of these mills, was the most noted brand in the Western market, and had an extensive sale in St. Louis and throughout the state.

Peerless Superiority
Has been demonstrated to the complete satisfaction of the buyers of large motor cars all over the country. New York and Boston buyers, the most critical in the country, have bought TWENTY PER CENT more PEERLESS cars than of any other make of large cars. The car previously leading the sales of large cars in these two cities is still the same good car as always but PEERLESS superiority of design, construction, riding properties and noiselessness have forced the nearest competitor to the rear.
The POPE-HARTFORD
Still maintains its position as the "ACKNOWLEDGED CHAMPION OF HILL CLIMBERS." It is at the head of the list of medium priced, medium-weight cars. It ran the course at the Fort George hill climb faster than any other $3,000 and under, car covered the course. The POPE-HARTFORD is as great in its class as the PEERLESS is in the large car class.
Both of these factories are almost closed out of 1908 models. But few more deliveries can be made.
The Pope-Waverley Electrics
are maintaing their 1907 record in Kansas City. They are still the same noiseless little vehicles that they were when they first made their appearance here. Listen to the others go sitive noiseless gear. The WAV- greasy chain drive but a perfect, poby. The WAVERLEY has no noisy, ERLEY VICTORIA PHAETON is the most perfect model electric for Kansas City service. It has the largest battery for the weight driven. Its cost for current and upkeep is the least per mile.

Music and Musicians

Jasper County's Music Festival This Week

ALL Southwest Missouri seemingly is interested in the festival of music to be given Wednesday and Thursday in Joplin's new auditorium. The festival is the first big affair of its kind that Jasper county has ever undertaken. Joplin, Carthage and Webb City united in the common cause and the result will be three programmes worthy of larger cities. The Chicago Symphony orchestra, which now has sixty-five members, with Adolph Rosenbecker as conductor, aided by a fine group of soloists and Carl Busch as conductor general, will give Southwest Missouri concerts the like of which that prosperous section of Missouri has not known. The music for the two days will be as follows:

WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 6.

"Tannhauser" overture .... Wagner
The Chicago Symphony orchestra.
Violin solo, "Symphony Espagnole" ...... Lalo
Miss Rhetia Hesselberg.
"Wedding," symphony .... Goldmark
Orchestra.
"The Crusaders" .... Neils Gade
Chorus, orchestra and soloists, Mrs. Gannon, Mr. Miller and Mr. Middleton; Carl Busch, conductor.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Vorspiel to "Lohengrin" .... Wagner
Chicago Symphony orchestra.
Violin concerto .... Mendelssohn
Jan Van Oordt.
"Liebestod" from "Tristan and Isolde" .. Wagner
Mme. Norwood and orchestra.
"Old Folks at Home" .... Carl Busch
Transcribed for string orchestra.
"Dance of Sylphs" .... Berlioz
Hungarian dance .... Berlioz
Orchestra.
'Cello solo, Symphonic variations .... Boellman

Dramatic overture, "1812" .... Tschaikowsky
Orchestra.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Miss Rosine Morris.
"Song of the Rhine Daughters" ...... Wagner
Orchestra.
"The Four Winds" .... Carl Busch
Chorus, orchestra and soloists, Mrs. Clarke-Wilson and Mr. Miller; Carl Busch, conductor.

The programmes have several works new to the West, among them being Goldmark's "Wedding" symphony, the Saint-Saens piano concerto and Carl Busch's cantata, "The Four Winds," which won the $500 prize offered by Strawbridge & Clothier in Philadelphia. "The Four Winds" was sung for the first time in Philadelphia recently and enthusiastically received. Mrs. Wilson, who will have the soprano solos in the cantata next Thursday night, sang the same part for the performance in Philadelphia. Mrs. Wilson is among the first of American concert singers. She has appeared in nearly every state in the union and with practically all of the big orchestras and choral societies.

Mme. Adelaide Norwood, another of the soloists for Thursday, was a leading principal several seasons in the Savage English grand opera company, an organization first known as the Castle Square company. Her repertoire embraces more than 100 light and grand operas. Mrs. Cannon, contralto; Mr. Miller and Mr. Middleton are vocalists of established reputation. They have been on tour to the Pacific coast and Northwest states with the Chicago symphony orchestra, of which Jan Van Oordt is concert master and Franz Wagner the solo 'cellist.

Miss Rhetia Hesselberg is a pupil of the late Joseph Jachim and the celebrated Halir, and a credit to both, says Mr. Busch. Miss Rosine Morris ranks high among Western musicians.

The Jasper county festival is under the auspices of an association organized for the purpose last fall by W. L. Calhoun and W. F. McElroy. The association now has 240 members and twenty-seven directors, with these officers: President, Guy H. Elmore; vice president, Mrs. W. J. Sewall; secretary, W. L. Calhoun; treasurer, O. N. Waltz. It is expected that each year hereafter the month of May will witness a big music festival in Joplin or Carthage.

The May Festival in Lawrence, Kas.

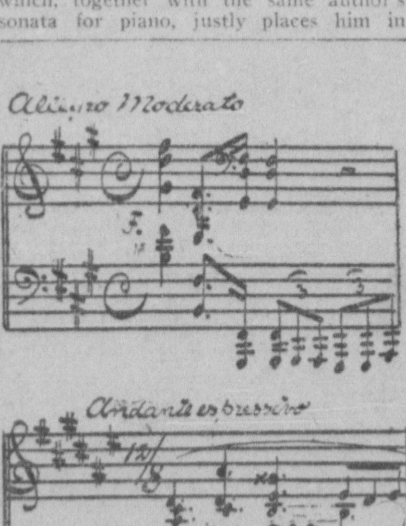
From Joplin, Mo., the Chicago Symphony orchestra and most of the soloists will go to Lawrence, Kas., for that city's fifth May music festival, under the direction of Charles S. Skillon, dean of the school of fine arts of the Kansas State university. This year's concerts will be held within the new auditorium of the Robinson gymnasium of the state university. The opening programme Friday will be given by David Bispham, the eminent baritone. The second programme will introduce the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Adolph Rosenbecker, conductor. The feature of this programme will be the first public performance of Carl Preyer's new concert piece for piano and orchestra. Mr. Preyer is the head of the piano department of the Kansas State university.

The third event will be a concert performance of Gounod's opera "Faust" by seven soloists, chorus of 100 voices, organ and orchestra. The part of Faust will be sung by John Miller, Marguerite by Mrs. Genevieve Clark Wilson, Martha by Mrs. Rose Gannon, Mephistopheles by Arthur Middleton, bass; Siebel by Mrs. Blanche Lyons, one of the best known sopranos in Kansas; Valentine by Prof. C. Edward Hubach, director of the voice department of the university, and Wagner by John Ise, a senior student in the schol of fine arts.

Carl Preyer, modest and capable, is doing good work in the cause of music at the university. He is a fine pianist and in recent years has won serious critical attention as a composer. His concert piece, opus 49, for piano and orchestra, is a vigorous and scholarly work, brilliant in parts and rising at times to great power. After study of the concerto recently Carl Busch said:

CARL PREYER, PIANIST AND COMPOSER.

"In this concert piece Carl Preyer has added a highly artistic work to his already large and valuable list of piano compositions. There is a poetic freshness and originality about the composition that will appeal to any American, and a close examination of the score shows workmanship of a high order. That the purely pianistic side is well looked after goes without saying; at the same time none but a pianist of high musical attainments and reliable technical equipment can hope to do justice to this work, which, together with the same author's sonata for piano, justly places him in the front rank of our native composers. Hurrah for Kansas!"



THE PRINCIPAL THEMES OF CARL PREYER'S CONCERTO FOR PIANO AND ORCHESTRA.

A Song Recital by Miss Allee Barbee.

Miss Allee Barbee, soprano soloist for the music festival to be given soon in Hutchinson, Kas., and whose services have been had in concert in numerous cities and towns both east and west and who has been favored with complimentary notices in Chicago newspapers, will sing in the auditorium of the Conservatory, corner of Eleventh and Oak streets, next Thursday evening. Francois Boucher, violinist, and Mrs. Jennie Schultz, pianist, will assist. Miss Barbee is soloist for the Second Christian Science church, corner of Thirty-first streeet and Troost avenue. She will sing in recital in Chicago and Indianapolis the week following her concert here. Her programme Thursday evening will include several arias in French, German and Italian, among them "Adieu Forets" from Tschaikowsky's "Jeanne d'Arc" and "Io Son Titania" from the opera, "Mignon," by Ambroise Thomas, "Gretchen Am Spinnrade," by Schubert, and groups of German, French and English songs, several of which were written for her.

MISS ALLEE BARBEE, SOPRANO.

Miss Katherine Rule, pianist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rule, will be the assisting soloist in a song recital to be given next Friday evening, in the auditorium of the Owen building, 1026 Walnut street, by the following pupils of Gottleib Federlein: Mrs. J. R. Manning, Mrs. J. J. Meacham, Mrs. K. Cates, Mrs. M. L. High and Mr. R. R. Stebbins. As might be expected of Mr. Federlein, the programme is excellent, both in selection and arrangement. Miss Rule will play a Bach solfeggio, a nocturne by Chopin and Mendelssohn's spring song.

A concert for the benefit of the Danish Lutheran church in Kansas City, Kas., will be given Saturday evening, May 30, in the New Casino, under the direction of Carl Busch.

Miss Minnie Merine, organist, assisted by Mrs. George P. Snyder, soprano, and Miss Ella Chase Perry, reader, will give the first entertainment in the new Grace Presbyterian church, 811 Benton boulevard, Friday evening. Among other numbers Miss Merine will play the first movement from Guilmant's sonata in D minor, Batiste's "Elevation," and a transcription of Wagner's "Song to the Evening Star."

Miss Millie Steacy, long a pupil of Miss Gertrude Graham, will sing her first recital in Spalding auditorium to-morrow night. Mrs. H. P. Guy will be the accompanist and Miss Gladys Miller, pupil of Alfred Hubach, the solo pianist. Miss Steacy's voice is soprano of fine quality and admirably used. Her programme is exceedingly well chosen, among the composers represented being Gluck, Haydn, Purcell, Mozart, Massenet, MacDowell, Mason, Jessie Lee Gaynor and Frank Schunert, with a group of old ballads from Ireland and Wales.

Francois Boucher will play a violin recital Thursday evening, May 14, in the Conservatory auditorium, corner Eleventh and Oak streets. Miss Cecille Boucher, soprano, will assist. Tickets on sale at the music stores.

The Kansas City Conservatory of Music and Art announces a very interesting student recital for next Friday evening, May 8. Among those who will participate are: Miss Laura Small, Miss Ethel Hunter and Dale Hartman, violinists; Miss Anna McOwen and Miss Edith Friedberg, vocalists, and Miss Lillian Commer, pianist. Laura Small has the distinction of being the youngest and smallest student in the conservatory. She is 7 years old. Tickets for this recital may be had at the office of the conservatory, free of charge.

The Glee club of Baker university at Baldwin, Kas., will sing a typical college programme in Grand Avenue M. E. church to-morrow evening. The club is one of the best of its kind in the West. Mr. Foster, Mr. Bailey, Mr. French, Mr. Cox and Mr. Fast will be the soloists.

Miss Sarah Ellen Barnes, who has been known here as pianist several years, will play her first public recital Tuesday evening, May 19, in the Academy of Music. A chorus of young women will share in the programme.

The Armonia Musical club will meet in the home of Mrs. Sue Drogmund next Friday.

Edward Kreiser will play an organ recital in the First M. E. church of Fort Scott, Kas., Thursday night.

The Philharmonic club, under the direction of Carl Busch, will sing Tuesday evening in the church of the Latter Day Saints in Independence, Mo.

Miss Jean Buel Jones of Columbus, O., granddaughter of John Jones, a former resident of Kansas City, has written a song entitled "Eden," which was a feature of a recital given recently in Akron, O., by Cecil Fanning of Columbus, to whom the song is dedicated. The Akron Beacon-Journal praised the song highly.

Pupils of Miss Myrtle Randolph, assisted by Crosby Hopps, tenor, and the La Tosca trio, will play a recital programme in Spalding auditorium next Thursday evening. Pupils of Miss Randolph who will participate are Miss Abbie Phillips, Miss Alma Schubert, Miss Edith O'Neil, Miss Lottie Ewing and Miss Amalia Prior.

With a programme of nineteen numbers, Mme. Johanna Gadski responded to twenty-three encores in her annual New York recital in Carnegie hall. This recital, therefore, is one of the wonders of the New York season, for the city has been surfeited with music. Carnegie hall was filled to its capacity and the enthusiasm was of a sort to substantiate the claim that Gadski is one of the world's greatest prima donnas.

WORTHY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.

Now and Then New York Detective Force Has Made a Good Capture.

From the Broadway Magazine.

The keeper of a cheap New York saloon was one morning found dead in his barroom. He was living upstairs over the bar, and had been shot at the foot of the stairs. The bullet that killed him was from some pistol which measured caliber .41.

"Derringer," said Inspector McLaughlin.

The saloon was poor; no burglar of position would think of attacking it. Entrance had been forced by means of a chisel and not a professional's jimmy. The footprints in the rear yard, where the thieves had made their attack, showed worn and ragged shoes.

"Gang work!" decided Inspector McLaughlin, taking in these features. "The job was done by some of the tough lads of the neighborhood.'

Being tough, and of the sort to whom a dollar is important, the inspector believed that, while the murderer was certain to dispose of the derringer, he wouldn't throw it away, but would sell it. A roundup of the nearby pawnshops began. A derringer was found; the pawnbroker had bought it of one McGloin the morning after the murder.

The rest was not difficult. McGloin a well known tough, infested with his gang a groggery on West Twenty-seventh street. Inspector McLaughlin dressed up one of his men as a tough. Seeking the Twenty-seventh street resort, the disguised one drifted into McGloin's acquaintance, meeting that malefactor on the common ground of beer. While the disguised one and McGloin were hobnobbing, another of Inspector McLaughlin's men walked soberly into the groggery and hung up a placard offering $1,000 reward for the discovery of the saloon keeper's murderer. This was calculated to make McGloin talk, without arousing his suspicions. He did talk. Not only did he talk, but—the beer mounting—he bragged, the disguised one drinking in every word with his beer. As a finale McGloin went to Sing Sing and the chair, and the red muster of New York murderers—quite a formidable phalanx—had been diminished by one.

Sherlock Holmes himself couldn't have worked more rapidly, more wisely, or more directly to his man. If the tale lack the interest of those deep ones told by Sir Conan Doyle, it is due to the short simplicity of the McGloin trail, born of the short simplicity of the McGloin wit.

A Sandfordite Baptism.

From the Kennebec Journal.

There was a grand baptism over at Shiloh Sunday and in the ice cold and turbulent waters of the Androscoggin, with the wind blowing a gale, twenty-five Sanfordites were baptized by Elder Jewell. The scene was unusual because many of those immersed in the icy stream were children from 6 to 16 years of age and old ladies from 65 to 78 years. The scene is described as follows: Androscoggin river was swollen to freshet pitch and icy cold and very muddy. On the bank, shivering in the keen wind, was a large company of Shilohites with a sprinkling of the "world's people." Elder Jewell officiated. Different than the usual services the Sanford elder repeats a long prayer as each candidate for the rite stands in the water occupying, it seemed, five minutes. In the company Sunday were many little girls, some not over 6 years old. As they walked in and as the cold water came around their bodies they cried out with cold and fright, hesitated until the elder took them by the arm and led them into the water. In several cases Mr. Jewell asked them their names, they were apparently too frightened to speak, and their parents on the bank shouted their names to the elder. As they went under the water they gasped with mouths open and appeared to have swallowed a large quantity of the muddy water. When taken from the water they shrieked, and shouted and swung their arms and nearly went into hysterics. The young women and men seemed little affected, and especially one young woman stood with the water up to her shoulders without a sign of distress. Three old ladies were baptized, one about 65 and one about 70, but when the elder led a tottering old lady into the stream and said, "Sister Elizabeth Johnson, 78 years," a shout went up from the Shilohites as if a victory had been won. And each candidate stayed through the whole service in nearly frozen garments, in all nearly an hour, and seemed to enjoy it.

A Prince as a Farmer.

From the New York Times.

Prince Eric of Denmark, the third son of Prince Waldemar and nephew of Queen Alexandra, is to have a practical education in agriculture, and, so far from following the rule invariably accepted by royal princes of entering the navy or army, he intends to become a farmer. Although only 17, the prince holds very decided views about his own country. He is convinced that agriculture is Denmark's staple industry, and that her future success and prosperity are dependent on it. The prince proposes to make himself a master of all the arts and crafts of husbandry, and is to be inducted in the most thorough and practical manner on a big estate some distance from Copenhagen.

The Game and the Place.

From the New York Sun.

That New York is the center of life seems proved if we consider conjointly two recent and expert opinions.

(1) "Life," says the gray sage of Wantage, owner of Orby, "is a gamble."

(2) "New York," says Canon Chase, "is the gambling center."

THESE ARE QUEER HOMES

FREAK HABITATIONS TO BE SEEN IN KANSAS CITY.

One Man Lives in a Scale Shed—A Carpenter's Half House—A Hodge-Podge Structure of Odds and Ends—A Triangular Residence.

"If that baby tumbles out of the door it will find itself over in the next precinct."

This is a common remark in homes that perch in dizzy disarray along the West bluffs. In former years scores of hovels hung like wasps' nests against the sides of the precipitous cliffs which divide "uptown" from the West bottoms. The march of progress, the need of more elbow room for business purposes and for parks has removed many of the huts which at one time formed the most picturesque remembrance of the casual traveler who passed through Kansas City via the Union depot and took away with him visions of the black specks against the giant hill which cut off from his view the real Kansas City beyond the heights.

Lincoln street was the only highway from Twelfth street north to the West bottoms and is yet, as a matter of fact. Before West Terrace park became a reality squatters and renters alike built their little homes on the steep sides of the big hill. It was a motley neighborhood. The greatest trouble was in numbering the houses.

Built as they were in nondescript fashion, without regard to the points of the compass, there was much confusion over the house numbers. Every resident of the locality had to give Lincoln street as his or her place of residence, though some of the houses sat scores of yards from that neck-breaking thoroughfare.

Those who lived in the neighborhood were forced to take halves and quarters for their numbers. The serious problem came when houses were built on a line at right angles with Lincoln street. There was but one thing to do—effect a compromise; and this frequently could not be done without resorting to eighths.

A story is told of one man in that neighborhood who was anxious to vote. He appeared at an intermediate registration of voters. One of the judges, in order to prevent the need of those already registered standing in line until they reached the registration officials told all the men in line that those who registered at the last general registration did not need to register again.

"I'll have to disagree with you, neighbor," said a Lincoln street resident. "I fill all them requirements, but I gotta register."

"How is that?" asked the judge.

"Well, the Smiths built right up ahead of me and changed the number on my house."

A HOME IN A HACK.

The grind of mere life in finding places to dwell is not alone an affliction to the West bluffers. Scattered over the city are a number of queer abodes. The North end has many odd habitations. For years an eccentric old fellow has lived in an abandoned hack near the foot of Walnut street. A stove pipe pushed its length into the air at a nonchalant angle out of a broken glass in the ancient "window wagon," while the homesteader himself spent hours puffing a pipe seated in deep content on the step of the vehicle.

The old hack is gone now, but within a block of the queer home a former railroad flagman had set up his household goods in an old scale house. Existence in a place not more than eight feet square might strike others than flat dwellers as almost impossible, but the old fellow finds room for flowers and a cat.

Out near Twenty-fourth street and Lister avenue, a carpenter foreman has a half-house. An interesting story is connected with the house, for it was built in a day. One Sunday morning two years ago, the foreman owned a bare lot facing Lister avenue. By nightfall he had a home. The men under him had volunteered for the day and the piles of lumber scattered about the lot grew rapidly into half a house. The following week the house owner spent several hours each evening in shingling it.

Some day, when taxes for sewers and other things and monthly installments on the lot and the lumber are not so pressing, another volunteer group will assemble and put up the other half of the house.

Near Dixon station on the Kansas City-Independence electric line, there are two habitations, which have aroused the interest of passengers on the line. One is a hut in the construction of which nothing new, even to nails, was used. Refuse lumber, refuse glass, tarpaper that had seen other service, sidings which had experienced fire, boards which had served for fences and the varied uses of man, all go to make up one of the strangest dwellings in or near Kansas City.

The marterials used vary no more than do their colors. In one window there is a pane of clear glass and one of frosted glass, while another has sorry cracks in it. The roof is of tar paper, which straggles over the eaves and flaps disconsolately in the wind. Yet ambition blazes in the heart of the owner of this humble cot, for he has started the construction of a fence, the boards of which show that in comparison, the wood in the house is triple X stuff.

A TRIANGULAR HOUSE AND LOT.

Not far from the hodge-podge home is another built on a triangular lot. The tracks of the electric line and two intersecting streets from the triangle. It was up to the owner of the lot to build his home in accord with the lot. He arose bravely to the occasion. The back of the house is wide and pretentious looking. As the car proceeds the passengers can see that the home is wedge-shaped, tapering to a width of several feet in front.

But the troubles of the owner did not end with his home. He built a fence about the house. The fence follows the lines of the lot. Never did man have so easy a task in placing his front gate. Not more than a hop, skip and a jump from the front of the house is the apex of the triangle. By all the rules of mathematics and uniformity the gate belonged there and was put there. The only drawback to perfect serenity is that a small triangle of unused ground is left outside the gate, the entrance, perforce, having to be at least two feet wide.

Living in a houseboat the year around, when one's home is icebound or lashed about by winds which whip the water and howl through the trees, does not seem luxurious, but the occupant of one of them on the Blue river near the Kansas City-Independence electric line power house does not seem to mind. In fact, he is so far from being disturbed by adverse conditions as to light his home with electricity, a wire having been run from the electric line to the houseboat. The boat is anchored to the bank, and except in times of very high water or unusually low water, access to it is easy.

Old Verse Revised.

There was a crooked man who rode a crooked mile,
Spoke on a crooked stump with a crooked sort of smile;
But the people wouldn't believe that he had a crooked nature,
So they sent another crook to a crooked legislature.

Money-Making Ways of Using Want Ads

To Interest Capital

Most of the great conveniences we enjoy today were invented by poor men who struggled for years to get Capital interested. Perhaps you have something of merit appealing to what the people want. One of the surest ways to interest Capital is for you to write your story simply, in a few words, and insert on our Classified page under the heading "Business Chances." Business men with money read this column. And, Mr. Business Man, perhaps you have money to invest in meritorious enterprises. Keep a daily "tab" on the "Business Chances" column. Many men have made fortunes this way. The chance of others is your chance. The chance to "get in touch" costs but a few pennies.

EXAMPLES

YOUNG MAN HAS INVENTED VALUABLE, TIME-saving device for individual lighting of the home. Experts pronounce success. Want the help and financial assistance of business men. Gladly demonstrate practicalness of invention. Address K L 46, this office.

HAVE $5,000 WHICH I WILL PLACE IN A PROFitable, sound manufacturing enterprise, paying dividends. Or, will invest with others, double this amount in enlarging good business. Address with full particulars, D G 26, this office.

All of our little Want Ads are meritorious BUSINESS CHANCES—for EVERYBODY. For ALL classes, for all purses, for all grades of brains, the Classified columns of this paper offer SOMETHING—of profit. This means YOU who read this. Turn to our Classified page—and LEARN.

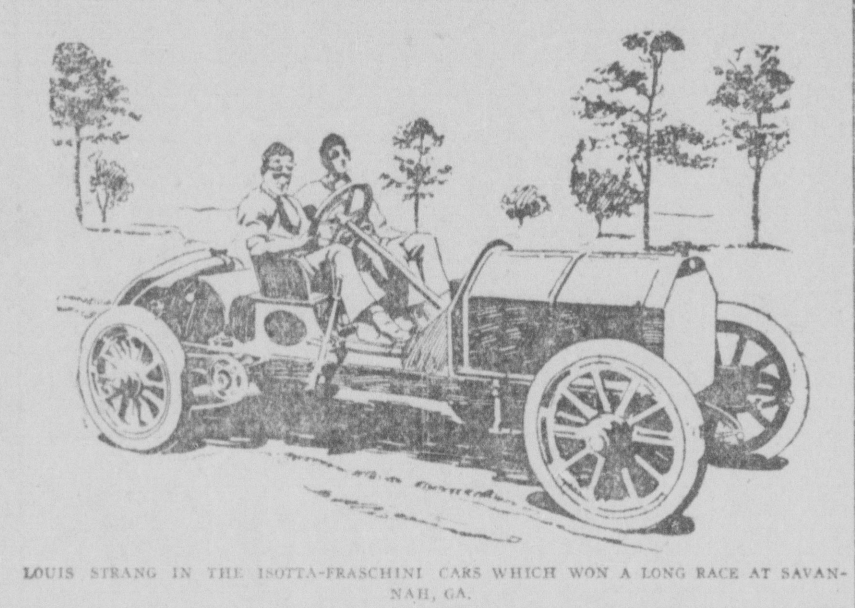
WHAT TO CARRY IN TOURING

MANY MOTOR CARS INCUMBERED BY TOO MUCH EQUIPMENT.

A Glass Front and Two Reserve Tires Among the Essentials for the Road—The Army Car Has Been Sent to New York.

Many Kansas City motorists are preparing for the touring season. The question of suitable equipment is one that requires considerable thought. It is possible to spend many hundreds of dollars for fittings. Some of these are indispensible to comfort and satisfaction on the road, while others are unnecessary and incumber the machine. Too often on vacation trips a bothersome quantity of stuff is carried, much of which is never used.

If the motor tourist desires simply to fit up his car with the attachments and devices that will add to the utility of the machine and to the comfort and safety of the passengers, there are certain things which it will be absolutely necessary to have. A comfortable top and glass front are indispensable. The top should have a waterproof protector. There should be a set of good shock absorbers to protect the springs from breakage when traveling over rough country and also to add to the comfort of the occupants. A dashboard speedometer—odometer is another necessity.



LOUIS STRANG IN THE ISOTTA-FRASCHINI CARS WHICH WON A LONG RACE AT SAVANNAH, GA.

Two new reserve tires should be taken. Flat treads are said to be best for the rear, but not for the front wheels, as they make steering rather difficult. Extra tires should be covered with waterproof casings. It is advisable also to carry two rear inner tubes and one front tube.

Harry B. Haines, in the Scientific American, tells of other things necessary on a tour of any considerable length:

> A pigskin repair kit cover will be found valuable in temporarily fixing a blownout casing. In the event of a puncture it is advisable to insert a new inner tube rather than to repair an old one, as it is almost impossible to make a satisfactory repair job on the road.
>
> Inner tubes for use in rear shoes should never be repaired with rubber patches cemented on. The heat caused by road friction melts these patches off. The only sure way is to have the tube vulcanized. Inner tubes should not be carried loose on a storage box, but should be put up in separate bags liberally sprinkled with French chalk, in order that they may not become chafed and so be rendered unfit for use.
>
> An experienced tourist is not ready to start until the car is equipped with a full set of tools, extra valves, valve springs, spark plugs and such small moving parts of the engine as are likely to wear quickly or break easily. Of course, this list will differ with each make of car. In machines that are chain driven, extra links of chain are carried in the toolbox. A jack, tire tools and full tire repair kit are of course, essential.
>
> It is best to have the car equipped with good headlights and a reliable generator or gas tank, as it sometimes becomes necessary to do night riding in a strange country. Even with good lamps it is never safe to drive faster than twenty miles an hour at night on roads with which one is not familiar, as danger can arise in an instant. The machine should always be kept under perfect control; half of the accidents that occur are due to careless driving.
>
> Among the miscellaneous items that are needed, and which come in very handy, are a collapsible gasoline bucket with chamois strainer, collapsible water bucket, ammeter and voltmeter for testing the batteries, small electric flashlight to examine the car at night in the event of accident, and a dash clock. The modern touring car, properly equipped, is capable of railroad speed, and will take a party safely across country, up hill and down, in rain or shine, with more pleasure than can be derived from any other method of transportation. The man who owns his automobile has his private car as luxurious as a Pullman, with all the roads of the country as his right-of-way and no schedule other than that fixed by his own fancy and convenience.
>
> Having selected a route that you wish to travel it is well to make out a time schedule and try to follow it, making due allowance in advance for delays en route and for the time that will be spent in viewing the scenery and points of interest. The tourist who really wants to see the country through which he is passing and to enjoy a sensible ride rather than a mad dash against time would do well to plan his schedule on the basis of covering twenty miles an hour—or less, if he does not have a high-powered car. This would be slow on the smooth, level roads, but where the country is rolling an average of twenty miles an hour is a good one, and to maintain it the car will be going at twenty-five and even thirty miles at many places. Besides, twenty miles is the legal limit in most states.

Packard touring cars were delivered to Frank Hagerman and P. D. Ridenour last week. Dr. Samuel B. Ayers received a Woods electric victoria and John W. Hoffman a Woods electric brougham. S. F. Amidon and J. E. Olvis bought Stevens-Duryea cars.

The Studebaker "army" car that made the remarkable run from New York to Fort Leavenworth has been shipped to New York where it will be exhibited in a motor car show beginning there April 2.

Henry A. Guettel, proprietor of the Palace Clothing company, drove his Smith car from Topeka to Kansas City last week. He said the roads are in fine condition, considering the earliness of the season.

It has become the fashion among some writers and not a few motorists to credit the farmer with a feeling of animosity toward the motor car. In the New York to Paris race some of the drivers complained that the "peasants," as they called them, charged exorbitant rates for the assistance rendered the snowbound machines. G. B. Sharpe, publicity manager for the Studebaker, said in a recent interview that his own experience with the Studebaker army dispatch car that made the run from New York to Fort Leavenworth, Kas., most of the way over the same route, would lead him to an entirely different conclusion regarding the farmer's attitude.

"The farmers helped us dig through snowdrifts and brought their horses out to assist us through drifted roads where ordinarily a farmer would not think of asking his horses to go," said Mr. Sharpe, "and, considering the service, I do not believe their charges were exorbitant. Furthermore, many of them exhibited an interest that was, to say the least, cheering to our tired drivers and crew. All along the line our drivers reported the same kind of treatment and nowhere were they more enthusiastically wecomed than in the great farming state of Kansas. I believe that almost invariably if the motorist will regard the farmer as a friend instead of an enemy and give him the treatment which is his due the farmer will be only too glad to meet the motorist on the same footing."

Tires should not be stored or left off any length of time unused in the direct rays of the sun or kept in dry, warm quarters. Under such conditions the rubber quickly loses its elasticity, becomes hard and soon develops innumerable little cracks. A continued exposure will make the best tire practically valueless in a few months.

Never allow your tires to stand in oil at the garage or elsewhere, and be particular to wipe off any oil which may drop on the tires at any time.

If the car is jacked up and supported on horses (which can be made very cheaply), it will add greatly to their life, as the tires are then bearing only the pressure of the air with which they are inflated. Whereas, when supporting the weight of the car, this weight, often several thousand pounds, is exerting a continual, unnecessary strain on the casing walls.

When using your car always keep the tires pumped up until there is no perceptible depression where the tire touches the floor when the car is without passengers. Imperfect inflation is responsible to a greater extent than perhaps anything else for "blowouts" and quick disintegration.

When the tread wears down so the fabric is exposed the tire should be immediately removed and sent to the factory for retreading. Otherwise the fabric will soon be destroyed and the tire permanently injured in consequence.

At a special meeting of the board of directors of the Automobile club held Thursday night it was determined to offer several standing rewards as follows:

One hundred dollars for the arrest and conviction of any person stealing a motor car belonging to any member of the club.

Ten dollars to $25, depending on the value of the article, for arrest and conviction of any person stealing any lamp, robe or any part of a motor car belonging to a member of the club.

Twenty-five dollars for conviction of any person cutting or maliciously injuring tires.

Ten dollars for conviction of any person throwing stones or other missiles at the occupants of any car belonging to a member of the club.

These new members were added to the roster of the Automobile club last week: F. P. Neal, George G. Wright, J. Sidney Smith, P. C. Rickey. These were elected associate members: F. W. Buffum, Louisiana, Mo., chairman of the good roads committee of the Missouri State Automobile association; Winfield Denton of Leavenworth, Kas., W. W. Guthrie, Atchison, Kas.

The committee on runs and tours of the Automobile club is planning a series of interesting events, which will be made public soon. There are many new cars to be tried out this season, the owners of which are anxious to put them to the test.

Here are two pleasant drives:

To Blue Springs—Go straight east from north side of Independence public square on the Spring Valley road about seven miles to within half mile of end of rock road, turn to right (south) on dirt road, which is usually in very good condition. Pass school house and church and continue south on main traveled road to Blue Springs.

To see a fine view of the Kaw valley from old Shawnee road—Southwest boulevard to Rosedale, to Rosedale avenue (half block of end of car line), turn to right and go up the hill to the old Shawnee road (recently resurfaced) on the summit. Pass the Sauer place and come back via Thirtieth street.

SAFEGUARDING JEWELS.

A Little Chamois Bag to Be Hung Around the Neck for Keeping Jewelry.

From the New York Times.

A small chamois bag to be hung about the neck under the bodice is absolutely necessary in traveling for the safe keeping of money and valuable jewelry. In plain chamois this bag has been in use for some time, but this year the chamois is most attractively incased in bright colored silk and in an embroidered linen cover that can be taken off without difficulty and washed.

Already the silk covered bags are to be purchased in all department stores, but if one chances to possess a chamois case that has proved in every way satisfactory a cover for it can easly be made. A piece of ribbon the width of the bag is doubled over into an envelope shape with a flap fastening with a thread eye or loop and pearl button—and the case is completed. The ribbon, of course, may be bordered with a narrow edging of lace or a band of feathered stitching, but is often left quite unadorned. A stripe or a flowered ribbon are both effective, but in a flowered ribbon a small pattern is necessary, so that the design may come in the center of both front and back of the case.

The embroidered linen and batiste bag coverings are extremely pretty. A thin China silk lining under the linen will hide the color of the chamois and show attractively through the white, especially if it is embroidered in an openwork design. A hemstitch or a narrow lace border will finish the lingerie case attractively.

The ribbon which fastens the bag about the neck should be stitched to the bag under the flap, so that there will be no danger of the case slipping off when the bag is opened. It would be well to sew the ends of the ribbon together under the bowknot or rosette so that the knot could not possibly open. Sometimes these jewel bags are worn on a small gold or silver chain, but ribbon securely fastened is quite as convenient to wear and really less liable to break or open.

MONUMENT OF ANCIENT ROME.

Fourteenth Century History of the Colossal Castle San Angelo.

From the New Orleans Times-Democrat.

ROME—The castle San Angelo is one of the most imposing monuments remaining of imperial Rome. It is built on the site of the gardens of Ournitia, on the bank of the Tiber not far from St. Peter's. It was designed as the mausoleum of Hadrian and on the very summit of the cupola is a colossal bronze statue of St. Michael, with outspread wings and floating draperies. A bridge over the Tiber at this place is called the Porte San d'Angelo and on either side are fantastic figures—sculptures of Bernini, strange and unreal but most picturesque in effect as a whole and as a part of the impressive panorama of the colossal castle. This is the bridge over which all visitors to St. Peter's pass. In the castles are dungeons and cells where prisoners, from popes, philosophers, artists and poets to political offenders, have been imprisoned and starved, strangled and assassinated. This gigantic fortress, as it seems, has served for tombs, prisons, palaces, chapels and halls of state, all of which are found within its walls. It was built of gigantic blocks of granite faced with Parian marble, but the marble has long since disappeared. In the Fourteenth century it was the possession of Giomanni Colonna. About this time Cola di Rienzi began his powerful crusade to the people by denouncing the nobles as oppressors, and in May of 1347 he was appointed tribune. One of Rienzi's first acts was to order Stefano Colonna to leave the city, whereupon Prince Colonna threatened to throw Rienzi from the windows of the capitol. The great bell rang, calling the people to arms and Colonna sought safety in flight from the infuriated populace. "But Rienzi's head was turned by his success," writes a chronicler of those tales. "He assumed the pomp of a sovereign. He distributed titles, surrounded himself with ceremonies and multiplied feasts and processions. Flattered by the submission of most of the Italian states to his authority his presumption and vanity increased as his prudence declined. Not satisfied with the plainness and simplicity which became him as the head of a republic a theatrical spirit possessed him and an insatiable love of show. He desired to be ennobled and to have the title of knight as well as tribune. To celebrate his installation as knight a splendid series of entertainments was arranged, to which all the ambassadors, nobles and strangers of distinction were invited. Toward evening he went to the Baptismal chapel of the Lateran. The porphyry vase in which, according to tradition, Constantine had bathed was filled with rosewater for him and he bathed in it. He was then clothed in a white garment and slept in the church. In the morning, clad in scarlet, he showed himself in the loggia to the people, and accompanied by many nobles and gentlemen he was endowed by the syndic of the city with sword, girdle and golden spurs, and afterward heard mass in the chapel. He then made an address, and pointing his sword to three points of the compass he exclaimed, 'This is mine, and this is mine, and this is mine.' The day ended with a magnificent banquet and from the nostrils of the bronze horse of Constantine wine flowed for the people."

It seems that the vanity and folly of Rienzi led him on to destruction. He appeared at a banquet in regal costume of gold and embroideries and Stefano Colonna said to him: "Are you not tribune? And should you not wear the modest dress of your equals rather than these pompous ornaments?" This reproach incited Rienzi to make a proclamation that the nobles had formed a conspiracy against the people. He issued orders for the execution of many princely heads, but later reversed this, pardoned all and appointed them to important offices of state. The Colonna faction did arise against him, however, and in this Castle San Angelo he intrenched himself and later he fled to Naples. Later he returned and was killed by a mob at the capitol on October 9, 1353, and his ashes are entombed in San Angelo. In this castle the Cenci family were all imprisoned and put to torture, and on September 11, 1599, on a vast scaffold erected over the Porte San d'Angelo, Lucusia, Beatrice and Bernardo were all executed. "The body of Beatrice was placed in a coffin covered with black velvet and gold and borne to the church of San Pietro in Montorio by Franciscan monks with great pomp and innumerable torches and entombed before the high altar." Cagliostro was once imprisoned in the Castle San Angelo.

On the Capitoline Hill is now a statue of Rienzi, placed on a lofty pedestal.

Richard Croker in Sahara Desert.

From the New York Herald.

Charles J. Glidden (Napier), of Boston, while touring through Egypt in the latter part of February met Richard Croker, the Tammany chieftain of former days, in Cairo. Mr. Croker expressed much interest in Mr. Glidden's tour of the world, and, upon his invitation, accompanied Mr. Glidden for a short trip over the Sahara desert. During the run Mr. Glidden left the wheel to take a snapshot of Mr. Croker in the car.

Mr. Glidden writes that the roads of Egypt are limited but good, the longest continuous drive being of sixty miles from a point on the desert east of Cairo through that city to the Pyramids. It was on this trip that Mr. Croker accompanied him. While in Egypt Mr. Glidden drove 640 miles, increasing his world's mileage to 43,007 in thirty-six countries. On March 1 Mr. Glidden, who is accompanied by Mrs. Glidden, entered Syria to tour the Holy Land.

The Matter of Safety is often overlooked by automobile designers and results are often serious and sometimes disastrous. The safety of operator and car should be given equal consideration.

No inferior material should enter into any part of an automobile. Every separate part is there for some purpose. It should answer that purpose without fail, always.

The danger of premature ignition should be guarded against. Loosened bolts and nuts are dangerous. In the every part is made of the best material, as the endurance tests have proven. One of the Rambler leading features is the automatic spark retarder, by means of which engaging the starting crank positively retards the spark, thus removing all danger from premature ignition.

In the Rambler loosened nuts and bolts are prevented by use of Rambler lock nuts, that positively cannot come loose, or by castellated nuts locked in place by cotter pins. These are, in themselves, but small things, but it is this attention to a multitude of minor matters that makes the Rambler "The Car of Steady Service."

That you may know the Rambler as you should, and judge it for yourself, we are going to send our factory expert to your city with the 1908 Rambler models.

Merely write us saying you would like to try the Rambler; the expert will call for you and give you a practical demonstration without placing you under any obligation to buy.

And you have thought that the expense of maintaining an electric automobile was greater than you could afford?

R. & L. BRAKES
"Just a Few Steps Ahead of all Others"

The brakes of an electric automobile are more important than the motor and batteries. They should be effective, convenient and reliable. They should be of at least two widely different types in order to provide for emergencies.

The R. & L. Has Three Brakes

A pair of expansion brakes in the wheels applied by foot pressure for emergency. A motor brake and an electric brake applied by carrying the controller handle backward. Our electric brake requires no physical exertion to apply and takes no energy from the batteries. It does not wear out and requires no adjustment. It is most efficient at the highest speed; it does not injure the motor and is absolutely guaranteed.

Let us demonstrate the good qualities of the R. & L.

Dear Sir:—In answer to your request for a letter stating what service I have gotten out of my car, will state that I bought the 1907 Twenty-Horse Power Mitchell Runabout in August, 1907, and have used it almost continuously since then, averaging something better than 800 miles a month, and I am still getting good service out of it. I have had no repairs except some very slight matters and very few adjustments.

If I had to buy another car, would ask nothing better than to be permitted to buy the same that I am now using. Do not know what I could do with anything better. Hope that you will have unlimited success in selling these cars. I remain, yours very truly,

That the Stevens-Duryea design has proven itself superior in every detail is the testimony of the host of Stevens-Duryea owners.

Our 2nd Annual Sale of AMERICAN Made Goods

Mitchells
THE STORE OF THE PEOPLE
AMERICAN MADE GOODS FOR THE PEOPLE OF THIS GREAT AMERICAN CITY

Just One Year Ago we held our first great sale of American Made Goods. To-morrow, Monday morning, May 4th, 1908, on a much larger and a grander scale, we start our "Second" Annual American Goods Sale and invite all Kansas City to attend.

This is an Annual Mitchell Event. Every year we pay tribute to American industries with a sale demonstrating the pre-eminence of America, particularly the American manufacturer, by showing the superior quality of American made goods, and the American workman by showing his superior skill in this great exposition and sale of American made goods.

The American People and Their Homes

Americans are an independent people, industrious, prosperous, home-loving, and naturally their homes, as they should be, are comfortable homes, well built, nicely furnished and well managed.

American Farms

American farms are the greatest farms in the world. They produce more and better grain, fruit and stock than farms in any other county in the world. The American Farmer is the most prosperous of all farmers—is it any wonder that America is the grandest country in the whole world?

American Workmen

Naturally intelligent, well educated, pre-eminently superior, skillful and industrious, and that is one of the principal reasons why "Made in America" stands for quality.

American Cities—Model Cities

American Factories model Factories. Model because they are modern. Model because they are fitted with the very latest and most improved modern machinery. That is another reason why American made goods are best.

Kansas City the great metropolis of this great Southwest. Kansas City the young giant of the West is one of the greatest cities to-day and the prospects for a still greater future are bright. Kansas Cityans, you are invited to attend this sale.
